French Save 40 Survivors Of Spanish Naval Battle

Loyalist Seamen Picked Up After Insurgents Sink Destroyer.

Rebels Follow Foes On Road to Madrid

Insurgents Bomb Bilbao Fifth Time as Basques Rout Anarchists.

By the Associated Press.

Marseille, Sept. 29.—The captain of the French steamer Koutoubia tonight wirelessed an account of the rescue of 40 men from the Spanish government destroyer Almirante Ferrandiz, shelled and sunk by the insurgent cruiser Canarias near Gibraltar.

The captain said he first heard the sound of the bombardment as his vessel was moving through the Straits of Gibraltar, and took the Koutoubia around a point of land and saw the two war vessels blazing away at each other.

"Suddenly," the French captain said, "flames spurted out of the Ferrandiz' sides while the Canarias continued shelling the enemy ship.

Permission to Rescue.

"By radio I asked the insurgent naval commander at Casa Blanca for permission to pick up the seamen of the Ferrandiz, which seemed on the point of sinking. This permission was granted and I then communicated with the Canarias.

"A seaplane took off from the deck of the insurgent warship and flew over the decks of the government vessel. Suddenly a violent explosion shook the Ferrandiz and she settled on her starboard side and started going down by the stern.

"Two boatloads of men put off from the Ferrandiz. They rowed rapidly away from the sinking ship. On the foredeck of the Ferrandiz I could make out through glasses a group of men standing. One by one they dived into the water.

"I sent out two lifeboats from my vessel commanded by my officers. They went as close to the sinking ship as they dared. They met men swimming through water filled with debris and the bodies of dead men.

"In the meantime I sent out two other boats which searched the sea until the wind began to whip up rough water. I then ordered back all boats. They brought aboard 40 men, including the captain of the Ferrandiz, who was a simple boatswain's mate. The chief engineer and the ship's surgeon were also among those rescued.

"For a long time I moved my ship around a large spot of oil marking the place where the Ferrandiz sank. Seeing no more survivors, I proceeded to Marseille.

"Of the rescued men all were wounded, 25 seriously. They were all burned or suffering shrapnel wounds. The back of one man was laid wide open. Our ship's surgeon performed 22 operations, and gave all the wounded anti-tetanus injections."

Rebels Regain Ground.

With Loyalist Forces at Olias, Spain, Sept. 29 (U.P.).—Rebels have regained all ground lost yesterday when loyalists counter-attacked in force and were steadily pushing back loyalists along the Madrid-Toledo highway tonight.

It was learned the rebels were preparing for a smashing offensive northeastward from Toledo, for the purpose of cutting the railway between Madrid and the Mediterranean ports of Valencia and Alicante.

Train Is Wrecked In Strike Dispute; 2 Killed, 2 Injured

Shreveport, La., Sept. 29 (U.P.).—Two men were killed and two scalded seriously in a train wreck today and a wooden bridge was burned as sabotage developed in a strike of trainmen of the Louisiana & Arkansas Railroad.

Passenger train No. 3, known as The Hustler, was sent hurtling through an open switch at Moores Station, four miles south of Winnfield, as it rounded a down-grade at 40 miles an hour.

H. N. Vaught, 39, of Roanoke, Va., the engineer, saw a man tinkering with a switch about 400 yards down the track ahead of the train, but it was too late to stop. He was struggling with the air brakes when he was hurtled to his death. J. T. Dempsey, 50, of Shreveport, a special agent riding in the engine cab, died with him.

The engine and three baggage cars overturned, but no injury to passengers was reported. W. Delcore, fireman, of Shreveport, and F. Beauchamp, student engineer, of Marshall, Tex., were scalded.

Trainmen reported seeing three men flee into woods near the wreck. Sheriff Bryant Scholars used bloodhounds, but the trail ended on a highway 125 yards from the wreck.

Had the train escaped derailment, it probably would have piled up in an open culvert near La Place, 30 miles above New Orleans. There a gang of men burned a wooden bridge.

Alcazar Siege Horrors Recounted by Garrison

Horseflesh Eaten, All Reduced to Quart of Water Daily, Babies Born While Shells Burst, Say Survivors as Rescuers Head for Madrid.

Copyright, 1936, by the Associated Press.

Talavera de la Reina, Spain, Sept. 29.—Bit by bit, the horrors of the 72-day siege of Toledo's Alcazar fortress came from the lips of the wasted and hysterical survivors tonight as their rebel rescuers drove on to Madrid.

Tales of blood, courage and despair tumbled from mouths twisted with the agony of wounds.

Their eyes glazed with visions of the terror they had known for every hour, they talked of bullets, shrapnel, dynamite, of only horseflesh to eat, of only a quart of water a person a day, of poison gas and of women bearing children as the walls around them shook with blasts of death.

They told of 600 priests who, they said, were massacred by loyalists.

Comrades Drive On, Vowing Death to Attackers.

As they muttered their stories of what the 1,200 besieged men, women and children had borne, their comrades drove on toward Madrid, vowing death to the attackers of the Alcazar.

The rebel legions were reported 7 miles along the 40-mile road from Toledo to Madrid, their march covered by war planes, which blasted government troops along the line. Other insurgent war planes, the Alcazar survivors were told, bombarded Madrid's airports.

They turned on bedside radios and heard the Seville announcer declare that "terrible days are ahead before Madrid falls."

Julio Gomez, 30-year-old civil guard, tossed on his cot and told how rebel engineers within the fortress had saved all from being blown to bits by government-laid dynamite mines, charged with tons of TNT.

Saved From Dynamite Death by Studying Plans.

The engineers, he said, studied reports from the fortress sentries who heard the ominous b-r-r-r-ings of the drills below their self-imposed prison. They then would draw up plans of where the government mines were being laid and evacuate those sections of the citadel.

"Each time the mines were exploded," Gomez said, "the dangerous sections had been evacuated—thanks to the accuracy of our engineers' plans. The dynamiters mined in vain, but the steady sounds of their drilling chilled us to the marrow of our bones.

"The last night before the arrival of our comrades we had a big festival in the ruins. We killed our last mules and last horse and opened the last kegs of beer in the cellars. We ate as we never had before during the siege. Then we slept for the first time under the stars, guarded by our comrades.

"While the archbishop of Toledo, the only priest in Toledo who had not been killed, celebrated mass, there was not a single legionnaire, not a single professional soldier tanned by the suns of many campaigns, who was not weeping."

All But 80 of Original 1,200 Defenders Alive.

When the rescuers finally broke through to the defenders, they found all but 80 of the original 1,200 alive, including all the women and children, their lives saved by the strength and depth of the Alcatraz's historic underground dungeons, in which they huddled throughout the siege.

One survivor held in trembling fingers a methodical record.

This is what it contained:

Shells landed, 11,200; aviation attacks, 30.

Explosive missiles used—1,500 hand grenades, 2,000 dynamite bombs, 600 aerial bombs, 35 gasoline cans thrown from airplanes, 200 bottles of flaming liquid.

In one day 472 artillery shells were hurled into the fortress.

Three besieged rebels took their own lives, 5 died natural deaths, 57 "disappeared by explosions," 30 others deserted or unaccountably disappeared, the "log" stated.

The fortress' occupants killed and ate 97 horses and 27 mules.

Each person had only a quart of water a day.

Franc Reported Cut by 29 Pct. To 4.66 Cents

Devaluation Bill Faces Senate Revision After Chamber Approval.

Copyright, 1936, by the United Press.

Paris, Sept. 29.—Devaluation of the franc by 29 per cent—or to 21.46 francs to the dollar—was understood to have been decided upon by the government today as the Chamber of Deputies passed the devaluation bill and the senate finance committee accepted it with reservations.

The bill, passed by the deputies, 350 to 22, permits the government to fix devaluation between 25 and 33 per cent. It also permits the cabinet to fix the gold content between 43 and 49 milligrams to the franc.

The government was understood to have decided on a gold content of 46 milligrams, compared with the 65.5 milligrams prevailing before devaluation. This would mean a franc valued at 4.66 cents, compared with the approximated 6.58 cents prevailing Friday.

The Chamber's action was taken without the government resorting to a vote of confidence.

Meanwhile, the devaluation bill faces revisions in the senate, necessitating conference with the Chamber of Deputies. The senate finance committee approved the articles of devaluation dealing purely with the monetary measures, but separated all the social riders written in by the government. The senators rewrote that section requisitioning gold in order to allow exceptions for business men with legitimate requirements to retain gold.

They also objected to giving the

Yanks Favored To Take Series On Opener Eve

Odds Are 5 to 3 Against Giants; Hubbell Faces Ruffing Today.

By Shirley Povich,
Sports Editor of The Post.

New York, Sept. 29.—Move over, politics; schum-ram, you rebels and loyalists; one side, please, you devaluators of the franc. Because here comes the World Series, moving in on the front page for the better part of a week's tenancy.

Yankees or Giants?

That is the burning question engrossing the milling millions on the main stem—and the folks on main street—as the World Series again barges onto the national scene.

For on the morrow at the Polo Grounds they meet, pitching arms unlimbered, batting eyes attuned and spikes honed, in the opening battle for big league supremacy.

The winner?

The Yankees—say the Broadway bookmakers, hastily rechecking the batting figures of the American League's murderers' row and flourishing odds of 5 to 3 against the Giants.

The Giants—defiantly retort those National League supporters who watched Bill Terry's team surge from fifth place to an amazing pennant victory. The Giants, they echo, with the talents of Carl Hubbell comfortingly in mind.

And it is the spectre of Carl Hubbell of the ghostlike screwball, that has beaten down the odds against the Giants in tomorrow's opening skirmish. In fact, in deference to Hubbell's skill, Broadway's bookmakers have established the Giants

U.S. Workers' Living Costs Shown Rising

Climb Since 1933 Noted for Food, Clothing, Transportation.

Capital Second Only to Cincinnati in Index for 32 Cities.

By Robert C. Albright.

Cost of living for Washington's army of Federal employes has mounted steadily since March, 1933, despite curtailment in the price paid for personal care and household operation, a special survey by the Labor Department disclosed yesterday.

Food, clothing and transportation led the Federal workers' living cost rise in Washington, which continued an almost unbroken climb, except for a slight recession between January and April of this year.

Commissioner of Labor Statistics Isador Lubin's unique study of Government employe living costs in this city concluded with figures for April, 1936. Since that date there has been a general increase in food prices, induced by the drought. In Washington alone, food purchased by wage earners and lower-salaried workers jumped 5.3 per cent in price between April 15 and July 15, supplementary Labor Department data showed. Washington now stands second only to Cincinnati, Ohio, in the department's index of living costs for 32 large cities.

Three Items Reduced.

The Federal worker living cost survey showed Government employes in the District were paying no more for recreation when the study was completed than they were in March, 1933. At least three items in the employes' budget actually were reduced. The housing cost index was 1.7 per cent lower; household operation, 1.4 per cent lower, and personal care, 8.6 per cent less. Cost of medical care advanced only one-half of 1 per cent during the period.

But between March, 1933, and April 15, 1936, the cost index for all goods purchased by local Federal workers moved up on an average from 82.7 per cent to 87.8 per cent, the survey showed. The food index in that period advanced 8.9 per cent; clothing, 16.5 per cent; transportation, 4.7 per cent; furnishings and equipment, 22.7 per cent.

Cost of formal education for Federal workers living here climbed a fraction of 1 per cent, and the life insurance index advanced 2.6 per cent.

Based on 1923 Costs.

Indexes of items purchased by all groups of Federal employes here were based on costs in the first six months of 1923 as 100. These increased on an average from 82.7 per cent in March, 1933, to 88.5 per cent on January 15, 1936, then dropped to 87.8 per cent on April 15, 1936.

"The study on which these figures are based," explained the department, "was conducted by pricing a list of goods most important in the spending of Federal employes and their families in the first six months of 1923 as determined by a study of the expenditures of 336 families of Federal employes and 123 single individuals made in the fall of 1933."

Five tables of indexes were prepared. One combined all types of Federal workers. Another classified only employes living as single individuals. In addition, indexes were given for three groups of families, including those of custodial employes earning less than $2,500, other employes with salaries under $2,500, and employes with salaries of $2,500 and over.

Figures Are Given.

The following figures were taken from the combined index for all groups of Federal employes living in Washington:

Group	March 15, 1933	Nov. 15, 1934	Apr. 15, 1936
All items	82.7	87.3	87.8
Food	70.9	78.6	79.8
Clothing	87.0	94.7	93.5
Housing	91.6	88.8	89.9
Household operation	87.2	88.0	85.8
Furnishings and equipment	71.3	91.2	94.0
Transportation	87.7	90.6	92.4
Personal care	89.9	83.9	81.3
Medical care	96.0	96.9	96.5
Recreation	91.4	92.2	91.4
Formal education	107.8	108.2	108.5
Life insurance	105.3	106.1	107.9
Retirement fund	100.0	100.0	100.0

The department's index for Federal workers living here as single individuals provided an interesting variation. All cost items in this index rose less than 1 per cent during the three-year period, from 88.3 to 89. Trends of costs in the single group frequently ran counter to the combined worker index. For example, the food cost index in this class actually declined from 86.5 in March, 1933, to 85.3 in April, 1936. Transportation costs fell nearly 2 per cent, but clothing costs climbed 13.4 per cent, and medical care was fractionally higher for this group.

Illinois Issues Plea For Blood Donors To Fight Paralysis

By the Associated Press.

Springfield, Ill., Sept. 29.—The State of Illinois today issued a public appeal for volunteer blood donors in a move to stem the spread of infantile paralysis.

Concerned over the prevalence of the malady during the last three months, Dr. Frank Jirka, director of the State Health Department, declared prompt action was necessary to safeguard the lives of more than 200 additional persons he expected to contract the dread disease.

He called upon victims who had recovered to give their blood for serum at two clinics—one here next Thursday and one at East St. Louis next Tuesday. Payment of $10 was authorized for each donor.

Republicans' Policies Breed Communism, President Says In Opening Campaign Speech

Landon Hits Postal Moves Of Roosevelt

Says He Will, If Elected, Put Department on 'Business Basis.'

By the Associated Press.

Topeka, Kans., Sept. 29.—Gov. Alf M. Landon, Republican Presidential nominee, tonight said President Roosevelt's recent civil service order tended "to freeze the tenure" of postal jobholders," and added that if elected he would put the department "on a business basis."

"It is my intention, as I have already indicated," the nominee told reporters, "to select the most competent executive I can find to draft for the job of putting the department (postoffice) on a business basis."

Would it make any difference if such a man were a Democrat or a Progressive the Governor was asked.

Landon paused and then said:

"No; it wouldn't. One thing is certain. No man can be simultaneously a member of my cabinet and a chairman or member of the national committee."

Speeches Are Drafted.

The Governor talked with newsmen at the executive mansion at dusk after a day devoted to campaign planning and speech drafting. The press conference was held in the large living room of the executive mansion. As he replied to questions the candidate walked about.

The Postoffice Department came up in the press conference when Landon was asked for comment on the statement of John D. M. Hamilton, national party chairman, that he would not become Postmaster General if the Kansan was elected. James A. Farley has been both Postmaster General and chairman of the Democratic National Committee.

"It is further evidence," Landon said of Hamilton's statement, "of the intention of the Republican Party to carry out its pledge for a merit system through the civil service in Government."

Order Is Assailed.

A bit later, he added:

"The President's recent civil service order proved not to be a real step in the direction of a merit system, but its effect was to freeze the tenure of present jobholders."

Landon declined to discuss Cabinet possibilities in the event of his election.

Before seeing reporters, he had conferred with a number of advisers, including Charles P. Taft and Ralph West Robey, on the campaign swing which will take him into Illinois, Ohio and Michigan. Major addresses were planed at Chicago October 9; Cleveland, October 12, and Detroit, October 14.

"What is your program for tomorrow, Governor?" he was asked.

"Just more work," Landon replied.

To Attend Grid Game.

He said he planned to attend the Washburn College-Kansas University football game in Lawrence Saturday, the opening contest of "K. U.," his alma mater. Aids thought it likely also that the Governor might attend the Ohio State-Pittsburgh game at Columbus October 10.

Mapping his course in the five weeks before election day, Landon said:

"The people are in a fighting mood. There will be no slackening in this campaign. Travel during the past week through the corn

Winant Insists Security Drive Must 'Move On'

Strikes Back at Landon for 'Injecting Politics' Into Issue.

By Sidney Olson.

In measured defense of the social security act, John G. Winant, speaking as a private citizen, last night insisted that "an advance has begun—and no man has a right to call 'halt!'" He spoke in answer to criticisms of Gov. Alf M. Landon.

The dark-browed former Governor of New Hampshire had resigned his post as chairman of the Social Security Board Monday night in order to reply to the assault by the Republican Presidential nominee on the act. He devoted his radio time to drawing a clear distinction between the Republican "dependency dole" proposal and the "non-partisan, humanitarian measure" now functioning.

After reading his letter of resignation, Winant went on:

"Until last Saturday I had hoped that the attainment of social security would be held high above party politics. I had hoped, too, that we might as Americans—and not as Republicans or as Democrats—put the program into effect, discover and amend its shortcomings, and go forward toward a larger measure of security for the whole of the American people.

"The call to retreat is written large in the whole tissue of the Republican position."

He pointed out that Landon, whom he did not name, referring to him merely as "the candidate," had claimed that the Government administration of the act meant prying into individuals' private affairs.

Winant insisted the Government would act as in other fields of taxation, seeking only the "minimum of information on a man's income."

Point by point he answered Landon's arguments, stressing that "compulsory savings for the working man" were preferable to "the fear of a lack of a job and the fear of old age," and that the back-

China Defiant, Gives Japanese Own Demands

Another War Is Feared as Chiang Counters With Four Proposals.

Shanghai (Wednesday), Sept. 30 (U.P.).—Official Chinese sources today said the Nanking central government had refused to accept Japan's four demands to insure peace between the two countries and had countered with four demands of its own. Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek, dictator of China, reportedly gave way to anti-Japanese elements in his government, taking a stand which may precipitate another Sino-Japanese war.

The four demands were:

Immediate withdrawal of all Japanese bluejackets thrown into the Shanghai area following the murder of a Japanese sailor and wounding of two others.

Immediate withdrawal of Japanese troops holding Fengtai in north China.

Suppression of all Japanese-sponsored societies opposing constituted Chinese authorities, particularly a group indulging in widespread smuggling in north China.

A Sino-Japanese understanding giving China a free hand in east Hopei Province, where a Japanese-controlled council has declared a virtual autonomous government.

Halse Leads Pilots In S. Africa Race

Cairo, Egypt, Sept. 29.—Hot on the trial of $50,000 in prizes on the all-British race from London to Johannesburg, Capt. S. S. Halse led the field of nine planes on the first half of the 6,500-mile flight tonight.

After bucking strong winds across the Mediterranean, Halse landed at 8:07 p. m., having averaged 180 miles an hour from Portsmouth, England, in his hop to Cairo. He took off again at 8:48 p. m.

A. E. Clouston, reaching Cairo at 8:39 p. m., in second place, quickly refueled and set off in pursuit to the empire's "City of Gold."

$2,000,000,000 in Blue Chips Lochhead's Ante In U. S. World Currency Stabilization Gamble

He is blue-eyed, 43, and quiet and his first name is Archie, but he holds $2,000,000,000 in blue chips in the world's greatest poker game.

The jackpot is world currency stabilization, and the stakes are the highest in world monetary history.

Which is the reason Archie Lochhead gets up before dawn in the morning and starts playing his cards long before the New York exchange market opens.

Lochhead is the Treasury Department's mystery man. In Government directories he is listed as "technical assistant" to Secretary of the Treasury, Henry Morgenthau, jr., but reporters have come to know him as director of the Government $2,000,000,000 stabilization fund. And $2,000,000,000 is a lot of money, even in international poker.

So Lochhead doesn't give interviews. He doesn't get himself photographed, if he can help it. And if he talks about anything ouside of hours, it's likely to be about the weather.

Reason is, poker players don't talk. They might bluff every now and then. But if Lochhead has done any bluffing, he hasn't been caught. Which explains why there is now a neat profit behind his $2,000,000,000 of blue chips. But just how much profit, only Lochhead, Secretary Morgenthau and perhaps a few friends around the table, know.

For what has been done with the Treasury's huge stabilization fund is as much of a mystery as the man who plays this country's cards in the game.

Just how many chips have been played, and where, has been mostly a matter of conjecture ever since the fund was authorized in the legislation which empowered President Roosevelt to cut the gold content of the dollar.

That operation gave the Treasury a paper "profit" of $2,800,000,000 on its gold holdings. Of that amount, $2,000,000,000 was set aside in stabilization blue chips, and the play started.

There have been rumors at times that the Treasury was using the chips to support the British pound sterling, or the French franc. There have been charges that they were being used to support the Government's own bond market.

But the only time the Treasury has let the public in on the play was when Secretary Morgenthau charged the other day that the Soviet State Bank had sold 1,000,000 pounds sterling to depress the pound. That may have been just another bluff in the world poker game, but if it was a bluff, the Treasury called it, two billion dollars worth.

At the same time, the Treasury served notice that it would call all future bluffs, to the limit of the fund. Under the new tri-partite "gentlemen's agreement" monetary accord between the United States, Great Britain and France, an attack on the pound or the franc will be considered an attack on the dollar. That's how international fiscal poker is played.

Lochhead will tell you, if he tells you anything, that Morgenthau is the real boss, and that he takes orders and reports back to him.

But Lochhead keeps the books and, with the advice and consent of the Secretary, directs the play. He gets to work about 5 a. m., and when American business men are dunking their coffee, he knows what London and Paris markets are doing.

And he doesn't like being called a "mystery man." You see, there really isn't any mystery about him at all.

Terms Issue 'Herring,' Promises Maintenance of U. S. Democracy.

Old Guard Still Rules G. O. P., He Declares in Syracuse Talk.

Text of President Roosevelt's Address—Page 7.

By Franklyn Waltman.
A Staff Correspondent.

Syracuse, N. Y., Sept. 29.—Pledging himself to preserve American democracy, President Roosevelt, before 10,000 listeners angrily repudiated tonight the support of any advocate of communism or other alien "ism."

Seizing on recent efforts of some of his opponents to demonstrate that he is supported by Communists, President Roosevelt made his answer to that charge the keystone of his first avowed campaign speech this year. It was a speech in which he fired his Democratic audience to a high state of enthusiasm as he raked the State and National Republican leadership fore and aft as reactionary and insensible to change and portrayed the New Deal as a liberal's effort to conserve the American Government against threats of radicalism.

Instead of the New Deal serving the ends of communism or radical political faiths, it thwarted such movements by making war on and uprooting "those conditions which make revolutions—the inequalities and resentments which breed them," he asserted. The New Deal, he argued, proved "Democracy can work."

Mr. Roosevelt denied any issue of communism exists between the two major parties. But he maintained that while the Republicans were content with denouncing the menace, the Democrats had done something successfully to thwart its onward march.

Mr. Roosevelt professed to be the "true conservative who seeks to protect the system of private property and free enterprise by correcting such injustices and inequalities as arise from it." He maintained that "never has a nation made greater strides in the safeguarding of democracy than we have made during the past three years."

"Wise and prudent men—intelligent conservatives," he asserted, "have long known that in a changing world worthy institutions can be conserved only by adjusting them to changing times."

He maintained that "conditions congenial to communism were being bred and fostered throughout this Nation up to the very day of March 4, 1933."

Refers to French Revolution.

President Roosevelt compared that period to the eve of the French Revolution, with the Republicans playing the role of Marie Antoinette, for, said he, "the best the Republican leaders of those days could say was: 'Let them eat cake.'"

Throughout his address the President sought to demonstrate that the New Deal was nothing more than a national extension of the liberal and progressive government which Al Smith, he and Gov. Herbert H. Lehman had given to New York State against the opposition of stubborn, reactionary Republicans. Prior to his address, Gov. Lehman had been renominated, while the Republicans in Syracuse had named Judge William F. Bleakley as his opponent.

Many of the progressive labor and reform measures inaugurated in this State were labeled "radical and alien to our form of government" at the time of their inception, asserted Mr. Roosevelt and then, quickly, he asked: "Would you or any other American call them radical and alien today?" shouts of "No, no," was the response.

Although Gov. Lehman sat smilingly at the President's side, the third member of this triumvirate to which Mr. Roosevelt inferentially attributed the paternity of the New Deal—Al Smith—was absent; absent from a New York State Democratic convention for the first time since he was a youth struggling toward political fame from the Fulton Street Fish Market.

Down in New York City preparing to open his first campaign against the New Deal—against the man who named him the "Happy Warrior"—Al Smith perhaps never believed the day would come when boos—even mild boos—would greet

20 Larcenies Laid to Rhodes In Indictments

4 Forgeries Also Charged to Former President of Fidelity B. & L.

The District Grand jury yesterday indicted Fred B. Rhodes, former president of the closed Fidelity Building and Loan Association, on 20 charges of grand larceny and four of forgery. The indictments culminated an investigation begun July 18, when Rhodes was arrested and the loan association closed by order of the Comptroller of the Currency.

The investigation, led by Assistant United States Attorney John J. Wilson and Howard Boyd, disclosed alleged thefts totaling $43,519.59, according to an audit of the company's books by experts of the Department of Justice.

20 Offenses Charged.

Rhodes, who is 60, is married and lives at 4715 Seventeenth street northwest. He has been connected with recent important banking litigation in District courts and has offices in the National Press Club building.

Basing its charges on a section of the District code that stipulates that any misappropriation of funds from a building and loan association in the District shall be considered as larceny, the grand jury traced some 20 transactions in which Rhodes is alleged to have received money from the association. If found guilty on all larceny charges he could be given a maximum sentence of 200 years.

According to the grand jury report, the alleged larcenies occurred between October 12 and December 11, 1935, and were mainly concerned with building transactions in nearby Virginia. Eight of the 20 larceny charges grew out of Rhodes' drawing on the association's account to finance construction of Virginia homes. His own accounts in the association were debited with corresponding overdrafts.

Other items mentioned in the indictment were an allegedly unauthorized check for $925 used in down payment for a lot, and $700 for a truck. Ten $3,000 construction loans, and checks for $900, $770.65, and various other alleged manipulations were charged to Rhodes.

Thousands Involved.

Numerous other checks, some of them calling for the payment of taxes and others for construction work or the purchase of land were attributed to Rhodes. Most of the checks, it was said, were signed by an officer of the corporation and were countersigned by Rhodes. In all, the grand jury was told that Rhodes had obtained many thousands of dollars from the association.

The forgery charges grew out of withdrawal of some $7,000 from the account of David T. Maloney, of 3820 Cathedral avenue northwest. The indictments charge that Rhodes forged Maloney's name to three Fidelity checks drawn on the Second National Bank. A fourth forgery charge was in connection with a $1,500 withdrawal slip in the name of Desire A. Irr, an engraver at the Government Printing Office.

In a statement issued last night, Rhodes blamed a "very bitter antagonism" toward him on the part of the office of the Comptroller for the charges.

"My chief regret in this whole matter is the fact that in the effort to overwhelm me, the innocent depositors are temporarily suffering the loss of the use of their money, although I have not the slightest doubt that the assets of this association are sufficient to pay off every dollar of their investment."

In another indictment the grand jury charged Samuel Leighton Frooks, 52-year-old New York lawyer and a candidate for the House of Representatives, with blackmailing and conspiring to blackmail. Named with him was Mary Krieger, 35, former Oklahoma school teacher, of this city. Both are charged in connection with an alleged plot against Carroll Pierce, president and trust officer of the Citizens' National Bank, of Alexandria, who said an attempt to extort $2,500 from him had been made.

Crop Loss Heavy In Texas Floods

By the Associated Press.

Waco, Tex., Sept. 29.—Flood-congested rivers piled up inestimable crop losses tonight in south-central Texas, forcing lowland residents to flee for their lives.

The destructive Brazos, after ravaging millions of dollars in property and crops near Waco, spread widely over rich bottom lands to the south as it flowed toward the gulf. Added to its unprecedented rise were masses of water rolling down the rain-swollen Little River and its tributaries.

There was no reported loss of life. Herding their livestock, farmers of the flood area evacuated the threatened area well in advance of the high water.

Rehabilitation of water-sodden East Waco began today. Crews of WPA workers started clearing away debris in stores, homes and streets. There were 1,800 refugees housed in relief stations. Hundreds of others were cared for in homes. Citizens raised $12,000 for relief.

Roosevelt Showmanship, Improved With Time, Held His Greatest Campaign Asset.

By Franklyn Waltman

ABOARD President Roosevelt's Campaign Train, Sept. 29.—Whatever you may think of the New Deal, you cannot spend any time in the company of the Roosevelt official family, you cannot experience glances behind the scenes, without admiring the ingenuity and polish of their political showmanship.

WALTMAN.

Perhaps America has had greater statesmen than Mr. Roosevelt. But without doubt the country has never had a President who so thoroughly understood public psychology and had such a flair for impressing his personality on the Nation as he. That has been apparent for four years. Yet, instead of being a commonplace, it has become increasingly remarkable, until today solemn political observers pronounce it Mr. Roosevelt's greatest asset in his tussle with Gov. Alf M. Landon.

Some of these observers believe it is the chief reason why President Roosevelt is destined to be re-elected. Irrespective of the merits of his cause—or that of his opponent—they hold that Mr. Roosevelt in the end will outthink and out-maneuver the Republican nominee in capturing and influencing the imagination of the masses of the people.

Only time will reveal the accuracy of such a prophecy. But certainly it can be said that not only has the Rooseveltian showmanship improved with time—becoming more artistic, more subtle and touched with a new Machiavellian shrewdness—but many of his associates, sitting at the feet of the master, have learned the art and are practicing it for the first time in this campaign.

* * * *

This has been evidenced repeatedly during the last month in which the New Dealers have anticipated Gov. Landon at almost every turn of the road. It was evidenced only today in the matter of the resignation of John G. Winant as chairman of the Social Security Board in order that he might be free to answer Gov. Landon's attack on the social security program.

I am told that there was nothing Machiavellian about Mr. Winant's resignation. I am told that he has a New England, Puritanical conscience, that he sincerely believes that a member of the Social Security Board should not engage in political activity, but that Gov. Landon's assault on the social security program so outraged him that he could not hold his tongue in reply—and therefore he resigned to be able to speak freely.

Certainly that is the impression which the Winant letter of resignation seeks to give and that is the reason why it was on the front page of every metropolitan newspaper, at least, this morning. But it does not ring true. Mr. Winant is not a maudlin sentimentalist or social reformer inexperienced in practical politics. He has been Governor of New Hampshire—and a good one, it is said—and he knows his way around Washington.

Surely Mr. Winant is aware that the President places a high value on his services and that he can do far more good in promoting a sound social security program by remaining at the head of the board than in engaging in political controversy with Gov. Landon. But no, we are asked to believe that Mr. Winant is so sentimental he would sacrifice himself to take one resounding whack at Gov. Landon.

It strains the credulity of most persons to believe that. Either there is some other reason for Winant's resignation, or it was submitted for the purpose of dramatizing his reply to the Republican nominee. Certainly it is highly probable in view of the volume of political news and the charges and recriminations being made by minor figures at this time that the Winant reply, without the resignation, would have landed on an inside page of most newspapers and would have been seen by but a fraction of those who read it this morning.

Now that Mr. Winant's resignation has served the purpose of giving a dramatic touch to his reply to Gov. Landon—so dramatized it, in fact, that probably more people read it than the original assault—we may expect Mr. Roosevelt to refuse to permit Mr. Winant to make such a sacrifice in his behalf by declining to accept his resignation.

Contrast the shrewdness of that political play; the slickness of the way in which the Treasury used the Russian sale of pounds last Saturday to offset charges of Communist support and the subtlety of the New Deal's anticipation of the farm program a week ago—contrast all these with the colorless, unimaginative campaign being conducted by the Republicans and you will see the reason why many observers are so impressed with the Roosevelt showmanship.

Just one example of the ineptness of the Republican strategists is sufficient to indicate that they do not understand public psychology. In an effort to dramatize the part which taxes play in raising prices, the Republicans in New York have staged a tableau in which beautiful girls appear in lounging pajamas and evening gowns—with peices of those garments cut away to symbolize the portion covered by taxes. Photographs of the scene have been published Nation-wide.

It was a good idea—but in the name of practical and realistic politics why select lounging pajamas and evening gowns as the exhibits? What does the average mill worker or factory girl care about the taxes on lounging pajamas and evening gowns? And yet Gov. Landon to win must have the votes of part of these workers.

Yet despite all their cleverness the New Dealers live in fear and trembling that the Republicans will turn their own tricks against them. For instance, President Roosevelt's speech at Syracuse tonight was withheld from the press until a short time before its delivery was started—although it was ready hours previously.

The reason for holding the speech secret apparently was to keep it from falling into the hands of the Republicans, who might broadcast a quick answer to it, or might in some other way anticipate its delivery. Thus the campaign is taking on the nature of a battle of wits, as well as oratory.

Winant Insists Security Drive Must 'Move On'

ing of the reserve funds by Government bonds would mean complete security.

Pressing the difference between the Landon program of "pauper's doles" with the present social security act, he said:

"Under the Republican proposal all must pay, but the improvident chiefly will benefit; and the greater degree of improvidence, the larger the benefit. Thus is thrift discouraged; family responsibilities broken down; real security lessened * * * Surely we will never create social security by encouraging individual insecurity."

He noted that the Landon plan to use the States as laboratories in which to work out the problems involved was already an essential part of the act, and added: "Either the nominee has not read the social security act or his advisers have misled him." He concluded:

"Hazards to life, liberty and property stalk out land. A dependent childhoood, unemployment and old age are common enemies against whom the Nation should present a united front. We must, as a Nation and in the American spirit, seize the occasion to insure the blessings of security to ourselves and our posterity."

In Madison, Wis., Senator Robert M. La Follette, jr., the Progressive National Committee chairman, further critized Landon for his Milwaukee address in which he called the act "stupidly drafted and unworkable." La Follette said:

"He made glaring misstatements and was extremely vague. Gov. Landon was guilty of setting up a straw man for the purpose of knocking him down. He represented the taxes to be paid for old-age insurance as the heaviest ever levied, although for years to come they will cost less than postage on the excise taxes consumers pay on many luxury articles."

2 Major Parties Pick Bleakley, Lehman in N. Y.

Justice Defeats Fearon in Hot Fight; Governor Is Not Opposed.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Sept. 29.—The Republicans of pivotal New York nominated Supreme Court Justice William F. Bleakley for Governor today, while in shouting unanimity the Democrats sent forth the incumbent, Herbert L. Lehman, to contend with him in November, seeking his third term.

Both conventions in this, the State with the country's biggest electoral vote, met head-on the issue of President Roosevelt's New Deal.

The Democrats, meeting at Syracuse, promised continued co-operation with the National Administration, and pledged the party to "make no compromise with bourbonism in its fight to achieve a more secure and humane social order."

At Albany, the Republicans condemned the New Deal utterly, echoing the national platform drafted at Cleveland, and denounced the Lehman State administratiion for "attempting to make our State government a mere agency of the Federal Administration."

The Democrats had merely a task of form in approving the State ticket headed by Gov. Lehman—a New Deal stalwart who decided to stand again only after appeals from the National Administration.

The Republicans picked Bleakley, who comes from downstate Yonkers, near New York City, after his forces had broken the back of an upstate alliance which sought to nominate State Senator George R. Fearon, of Syracuse.

Bleakley, a stocky, athletic, 52-year-old veteran of ten years on the bench, commanded 680 votes on the first ballot—65 more than necessary to nominate—while Fearon trailed with 348. The selection of the justice was made unanimous. The pre-convention struggle had been bitter.

The Democrats met in a last session tonight to hear President Roosevelt.

Hamilton Opens Race in Kentucky

Lexington, Ky., Sept. 29 (AP).—Chairman John Hamilton of the Republican National Committee opened the Presidential campaign in Kentucky at a party rally here today by raising the cry of "communism" against President Roosevelt's New Deal.

The Topeka lawyer urged Republican and Jeffersonian Democrats alike to support Gov. Alf Landon on the issue of "preserving the American form of government."

Hamilton asserted that Earl Browder, Presidential candidate of the Communist Party, was throwing his strength to the President, and that David Dubinsky, a candidate for Presidential elector in New York pledged to vote for Roosevelt, was an avowed "collector of funds for the Communist Party who had told of sending 5,000 to the Reds in Spain and additional funds to another European country."

Robert H. Lucas, of Louisville, Republican nominee for United States Senator, joined Hamilton in denouncing the Democratic Administration as "socialistic and un-American." Lucas quoted Senator Carter Glass, former Gov. Alfred E. Smith and other old line Democratic leaders in opposition to the New Deal.

The Campaign Arena

By the Associated Press.

Syracuse, N. Y., Sept. 29 (AP).—Delegates to the New York State Democratic Convention were in doubt for a moment today just who was being nominated for Governor—Herbert H. Lehman or Herbert Hoover.

In his nominating speech, former Supreme Court Justice Thomas H. Dowd, of Salamanca, made the following statement:

"The privilege which has been accorded me today of presenting the name of Herbert Hoover to this convention as a candidate for Governor is indeed a pleasant one."

The text of his prepared speech read "Herbert H. Lehman."

Boise, Idaho, Sept. 29 (AP).—Byron Defenbach, Townsend candidate, quit the Idaho Senatorial race tonight, leaving Gov. C. Ben Ross, a Democrat, as Republican incumbent William E. Borah's only opponent.

"I feel my action in withdrawing at this time will be generally approved by my friends and supporters," the silver-haired former Republican State treasurer and gubernatorial candidate asserted.

Defenbach said many Townsend people "feel Senator Borah is our best bet at this time," and added "I am going along with them."

St. Louis, Sept. 29 (AP).—The National Jeffersonian Democrats today announced former Gov. Joseph B. Ely, of Massachusetts, would make five addresses "against the New Deal," the first at Springfield, Ill., October 5.

The organization, which is opposed to the re-election of President Roosevelt, said Ely also would speak at La Porte, Ind., October 6; Columbus, Ohio, October 7; Charleston, W. Va., October 8, and Pittsburgh, October 9.

Phoenix, Ariz., Sept. 29 (AP).—Proposed removal of C. E. Addams as finance director of the Roosevelt and Garner clubs in Arizona threatened a serious rift in Democratic Party ranks today.

W. P. Stuart, Prescott publisher and retiring State chairman, said he and Gov. B. B. Moeur wired James A. Farley, national chairman, to ask that Addams be permitted to continue.

Stuart said the removal of Addams would "jeopardize" the support of the Moeur organization, representing more than 40,000 votes in the primary September 8.

Dr. Junius Gibbons, who succeeded Stuart, said the name of Addams' successor had been submitted to Farley for approval.

Republican national headquarters in Chicago recently criticized a letter Addams mailed to WPA workers in Arizona soliciting campaign contributions.

New Haven, Conn., Sept. 29 (AP).—State Senator John F. Lynch, of West Haven, was nominated for Congress today by Republicans of the Third Congressional District in convention.

His Democratic opponent will be Representative James A. Shanley, of New Haven.

Quoting memorandum it said went to Lawrence Westbrook, assistant WPA administrator, the Republican National Committee last night asserted "the New Deal has perverted the Government of the United States into an instrument to promote its own political perpetuation."

Dated last March 27 and attributed to Karl G. Karsten, who was identified as a subordinate of Westbrook, the memorandum was entitled "political importance of part-time industry, part-time towns programs."

In it, Karsten was quoted as saying the voting importance of small towns had been neglected. The program of trying to locate industries in small towns, he said, "seems to excite and enthuse that portion of the voters."

Karsten's conclusion was given as: "The thought therefore occurred to me that announcements of this program might be released shortly before election day, and exert a very considerable effect."

Boston, Sept. 29.—Gov. James M. Curley today said he had discussed by telephone with the Rev. Charles E. Coughlin the candidacy of Thomas C. O'Brien, Union Party candidate for United States Senator in Massachusetts.

Curley declined to say whether the question of O'Brien's withdrawing from the race was discussed.

Curley is the Democratic nominee for Senator against whom O'Brien polled a 35,000 vote in the Democratic primaries while running on stickers.

Protests are pending before the State ballot law commission involving the validity of nomination papers of O'Brien as the senatorial candidate and also on the Union Party Presidential ticket. O'Brien has carried to the State Supreme Court his opposition to this protest.

William Hard, in his Republican broadcast tonight, said the way for President Roosevelt "to repudiate the support of the Communists is not by saying that he does not want their votes but by renouncing and reversing the New Deal policies that lead directly to a collective society."

"The core of Mr. Roosevelt's policies," he said, "is governmentalism to which he sets no known limit. It displayed itself completely, clearly in the New Deal sugar law which assigned to each sugar factory in the United States a certain fixed output of sugar—and no more."

Divine, Answering Judgment in Crash, Says He Is Not Rich

By the Associated Press.

New York, Sept. 29.—The financial aspects of Father Major J. Divine's Harlem "heaven" remained as much of a mystery as ever tonight, despite a lawyer's two-hour effort to solve the riddle.

The dapper little colored preacher who is called "God" by his thousands of followers, said the only compensation he received for his evangelical work was food and living accommodations.

"I don't need any money," he said. "I receive accommodations wherever I go."

Divine was examined under a Supreme Court order obtained by William W. Lesselbaum, counsel for a Maryland couple who seek to collect judgments totaling $7,724, resulting from an automobile accident.

The judgments were held by Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Bayless, of Aberdeen, Md. Mrs. Bayless was injured in a collision between an automobile and one of Divine's buses at Aberdeen two years ago.

Divine was flanked by two lawyers and a secretary when he submitted to questioning.

Toward the end of examination Divine was asked how much money he had. He turned his pockets inside out and produced only a ring of keys.

Lesselbaum said he would ask some more questions October 29.

11 Black Legion Aids Convicted In Poole Death

7 to Receive Life Terms, 4 Will Be Sentenced Later at Detroit.

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, Sept. 29.—Eleven members of the Black Legion were convicted today of plotting the lynching which exposed the existence of the secret terrorist society with its dreams of a moral and political dictatorship.

Seven of the band were convicted of first degree murder in the roadside "execution" last May 12 of Chares A. Poole, a verdict which carries with it a mandatory sentence of life imprisonment. The other four were convicted of second degree murder. They may be sentenced for any term of years up to or including life, in the discretion of the court.

The jury of nine men and three women filed back into the heavily guarded courtroom of Circuit Judge Joseph A. Moynihan with the verdict 1 hour and 25 minutes after beginning deliberations.

Mrs. Rebecca Poole, pretty 21-year-old widow of the man who was killed because of false gossip he had mistreated her, was among the spectators who waited tensely for the verdict.

Dean Aided State.

Those convicted of first-degree murder were "Col." Harvey Davis, Ervin D. Lee, Paul R. Edwards, Edgar Baldwin and Urban Lipps, all of whom were present when Poole was shot to death by Dayton Dean as he pleaded vainly that "there must be some mistake;" Lowell Rushing, accused of instigating the plot to "straighten Poole out," and John Bannerman, charged with setting out for the death scene with a rope with which Poole was to have been hanged.

Dean, who has pleaded guilty to murder, testified as a State witness that he opened fire on Davis' orders when an open drawbridge prevented Bannerman from joining the "necktie party."

The jury convicted Thomas R. Craig and Virgil Morrow of second degree murder, and Judge Moynihan found Albert Stevens and John S. Vincent, who had waived trial by jury, guilty in the same degree. The four were implicated in the Black Legion meeting preceding the killing at which the State charges the death plot was formulated.

Twelfth Is Acquitted.

A twelfth defendant, Herschell Gill, was acquitted, the jury having accepted the suggestion of Assistant State Attorney General Chester P. O'Hara that there was no evidence Gill knew Poole was to be killed.

As the convicted men, manacled and closely guarded, were leaving the courtroom, Rushing snarled at Mrs. Poole:

"Well, I hope you're satisfied."

"Yes, you bet I am," she retorted.

Told that the wives of Davis and Vincent had wept upon hearing the verdict, Mrs. Poole said

"Let them cry. They never shed a tear over the death of my husband. Not one of them came to me and told me they were sorry. At least their husbands are still living."

Fifteen cases against the Black Legion ranging from flogging and arson to murder conspiracies and the alleged coup d'etat plot to seize Federal buildings and arsenals, still are pending.

Ettinger Wanted.

Virgil F. Ettinger, Lima, Ohio, contractor described by investigators here as national head of the Black Legion, is sought on a criminal syndicalism charge in connection with the coup d'etat plot.

The principal cases remaining to be heard involve the alleged "thrill killing" of Silas Coleman, Negro mail carrier, during a Black Legion drinking party; the alleged conspiracies to kill Arthur L. Kingsley, Highland Park editor; Martin H. Zink, Highland Park City Commissioner, and William W. Voisine, mayor of suburban Ecorse, and the criminal syndicalism case in which 12 men have been indicted.

Several of the men convicted today, after a trial which required nearly a month, are defendants in one or more of the other cases, in which a total of 70 men are accused.

Judge Moynihan said he would not pronounce sentences in the present case for a few days.

Dartmouth Head Supports Landon

Copyright, 1936, by the United Press.

Hanover, N. H., Sept. 29.—Ernest Martin Hopkins, president of Dartmouth College, who told undergraduates in 1932 that "change is opportunity" and two months later voted for President Roosevelt, disclosed tonight he would support Gov. Alf. M. Landon's candidacy because he believed "the New Deal leadership has gone wild in seeking to capitalize the desire for change for political advantage."

Two years ago Hopkins was appointed by the President to make an edcational survey of Puerto Rico. In 1929, he conferred upon Mr. Roosevelt, then Governor of New York, Dartmouth's honorary doctorate of laws.

"I am a Republican," Hopkins said, "but I voted for Mr. Roosevelt in 1932 because I believed that the Republican leadership had gone stale and was not conscious of the extent to which change was imperative and a new approach to social problems must be made.

"I shall vote for Mr. Landon because I believe that the New Deal leadership, on the contrary, has gone wild in seeking to capitalize the desire for change for political advantage."

50-Foot Atchison Mural To Be Unveiled Today

A 50-foot mural by Joseph Anthony Atchison, Washington artist, depicting progress in Washington since 1860, will be unveiled at 9 a. m. this morning at Lansburgh's department store. The event will mark the seventy-sixth anniversary of the founding of the store.

The central theme of the mural is a conception of progress depicted by a woman. The mural starts with the three-story building in which Lansburgh's was opened in 1860, gives flashes of the Civil War, the coming of the radio and aviation and ends with a vision of the future.

Battle Between Democracy and Dictatorship Heightens U. S. Political Fever, Briton Asserts

Our Traditional Aversion to Government at Bottom of Interest in Current Issues, Says Publicist.

By Hope Ridings Miller.

Commander Stephen King-Hall, British publicist and commentator on international affairs, who toured America in 1934 and defined the New Deal as "a decision to make an omelet out of a golden egg which has not yet been laid," is back again "to see how the chickens are being fed."

He said so yesterday at a luncheon of the Women's National Press Club when he revealed some of the impressions gleaned on his recent 2,700-mile vagabonding tour of the northeastern part of the United States. Later, in an interview, he had still more to say about what an Englishman sees (and hears) on a tour of America today.

In clipped British accents, replete with "a's" as broad as Pennsylvania avenue, this stocky man with sparse graying hair observed, between puffs on his pipe, that Americans were more politically minded than ever before and that this "is a highly satisfactory thing because at the present time the most important issue in the world is the one between democracy and dictatorship."

Democracy Very Much Alive.

The United States and the British Commonwealth are the two fortresses of democratic principles, he pointed out, and the interest in present-day political issues in America is evidence that democracy with all it implies—freedom of speech, freedom of press and freedom of the air—is very much alive in this country.

He believes America's traditional aversion to government is the basis for the interest in the current political picture.

"Deep in the heart of every true American is the feeling that government is a foul necessity," he went on. "In England we who keep in touch with developments in the United States must continually remind ourselves that this country was created in order to escape the tyranny of government. From a Britisher's point of view Americans are so democratically-minded that they are always on the verge of anarchy. Americans apparently do not think of government as a projection of themselves or as concentrated reflections of society but rather as an alien thing. And because they despise government, gentlemen in this country heretofore have preferred business to politics, and politicians have made politics a business instead of a public service."

Politics of Paramount Interest.

In traveling through the East and North in an automobile, Commander King-Hall has had the opportunity to interview countless Americans in every walk of life on countless subjects, but he has discovered "they don't stay long off the subject of politics and the coming election." He said, however, that with all his questioning and his study of the political situation from afar and at first hand, he hasn't "the slightest idea who will be the next President."

"And I doubt," he added with a twinkle in his keen blue eyes, "whether either President Roosevelt or Gov. Landon are much better informed on this subject than I am. I feel fairly confident, though, that all the usual polls and probes into the state of public opinion are much less significant in this campaign than in previous ones, because people who will cast the deciding vote in the coming election are not expressing their opinions through these mediums."

Scattering verbal bouquets at some extra-political phases of current American life, Commander King-Hall said he believed the organization of privately financed social services was handled more satisfactorily in the United States than in Great Britain.

COMMANDER STEPHEN KING-HALL.

"In fact, I have the impression that in this country efficient administration and integrity as regards funds are of a very high standard—so long as the concern is a private organization," he continued. "But the minute the Government steps in, whether it is municipal, State or Federal control, something happens to the American conscience. I think I know what it is. Every night at the going down of the sun and each morning I say to myself, as I travel about in America, 'Remember the United States was created in order to escape from the tyranny of government'."

Earlier, Commander King-Hall gave a Britisher's impressions of America's current political situation at the first weekly luncheon of the Women's National Press Club to be held this season.

Discusses Tour of America.

Introduced by Mary Hornaday, president, as "the Walter Lippmann, of England," and further identified as "the commentator who announced the coronation ceremonies," Commander King-Hall discussed his recent tour of America "in a motorcar, equipped with an English lawyer and two attractive ladies."

Day Tuttle, director for the Civic Theater, outlined plans under way for Washington's newest community venture, and Mrs. Amanda Mayo Boyden, correspondent for English newspapers in China, recounted some of her experiences in interviewing famous persons for Chinese publications.

Other honor guests were Miss Nemonie Balfour, English singer; Miss Julie Taylor, of London; Miss Phoebe Gale and Mrs. Day Tuttle, of Washington, and Miss Alice Taylor, of Windsor, Conn., who is said to be the only woman ever to spend a night on "Dead Man's Isle" in Lake Tahoe.

By the Associated Press.

San Francisco, Sept. 29.—Faint indications appeared today that shipowners and unions were working toward a break in the deadlock threatening another tieup of West Coast shipping.

Shortly after the newly created United States Maritime Commission requested both sides to extend present working conditions agreements 60 days pending investigation of the situation, M. C. Sloss, Federal arbitrator, was summoned by both factions to interpret a "certain clause" in existing contracts.

No one would comment, but the action led to reports that a new truce formula was being considered.

Less than 36 hours remained for negotiations. The present agreements, made after the bloody 1934 strike, expire at midnight Wednesday and a strike or lockout of 37,000 union men has been threatened.

Outwardly there was little show of progress toward a truce.

Shipowners Silent.

Shipowners declined to comment on the maritime commission request.

Representatives of the 11 waterfront and maritime unions met to decide upon a "solid front" course of procedure "in the event the shipowners reject the maritime commission's request."

Assistant Secretary of Labor Edward F. McGrady and two Federal labor conciliators continued conferences with representatives of the unions and the employers.

McGrady, who played a stellar part in bringing about a truce in the 1934 trouble, expressed optimism over the possibility of extending negotiations beyond the Wednesday night deadline. He said he had hopes of an amicable settlement.

Urges Extensions.

The maritime commission asked both factions to "make every effort" to arrange extension of present contracts so that the commission could "have an opportunity to confer with other Government departments concerned and to make an investigation in the sincere hope that as an interested party it may aid in the reaching of an amicable settlement."

In Washington, it was said President Roosevelt expected to confer with maritime commission members tomorrow.

Negotiations for a new contract with the I. L. A. broke down when the shipowners demanded the union agree to arbitrate all questions not settled in negotiations for a new agreement.

Rockies Snow Toll Mounts to 16 Dead

Denver, Sept. 29 (AP).—The death toll in the Rocky Mountain region's early season snowstorm mounted to 16 tonight with the finding of three more bodies as thousands of relief workers started to clean up debris.

Damage to power lines and trees was counted in the millions of dollars.

The bodies of Facundo Romero, 50, and his son, Pedro, 13, were found beside ruins of their campfire 15 miles east of Santa Fe, N. Mex., on a widespread mesa today. A few hours later, the body of Jose Chavez, 12, was discovered in the Sandia Mountains 20 miles east of Albuquerque—only 5 miles from a forest service camp.

All three apparently died in their sleep.

Two other New Mexicans and 11 Coloradoans were the other storm victims.

U. S. Smashes Smuggling Ring In War on Dope

1,086 Persons Arrested Throughout Nation; Property Seized.

Expanding beyond the boundaries of the United States, the drive of Federal agents against illicit narcotics, liquor and counterfeiting operations became international in scope last night.

As operatives counted a total of 1,086 arrests—with more expected hourly—Gen. Jose Siurob, chief of the department of public health in Mexico City, revealed that Mexican, Cuban and American authorities had smashed a huge ring which has been importing $4,000,000 worth of heroin from Shanghai every three months.

The United Press quoted the Mexican official as saying the ring had imported nearly 80 pounds of heroin every three months, then sold it at bootleg prices.

Russian Arrested.

Authorities in Mexico City arrested Joe Forstenberg, a Russian, now a naturalized citizen of Mexico, owner of several theaters, and Polac I. Katz, a junk dealer.

Their action followed a tip that they belonged to the same syndicate as Molly Wendt, who was arrested in Los Angeles August 5 with $600,000 worth of drugs just as she was preparing to enter Mexico.

Another alleged member of the ring was Naftali Loffelholz Brandstater, Siurob said. Brandstater committed suicide aboard the steamer Oriente as it was arriving in New York Harbor September 4.

Being Deported.

He recently had arrived in Havana from Shanghai, by way of Africa. He was arrested there and was being deported to Spain by way of New York.

When he learned he would be cut off from his companions, however, he preferred suicide, the Mexican official said.

He added he had learned the head of the syndicate, a German, Dr. Edward Stey, superintendent of a large hospital in Shanghai, committed suicide by swallowing poison September 26 because of "losing face" due to the breaking up of the ring.

Meanwhile, with 2,500 law enforcement officers mobilized for the wholesale raids, Harold N. Graves, Treasury agent in charge, estimated that property seizures would run into hundreds of thousands of dollars before complete reports are received.

Property Is Seized.

Customs agents alone were reported to have confiscated property valued at $152,000—against which penalties totaling $200,000 will be assessed.

Arrests by agents of the Federal Narcotic Bureau headed the list. Texas bore the brunt of narcotics seizures, with 149 persons under arrest and large quantities of dope uncovered. In Richmond, Va., nine men—including two physicians and two druggists—were taken into custody.

Once termed a "cesspool of dope," Richmond was described as "even worse" yesterday by D. M. Martin, southeastern narcotics supervisor, who directed the raids. Federal agents, he said, will continue their drive "until every dope addict in Richmond is arrested."

Harry J. Anslinger, commissioner of narcotics, last night described highlights of the dope drive.

Upward of 500 arrests were made for narcotic violations, he said. Richmond was found to be a narcotic center, with addicts and peddlers from a radius of 300 miles—including Washington and Baltimore—obtaining supplies there.

In Chicago, a Chinese was seized with 10,000 heroin pills in his possession. Agents said his supply was smuggled in from China. Heroin, it was stated, has gained favor over opium for smoking purposes.

In New Orleans, three brothers were arrested for distributing wholesale quantities of morphine, heroin and opium. A fourth brother, it was revealed, now is serving a prison sentence under similar charges.

An arrest in Detroit led police to a murder suspect sought for several months. A man seized in Houston, Tex., was described as "the most important narcotics distributor in the State." Three men in Tyler, Tex., were arrested after it was found they were supplying oil field workers with drugs.

3 Men and Girl Burn to Death In Plane Crash

Ship Bearing Pair to Photograph Streamlined Train Destroyed.

By the Associated Press.

Naperville, Ill., Sept. 29.—An airplane, carrying photographers to take pictures of a stream-lined train, plunged beside the railroad tracks tonight and burned four persons to death.

The dead: Oscar Hanold, 28, Chicago, pilot of the ship; Wilma Schlusler, girl passenger, Chicago; Howard Adams, film director of a Chicago commercial picture-taking firm; Ralph Biddy, of Chicago, cameraman for the firm.

The ship fell and burned within 100 feet of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad tracks at almost the exact moment the streamliner, the Zephyr, was due to pass the spot. It had been flying low, and plunged nose first into a field east of Naperville.

Firemen arrived too late to save the five-passenger wooden craft.

Hanold had been hired to take the craft, property of the Blue-Bird Air Transport Co., from the Chicago Airport on a contract flight.

The two photographers and the girl, former model lately employed as a script writer for the picture company, arrived from Detroit recently to live in Chicago, their employers there said.

The girl was not scheduled to make the flight, men at the airport disclosed, but she "talked herself into it."

Northern Skyline Link to Open Oct. 1

The Bureau of Public Roads said yesterday the northern end of Skyline Drive from Panorama to Front Royal, Va., would be opened October 1, according to the Associated Press.

The new link will make the drive approximately 65 miles long. Approximately 32 miles of the drive in the Shenandoah National Park area remain to be completed. The unfinished section lies at the south end of the drive between Swift Run and Jarman's gaps. About 17 miles of this distance is now under construction.

The center section of the drive, more than 30 miles, between Panorama and Swift Run has been completed more than a year.

Freedom Asked By Farnsworth On Spy Charge

Defense Seeks to Quash Indictments, Declaring Conspiracy Not Shown.

Possibility that former Lieut. Comdr. John S. Farnsworth might be freed of a charge that he conspired to furnish the Imperial Japanese Government with confidential naval information of the United States Navy was seen in District Court yesterday when Attorneys William E. Leahy and William J. Hughes, jr., filed an attack on the true bill.

The attack, in effect, said Farnsworth could not have conspired with himself, and since officers protected by diplomatic immunity were alleged to have conspired with him, no charge could be substantiated.

The reason given was that those named in the indictment were officers of the Japanese navy and could not be brought to trial here because of their immunity. Thus, it was contended, he was being brought to face a charge that he conspired with himself.

In a motion to quash the indictment, the attorneys pointed out that Farnsworth must be joined with someone within the legal reach of the court, and they stressed the fact that neither of those mentioned in the presentment were within reach of local authorities, because of the limits of international law, which asserts that they are not only immune from prosecution but cannot commit a crime in the country to which they are attached.

In a second attack on a subsequent indictment returned against Farnsworth, the attorneys argued an indictment charging him with transmitting "confidential information" could not be held valid in the absence of a more complete showing of the nature of the alleged offence. The attack asserted the former naval officer should be informed more completely of the nature of the accusation against him.

No action was taken on the "demurrer" which the attorneys filed. It will be argued later in the week.

the city Basque nationalists were putting down anarchist terrorism.

Disregrding threats of the governor of Bilbao to kill 1,500 hostages if the air raids were resumed, rebel planes again bombarded the city. Incendiary bombs started many fires in the overcrowded city and frightened refugees again attempted to escape.

The threat against the lives of the hostages was lessened somewhat when the Basque Nationalist Deputy De la Torre established himself in the partly destroyed Palacio de la Deputacion and took over control of the city.

Hal a dozen Anarchist leaders were reported to have been publicly shot to show that "inhuman conduct will not be tolerated in the defense of Bilbao."

Anarchists allegedly were responsible for the torture slayings of 295 hostages—part of the 1,700 prominent and wealthy persons held on three prison ships in the Nervion River. Although 210 hostages were slaughtered Sunday by women of the Workers Militia, known as the "Red Carmens," no women were included in the public executions, it was said.

"Madrid at Rebels' Mercy."

San Sebastian, Spain, Sept. 29 (U.P.)—Gen. Francisco Franco, rebel generalissimo, could seize Madrid immediately if he is willing to sacrifice 40,000 men, a Burgos junta general staff officer said tonight.

The Arabic-speaking leader of the rebellion, however, plans to make a dramatic entry into the capital on the morning of October 12, Spain's "Fiesta de la Raza," or day of celebration of all nations "born of Spain."

"The fruit is rotting," the informant said. "Madrid will fall to us without need of picking. For political purposes, Franco wants to take Madrid with as little loss of life as possible. He will trade cannon for political advantage any day and is prepared to seize Madrid any day he chooses provided he wants to sacrifice 40,000 men."

Copyright, 1936, by the Associated Press.

With Government Forces Retreating on Madrid, Sept. 29.—"Shoot your cowards!" the government tonight ordered its military leaders, directing the retreat on Madrid.

"The battle is won by resistance, lost by running away," was the cry taken up by the newspaper El Socialista.

"Those who have even the slightest fear of the enemy throw away their guns and demoralize their comrades, laying the way open for the enemy advance on our capital.

"Such cowards must be shot down without trial!"

The government meanwhile countered these indications of desertions from its own ranks with declarations that 200 of the rebels advancing on Madrid had come over to the Madrid side.

A vicious counter-attack, the government leaders asserted, was launched against the Fascists at Bargas, 5 miles outside Toledo on the 40-mile Toledo-Madrid highway.

Advance Reported.

(Reports at the insurgent headquarters in Burgos tonight said the rebels had advanced 7 miles from Toledo toward Madrid, and were driving a pincer-like maneuver on the Spanish capital. One column, these reports said, advanced on Illescas, 22 miles south of Madrid on the Toledo road, and another drove on Aranjuez, 28 miles southeast of Madrid.)

Leaders tonight renewed their pleas for all able-bodied men to come to the defense of Madrid.

"Five thousand brave men can win victories," the call for volunteers read, "whereas 25,000 cowards and deserters will bring about defeat.

"Madrid has these brave men, but they should be placed on a war footing immediately.

"If we cannot summon all our courage now, it will be too late tomorrow."

Another official notice eliminated the queues waiting to get food in hunger-threatened Madrid.

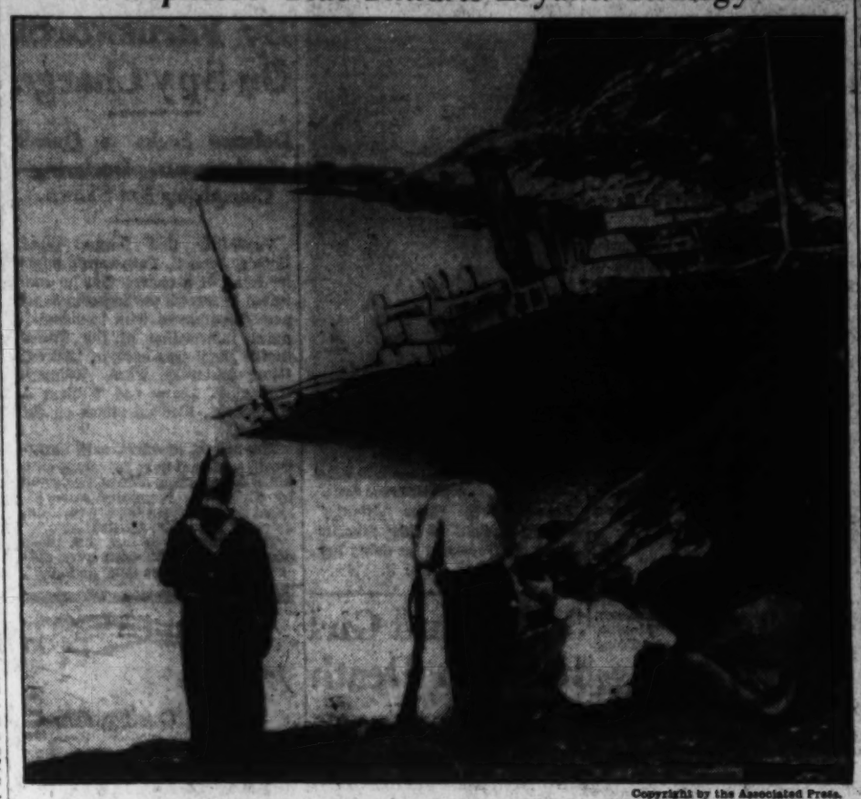

The government announced that ration cards would be distributed, enabling the Madrid residents to buy supplies in proportion to the size of their families.

In an effort to block the harbor of Pasajes before evacuating the city, Loyalists dynamited the steamer Jata-Mendi. The ship was broken in two by the explosion, but before it could be sunk, the tide swung it around and deposited it upon the beach, permitting insurgent ships to enter the harbor.

Alcazar Siege Suffering Told By Defenders

Horses Eaten, Babies Born, Water Rationed; Rebels Rush on to Madrid.

Each person had only a quart of water a day.

Said one survivor:

"Women and children first was the rule when the food was rationed out. All the flour, sardines and condensed milk dropped by the planes from our army was given to them.

"The 600 fighting men defending the building ate bread baked from flour pounded out as best we could."

Said Col. Jose Moscardo, leader of the defenders:

"We would never have given in, but it was becoming increasingly difficult. We had only one bottle of chloroform left for operations on the wounded. Food was so scarce I do not like to think about it.

"But always there was the spirit of sacrifice. One man was blown to bits when he crawled out for food over a dynamite mine just as it was exploded."

Then there was disclosed the tragic story of how Col. Moscardo had sacrificed his son rather than surrender the fortress.

Government attackers, so the account ran, sent Moscardo a note telling him that his son, held as a hostage, would be shot if the citadel were not surrendered.

This is the note the colonel sent back:

"Those traitors have proposed that I should save your life at the cost of the lives of my brave men and my honor. I hope you will die like a hero after praying loudly, 'Long live Spain!' Your life will then be eternal!"

The son was shot by a firing squad.

Survivors told of their womenfolk pitifully continuing daily household tasks as the rooms they called home trembled with shot, shell and dynamite blasts.

One cadet told of a humorous newspaper they managed to get out once when the siege was raised for a few hours.

"We wrote it," he said, "on blank pages of old books and documents which we found in the Alcazar.

"When paper became scarce, our commander gave orders to save the scraps for official use.

"One doctor with us worked ceaselessly, night and day.

"Every morning—we kept perfect discipline under ground—we attended mass. Every night we listened to the radio news from our comrades, which held up our spirits.

"The women were brave. Some of them insisted on accompanying the men on patrol duty.

"When the dynamite exploded we thought it was the end of the world."

Said another wounded survivor:

"No one spoke of the dead. Even the women hid their tears to avoid breaking down our courage.

"They were praying, praying, praying.

"At dawn last Saturday, we heard the first shots of our comrades' artillery and saw in the distance our red and gold flags hoisted at different places around Toledo.

"But suddenly, I felt a strange wrench.

"A bullet had got me * * * "

The cadet told of two women who had borne babies during the siege.

"The babies, like angels," he said, "came from Heaven to bless us.

"A special nursery was arranged and all in the Alcazar were allowed to see them and pray for their future, also again to swear to die before handing them up to the brutes outside."

The births, he said, were regarded by the defenders of the Alcazar as a prophecy of deliverance.

Arlington C. of C. Names Sprigg Aid

Meeting in Clarendon Community Hall, the Arlington County Chamber of Commerce last night elected R. P. Sprigg as its next secretary.

Discussion on the proposition of incorporating the county into a city produced varied opinions.

A special committe was named to study the proposal. Walter U. Barney was named its chairman. The other members were William A. Robey and John Cummins.

Earl Kirby, vice president, announced a roster of chamber members was being prepared.

The public utilities committee, of which H. W. Beattie is chairman, will confer with County Manager Frank C. Hanrahan in obtaining data on county-owned power, which will be presented to the chamber at its next meeting.

Devaluation Bill Faces Senate Revision After Chamber Approval.

cabinet full power to control the currency.

The bill goes before the Senate tomorrow. The main body met only briefly today and then referred the measure to the committee. Finance Minister Vincent Auriol insisted the measure must be voted tomorrow as French and world exchanges cannot afford further delay.

After the Senate had passed the measure, the revised bill must go before the Chamber of Deputies. When the bill finally is passed by both houses, the government will announce through the official journal the amount of the devaluation. This likely will appear not later than Friday morning and possibly will be published Thursday.

Meanwhile, the nation effected what is tantamount to a gold embargo. An official decree was publishde prohibiting export on re-export gold except with permission of the Bank of France.

It is recalled that on Monday the bank placed the minimum limit on gold to be withdrawn from the treasury at 5,000,000,000 francs, compared with 215,000 francs prevailing before the devaluation move started.

"Export Lira" Planned.

Rome, Sept. 29 (U.P.).—Italy today reportedly was planning an "export lira" to assure retention of her foreign trade after devaluation of the French franc.

The "export lira" will be 25 to 30 per cent cheaper than the present internal lira and will permit Italian exporters to compete in foreign markets.

The new lira likely will be announced Wednesday night or before the bourse is reopened Thursday.

Italy thus will have three forms of lira. The internal lira is used for purely domestic needs. The export lira will be used for foreign business. The tourist lira will be used by visitors to Italy.

Netherlands Defers Acton.

The Hague, Sept. 29 (U.P.).—Premier Hendrik Colijn today announced the government had not yet fixed the gold value of the guilder and that therefore there was no real devaluation in effect.

Schacht to Confer.

Berlin, Sept. 29 (U.P.).—Dr. Hjalmar Schacht, head of the Reichsbank, tomorrow is expected to discuss with the Reichsbank central committee conditions under which Germany can join the three-power currency truce.

It was considered highly unlikely that Germany would devalue, because the nation is a debtor with heavy liabilities in foreign currency which implies a gain from devaluation of currencies of creditor countries.

Swiss Council Acts.

Berne, Switzerland, Sept. 29.—The Swiss National Council, by a vote of 80 to 39, today approved devaluation of the Swiss franc by about 30 per cent. The monetary measure already had been approved by the upper house of the Swiss Parliament Monday.

The law calls for stabilization of the Swiss franc at between 190 and 215 milligrams of gold—a reduction of nearly 30 per cent.

World Parley Likely.

Geneva, Sept. 29 (A.P.).—An international economic conference, informed sources said tonight, may emerge from League of Nations economic discussions as a sequel to the proposed devaluation of the French franc under a "monetary equilibrium" accord with the United States and Great Britain.

France apparently would favor gradual abolition of quotas and exchange control, but it was thought likely France would ask such a move to be made general. This, officials said they believed, might lead to a restricted or general conference for the removal of trade restrictions.

Court Opens Test In Parole Violation Of 'Bugs' Donovan

Test of the right of the Parole Board to revoke the parole of James F. (Bugs) Donovan was begun in District Court yesterday when Donovan's attorneys challenged the right of the board to send him back to prison without any charges being filed against him except that he "violated his parole."

Donovan was sentenced to serve ten years for robbery in May, 1932, and was released on parole in November, 1934. Subsequently, the board revoked the lifting of the sentence and Donovan was recommitted.

Although he was charged with violating his parole, no specific charges were preferred against Donovan in his resentencing, the court was informed. Because of the absence of those charges, his reincarceration was illegal, the attorney said. The plea is expected to test the right of the board to revoke parole because of minor infractions of its regulations.

Landon Attacks Postal Moves Of Democrats

Says He Would, If Elected, Place Department on 'Business Basis.'

belt and dairy States of the Middle West leads to the conclusion that there has developed in these States a determination to end personal government in Washington with its squandering of our resources."

Reviewing the tour through Missouri, Iowa, Illinois, Minnesota and Wisconsin, which closed when his special train reached Topeka early today, the Kansan said "the farmers, the dairymen and the industrial workers not only are disturbed but aroused by the tendencies of the present National Administration."

Rain Prevents Ride.

He remained at home today to avoid interruption as he worked on speeches. Intermittent rain prevented a horseback ride.

Between calls on Landon, Taft addressed the Kansas State League of Women Voters, saying "the merit system in civil service is more a state of mind than a set of regulations."

"Most reform groups have failed to see until recently," he said, "that if the executive and the legislative departments of the city, county, State or Nation are not in sympathy with appointment on the basis of merit, the very best laws do not count for much.

"You in Kansas have been ahead of the rest of the country. You have insisted upon the spirit of the merit system and have not bothered much about the regulations. Your administrations, Republican and Democratic alike, with few exceptions have built up career service. You will not stand for assessments upon public employes to fill the party war chest.

"Your civil service law, adopted back in 1915, had certain faults which are being remedied by experience. You have the merit system in Kansas already working well, but capable of improvement under praiseworthy trial. Now you ought to make the regulations conform to the standards of the practice you have built up, which is the right way to evolve regulations in any event."

In the Landon camp, talk of a possible trip to Oklahoma City before the Great Lakes tour lessened today. Forecasts continued in some quarters that, returning from Detroit, the nominee would stop in Indianapolis for a brief address, but these were not confirmed by him.

CRANE BOILER HELPS PAY FOR ITSELF!
Why let your money go up in smoke any longer? A Crane Economy Boiler can end that needless waste for you. Here's why.
Light a match and hold your hand beside it. It just feels warm. But if you place your hand over the flame . . . it's hot!
In both cases, you were burning the same amount of fuel . . . the same match . . . but in the first case, you only felt warmth; and in the second, you felt heat.
A Crane Boiler has about 50% more of the heat-absorbing surface directly over the heating gases than the average boiler has. Further, patented baffles direct the water over the hottest part of the boiler.
That's 50% more surface that absorbs heat and not just warmth. You're paying for heat . . . why not get it?
"Everything about our new Crane Boiler makes us enthusiastic about it. It holds the fire longer, gives more heat—quicker, when we want it; and best of all we're not burning as much coal as last year."
HELEN LOUISE HECK, R. N.
Camp Hill, Pa.
And scores of others say the same thing about their new Crane Boilers.

Power Circles And President Confer Today

Pool of Electric Energy Is Topic Before Parley in White House.

Apart from the staccato sputtering of campaign artillery or part of it, the most significant single development bearing on the fall of the cards in the New Deal's 1936-1940 deck may spring from a White House conference table today.

The President himself has called the conference. Seated around one table will be the most diverse viewpoints on one subject possible to digest at one sitting. The issue is one that has rocked a broad section of industry from stem to stern—electric power.

Important utility interests, with which the Administration has warred without great success for the last three years, have been asked to sit in. The proposal is for these warring elements to cooperate peaceably in formation of a giant Southeastern power pool, and later others like it.

Still smarting from TVA and PWA power thrusts, and SEC regulatory gestures, the utility folk are puzzled by the invitation. It may be, as it appears on the surface, an olive branch. On the other hand, it may be, as it appears subsurface—a neatly spun web with the TVA at the center of it.

At all events, the future of the Federal power "yardstick" program, the future of the electric power and light industry under private ownership, and the future of TVA and PWA power ventures, may stem from this conference.

Some substance is given to the olive branch theory by the determination with which the utilities have waged their war in the courts.

The TVA is all dressed up just now, and no place to go. The first part of its vast power resources shortly will be ready for service. For weeks it has been trying to enter the big valley cities of Memphis, Chattanooga, Knoxville and Nashville.

The one thing that has been holding it up apparently is persistent utility litigation, which threatens to throw the whole TVA issue once more before the Supreme Court. The TVA has been so busy with lawsuits that it hasn't had much time to devote to its power "yardstick."

Twenty suits designed to obstruct the operations of the Tennessee Valley Authority have been filed in the past three years. Object of the litigation was the Federal program for distribution of surplus electricity. All but four of the cases are still in court. It is likely that several of the suits will remain undecided indefinitely.

Principal litigation centers in the Federal Court for the Eastern District of Tennessee. Nineteen private power companies challenged the constitutionality of TVA in their original suit, and in subsequent supplemental action asked the court to halt further extension of power activities until the constitutional questions are settled.

There is always a chance that one of these test cases may knock the Federal power program reeling, and send PWA and TVA the route of NRA and AAA. But whether or not they succeed, the Government's hands are pretty well tied up by the maze of lawsuits.

But another little item that the utility people are keeping in mind apparently is the vast surplus store of power that would accumulate in the Southeast if the TVA goes through with the program as once planned.

If 11 dams are constructed in the region by the Government, their combined output would equal that of the private utilities serving the area. Obviously, there would not be enough outlets in the area to consume it all. On a strictly competitive basis, someone would have to go under when the squeeze came. And with the Government subsidizing municipal electric systems and TVA power generation, chances are it would not be TVA.

All of which should explain why both sides are willing to sit down and talk now about pooling facilities, joint use of transmission lines and keeping new power generation to a minimum. Failure of the private companies to accept what appear to be co-operative overtures would leave them vulnerable to the Federal club of complete duplication of power service.

But the olive branch may yet turn out to be a sprig of thorns for the utilities. There were certain thorny phrases in the President's invitation which pricked.

The President added the phrase "as far as possible" when he spoke of avoiding hurt to private investment. Some observers thought there might be a catch in his term "actual" investment.

Blazes Retreat, Oregon Towns Reported Safe

By the Associated Press.

Marshfield, Oreg., Sept. 29.—Southwestern Oregon's disastrous fires lost their powerful ally, high wind, and retreated tonight before dense fog and the determined offensive of 5,000 fire fighters, battling to save towns in the path of the sweeping conflagrations.

From sections of southwestern Washintgon came reports that flames there were generally controlled, although some in the Klickitat section—out of the fog belt—were burning freely.

Officials, however, said all towns in the danger zone were safe—for the time being, at least.

A danger spot appeared at only one point—Yachats, in the central Oregon coast region.

Mrs. Harold Waldron, a storekeeper, said a fire was being whipped up by wind and was "just over the hill about a half-mile away from the town."

She said people in the town of 600 population "are all packing just in case the wind gets worse. All of the men folk are out at the fire and we won't know for a little time just what we are up against."

Yachats is directly on the coast and in a somewhat similar position to Bandon, logging town and seaport south of here which was destroyed by fire Saturday night with a loss of 11 lives. Two more bodies, those of a woman and child, were recovered there today.

District Fire Warden Keith Young estimated that 15,000 to 20,000 acres were burning in Coos and Curry Counties.

Coward Play Banned At English Resort

Bournemouth, England, Sept. 29. The corporation of this fashionable Southern seaside resort today banned performances of Noel Coward's "Fumed Oak" and D. H. Lawrence's "My Son Is My Son." Dame Sybil Thorndike was to have appeared in the Coward play.

"We certainly are not narrow-minded," said the pavilion manager, "but there are lines in the play ("Fumed Oak") which are completely undesirable for a local audience of fathers and mothers who bring young daughters and sons."

"See Ets and See Better"

If your child's record in school was poor last year, it's likely that eyestrain is the real cause. It would be well to have his eyes examined now.

3 Women Freed After Picketing Franco's Sale

Judge Dismisses Charges Against Sympathizers of Loyalist Cause.

Three persons do not make a parade, Judge Robert E. Mattingly ruled in Police Court yesterday as he dismissed charges against three women who were arrested for picketing the auction sale in which Maj. Ramon Franco, resigned Spanish air attache and brother of Gen. Francisco Franco, the Spanish rebel commander, disposed of his art treasures.

The three who were arrested in front of the auction rooms in the 700 block of Thirteenth street northwest, had been held on three counts of violating police regulations.

Sympathizers with the loyalist cause in Spain, they gave their names as Miss Mildred Egan, 27; Mrs. Cecilia Rowe, 29, and Mrs. Minnie Weinstein, 42. Each was charged with parading without a permit, enticing customers from a retail sale and violating the sign law.

Methods Assailed.

Judge Mattingly dismissed all the charges against the women after Howard C. Westwood, 26, their attorney, bitterly attacked the methods of the corporation counsel in presenting the case.

Westwood was trying his first criminal case.

The charge of violating the sign law was dismissed when Corporation Counsels Rice Hooe and George D. Neilson admitted to the Court the information which cited a violation of section 12 of the law drawn in error. The information should have been filed charging a violation against section 16, Neilson said.

Failure of the prosecutors to prove that the Washington Art Galleries, where the sale was held, was a retail store resulted in the dismissal of the charge of enticing customers from a sale.

Legal Definition.

The legal definition of what constitutes a parade formed the basis of Westwood's contention the parading charge should be thrown out.

To substantiate the charge the Government introduced a copy of the traffic regulations which in one section prohibits parading without first having obtained a license from the chief of police.

Westwood produced records showing the Court of Appeals has held a certified copy of all police regulations must be shown to the Court while the case is on trial.

Inasmuch as the Government failed to produce evidence that such a regulation even existed other than in a "paper-bound pamphlet" Westwood demanded the final charge be dismissed.

("The paper-bound pamphlet" referred to is a copy of the District traffic regulations amended to 1934.)

Only One Information.

In dismissing the charges Judge Mattingly said:

"There is only one information before me. It doesn't even tell me what regulations these defendants have violated. I have nothing to do with Franco or Spain. I have my own opinion which is contrary to those of the defendants.

"I cannot take judicial notice of a paper pamphlet. Where is the law that requires a permit to parade? It has not been presented to the Court."

Judge Mattingly commended Attorney Westwood on his presentation and arguments of the case.

Today Old Overholt takes the lead

IN LOWERING PRICES TO THE PUBLIC....

Now $1.89 per pint — lowest since Repeal for U. S. Bottled in Bond Whiskey

BACK of this new low price is a promise made by National Distillers at the time of repeal when fine whiskies were scarce.

That promise pledged lower prices to the public as rapidly as increasing supplies of matured whiskies became available.

Because of National Distillers' foresight in laying away generous stock for aging, these lower prices become a fact today.

You can now buy this robust Pennsylvania Straight Rye Whiskey — bottled in bond under U. S. Government supervision — four and a half years old — full 100 proof — at the prices published here.

Naturally Old Overholt now costs less over the bar

President Charges Republican Policies Breed Communism in Opening Campaign

Asserts Issue Is 'Red Herring,' Cites Record

Executive Assails Pledges of Republican Foes as Contradictory.

By the Associated Press.

Syracuse, Sept. 29.—Here is the text of President Roosevelt's speech tonight before the Democratic State convention:

Tonight you and I join forces for the 1936 campaign. We enter it with confidence. Never was there greater need for fidelity to the underlying conception of Americanism than there is today. And once again it is given to our party to carry the message of that Americanism to the people.

The task on our part is twofold: First, as simple patriotism requires to separate the false from the real issues; and, secondly, with facts and without rancor, to clarify the real problems for the American public.

There will be—there are—many false issues. In that respect, this will be no different from other campaigns. Partisans, not willing to face realities, will drag out red herrings—as they have always done—to divert attention from the trail of their own weaknesses.

Cites Precedents in Past.

This practice is as old as our democracy. Avoiding the facts—fearful of the truth—a malicious opposition charged that George Washington planned to make himself king under a British form of government; that Thomas Jefferson planned to set up a guillotine under a French revolutionary form of government; that Andrew Jackson soaked the rich of the Eastern seaboard and planned to surrender American democracy to the dictatorship of a frontier mob. They called Abraham Lincoln a Roman emperor; Theodore Roosevelt a destroyer; Woodrow Wilson a self-constituted messiah.

In this campaign another herring turns up. It has been British and French—and a variety of other things. This year is is Russian. Desperate in mood, angry at failure, cunning in purpose, individuals and groups are seeking to make communism an issue in an election where communism is not a controversy between the two major parties.

Here and now, once and for all, let us bury that red herring, and destroy that false issue. You are familiar with my background; you know my heritage. And you are familiar, especially in the State of New York, with my public service extending back over a quarter of a century. For nearly four years I have been President of the United States. A long record has been written. In that record, both in this State and in the National Capital, you will find a simple, clear and consistent adherence not only to the letter, but to the spirit of the American form of government.

Repudiates Communist Aid.

To that record, my future and the future of my Administration will conform. I have not sought, I do not seek, I repudiate, the support of any advocate of communism or of any other alien 'ism" which would by fair means or foul change our American democracy.

That is my position. It always has been my position. It always will be my position.

There is no difference between the major parties as to what they think about communism.

There is a very great difference between the two parties in what they do about communsm.

Communism is a manifestation of the social unrest which always comes with widespread economic maladjustment. We in the Democratic Party have not been content merely to denounce this menace. We have been realistic enough to face it. We have been intelligent enough to do something about it. And the world has seen the results of what we have done.

In the spring of 1933 we faced a crisis which was the ugly fruit of 12 years of neglect of the causes of economic and social unrest. It was a crisis made to order for all who would overthrow our form of government.

Do I need to recall to you the fear of those days—the reports of those who piled supplies in their basements, who laid plans to get their fortunes across the border, who got themselves hideaways in the country against the impending upheaval?

Recites Hardships of 1932.

Do I need to recall the law-abiding heads of peaceful families, who began to wonder, as they saw their children starve, how they could get the bread they saw in the bakery window?

Do I need to recall the homeless boys who were traveling in bands through the country seeking work and food—desperate because they could find neither?

Starting in 1911, a Democratic leadership came into power, and with it a new philosopy of government. I had the good fortune to come into public office at that time. I found other young men in the Legislature—man who held the same philosophy—one of them was Bob Wagner, another was Al Smith. We were all joined in a common cause. We did not look on government as something apart from the people. We thought of it it as something to be used by the people for their own good

New factory legislation setting up decent standards of safety and sanitation; limitation of the working hours of women in industry; a workmen's compensation law; a one-day rest in seven; a full train crew law; a direct primary law—these laws and many more were passed which were then called radical and alien to our form of government. Would you or any other Americans call them radical and alien today?

Refers to Business Pleas.

Do I need to recall the farmers who banded together with pitchforks to keep the sheriff from selling the farm home under foreclosure? Do I need to recall the powerful leaders of industry and banking who came to me in Washington in those early days of 1933 pleading to be saved?

Most people in the United States remember today the fact that starvation was averted, that homes and farms were saved, that banks were reopened, that crop prices rose, that industry revived and the dangerous forces subversive of our form of government were turned aside.

A few people—a few only—unwilling to remember, seem to have forgotten those days.

In the summer of 1933, a nice old gentleman, wearing a silk hat, fell off the end of a pier. He was unable to swim. A friend ran down the pier, dived overboard and pulled him out, but the silk hat floated off with the tide. After the old gentleman had been resuscitated he was effusive in his thanks. He praised his friend for saving his life. Today, three years later, the old gentleman is berating his friend because the silk hat was lost.

Why did the crisis of 1929 to 1932 pass without disaster?

The answer is found in the record of what we did. Early in the campaign of 1932 I said: "To meet by reaction that danger of radicalism is to invite disaster. Reaction is no barrier to the radical—it is a challenge, a provocation. The way to meet that danger is to offer a workable program of reconstruction, and the party to offer it is the party with clean hands."

Says Emergency Action Needed.

We met the emergency with emergency action. But far more important than that, we went to the roots of the problem and attacked the cause of the crisis. We were against revolution. Therefore, we waged war against those conditions which make revolutions—against the inequalities and resentments which breed them.

In America in 1933 the people did not attempt to remedy wrongs by overthrowing their institutions. Americans were made to realize that wrongs could and would be set right within their institutions. We proved that democracy can work.

I have said that there is a very great difference between the two parties in what they do about Communism. Conditions congenial to Communism were being bred and fostered throughout this Nation right up to the very day of March 4, 1933. Hunger was breeding it. Loss of homes and farms was breeding it. Closing banks were breeding it. A ruinous price level was breeding it. Discontent and fear were spreading through the land. The previous National Administration, bewildered, did nothing.

In their speeches they deplored it but by their actions they encouraged it. The injustices, the inequalities, the downright suffering out of which revoultions come—what did they do about these things? Lacking courage, they evaded. Being selfish, they neglected. Being short-sighted, they ignored. When the crisis came—as these wrongs made it sure to come—America was unprepared.

Recalls Fear of Money.

Our lack of preparation for it was best proved by the cringing and the fear of the very people whose indifference helped to make the crisis.

They came to us pleading that we should do, overnight, what they should have been doing through the years.

And the simple causes of our unpreparedness were two: First, weak leadership, and, secondly, an inability to understand the reasons for social unrest—the tragic plight of 90 per cent of the men, women and children who made up the population of the United States.

It has been well said—"the most dreadful failure of which any form of government can be guilty is simply to lose touch with reality, because out of this failure all imaginable forms of evil grow. Every empire that has crashed has come down primarily because its rulers didn't know what was going on in the world and were incapable of learning."

It is for that reason that our American form of government will continue to be safest in Democratic hands. The real, actual, undercover Republican leadership is the same as it was four years ago. That leadership will never comprehend the needs for a program of social justice and of regard for the well-being of the masses of our people.

Draws Parallel in New York.

I have been comparing leadership in Washintgon. This contrast between Democratic and Republican leadership holds true throughout the length and breadth of the State of New York. As far back as the year 1910, the old Black Horse Cavalry in Albany was failing to meet changing conditions by appropriate social legislation. Here was a State noted for its industry and noted for its agriculture—a State with the greatest mixture of population—where the poorest and the richest lived, literally, within a stone's throw of each other—in short, a situation made to order for unrest. And yet in this situation the best the Republican leaders of those days could say was: "Let them eat cake." What would have happened if that reactionary domination had continued throughout all these hard years?

In later years, first under Gov. Smith, then during my governorship, this program of practical intelligence was carried forward over the typical and unswerving opposition of the Republican leaders throughout the State.

Today the great tradition of a liberal, progressive Democratic Party has been carried still further by your present Governor, Herbert H. Lehman. He has begun a program of insurance to remove the spectre of unemployment from the working people of the State.

Broadened Legislation.

He has broadened our labor legislation. He has extended the supervision of public utility companies. He has proved himself an untiring seeker for the public good; a doer of social justice; a wise, conscientious, clear-headed and businesslike administration of the executive branch of our government. And be it noted that his opponents are led and backed by the same forces and the same individuals who, for a quarter of a century, have tried to hamstring progress within our State. The lises of the past. Gov. Lehman knows and I know how little legislation in the interest of the average citizen would be on the statute books in the State of New York, and of the Federal Government, if we had waited for Republican leaders to pass it.

The same lack of purpose of fulfillment lies behind the promises of today. You can not be an Old Guard Republican in the East, and a New Deal Republican in the West. You can not promise to repeal taxes before one audience and promise to spend more of the taxpayers' money before another audience. You cannot promise tax relief for those who can afford to pay, and, at the same time, promise more of the taxpayers' money for those who are in need. You simply cannot make good on both promises at the same time.

Who is there in America who believes that we can run the risk of turning back our Government to the old leadership which brought it to the brink of 1933? Out of the strains and stresses of these years we now come to see that the true conservative is the man who has a real concern for injustices and takes thought against the day of reckoning. The true conservative seeks to protect the system of private property and free enterprise by correcting such injustices and inequalities as arise from it. The most serious threat to our institutions comes from those who refuse to face the need for change. Liberalism becomes the protection for the far-sighted conservative.

Never has a nation made greater strides in the safeguarding of democracy than we have made during the past three years. Wise and prudent men—intelligent conservatives—have long known that in a changing world worthy institutions can be conserved only by adjusting them to the changing time. In the words of the great essayist, "The voice of great events is proclaiming to us—reform if you would preserve."

I am that kind of conservative because I am that kind of a liberal.

mention of his name in a New York Democratic convention.

And yet that is what happened tonight. Boos were mingled with applause when the President first mentioned Al Smith's name. Quickly, Mr. Roosevelt passed on in order to cut short this apparently unexpected reaction.

Stalwarts Back Him.

Whatever may be the outcome in this State of the campaign which was opened tonight, President Roosevelt seems to have the enthusiastic backing of the party stalwarts. They cheered him until they were hoarse and, as the Smith incident demonstrated, stood ready to assault a former hero for Mr. Roosevelt.

Given a noisy, ear-splitting ovation as he came to the front of the platform, President Roosevelt soon had his audience in laughter as, with facial expressions and by recalling the cry of "King" applied to George Washington and earlier Presidents, he sought to ridicule the accusations of "dictator" leveled at him.

But the audience listened more attentively when he brought up the charge of "communism." It is an issue which is said to have disturbed many of the red-faced Irish Democratic leaders who sat before Mr. Roosevelt tonight. In recent days their minds have become uneasy over talk that David Dubinsky—one of the Democratic Presidential electors in this State, had contributed to the support of Spanish Communists. The name Dubinsky had been on many Democratic lips at this convention, for only yesterday Arthur T. O'Leary, a prominent Catholic layman of the State and a friend of Chairman James A. Farley, as well as Al Smith, made public a letter to the former asserting he could not vote for President Roosevelt because of Dubinsky's presence among the electors—and the Irish Catholic vote in this State is essential to Democratic success. Consequently, these Democratic shock troops leaned forward when the President uttered the word "communism."

Audience Roars.

It was a "red herring"—a false issue, asserted the President with a smile and his audience roared with laughter. "You are familiar with my background," the President added and thunderous approving applause came back. Going on, Mr. Roosevelt, amid outbursts of applause, recalled his background, his heritage and his record of public service. And then as the President assumed a serious demeanor, the huge armory hall became strangely quiet.

"A long record has been written," asserted Mr. Roosevelt, in a slow, deliberate tone. "In that record, both in this State and in the National Capital, you will find a simple, clear and consistent adherence not only to the letter but to the spirit of the American form of government."

Again there was applause—cut short, however, as Mr. Roosevelt threw back his head.

"To that record, my future and the future of my Administration will conform," asserted Mr. Roosevelt and again there was applause, quickly followed by strange, expectant silence. The President did not disappoint that expectancy which he had inspired.

"I have not sought," he said in measured tones and with his eyes flashing, "I do not seek—I repudiate (his voice rising)—the support of any advocate of communism or of any other alien 'ism,' which would by fair means or foul change our American democracy."

But the deafening thunder of applause which rose from 10,000 throats drowned out all words after "communism." The applause continued for more than a full minute and then resumed a few seconds later when Mr. Roosevelt audibly finished his sentence.

From the standpoint of the audience, that was the climax of the speech. It brought many of them to their feet and met the question which apparently was in many of their minds. Only once again—except for the ovation at the end of the speech—did the applause reach any proportionate volume. That was when the President asked whether he need recall "the powerful leaders of industry and banking who came to me (with emphasis on those words) in Washington in those early days of 1933, pleading to be saved."

Even Mr. Roosevelt's caustic assault on the State Republican leadership and on Gov. Alf M. Landon's campaign tactics brought more laughter than applause. And yet that, too, was a significant part of the speech, for it revealed the Roosevelt strategy in this campaign.

It revealed Mr. Roosevelt proposes to dog Gov. Landon's heels with memories of the former reactionary leadership of his party in this State and many other places—a leadership which the President insisted remained unchanged underneath the party reforms. He proposes to pit the economic recovery under the New Deal against the crisis which existed when the Republicans relinquished their power in 1933, and he proposes to contend that Gov. Landon—whom he did not name—was trying to be all things to all people.

"You cannot be an Old Guard Republican in the East and a New Deal Republican in the West," Mr. Roosevelt asserted, apparently aiming directly at Gov. Landon. "You cannot promise to repeal taxes before one audience and promise to spend more of the taxpayers' money before another audience. You cannot promise tax relief for those who can afford to pay, and, at the same time, promise more of the taxpayers' money for those who are in need. You simply cannot make good on both promises at the same time."

In conclusion, Mr. Roosevelt maintained that the "old leadership" which brought the Government to the "brink of 1933" could not be trusted to carry it on, since "the most serious threat to our institutions comes from those who refuse to face the need for change."

The "true conservative," he said, "seeks to protect the system of private property and free enterprise by correcting such injustices and inequalities as arise from it."

He ended with words of an unnamed essayist that "the voice of great events is proclaiming to us: Reform if you would preserve."

"I am that kind of a conservative because I am that kind of a liberal," he said.

Col. Knox Brands Roosevelt 'Waster'

Detroit, Sept. 29 (AP).—Col. Frank Knox, Republican Vice Presidential nominee, mapped a campaign tour of Ohio tonight after he assailed President Roosevelt before the Michigan Republican State Convention as "the waster."

The Chicago publisher told 1,402 applauding delegates in Grand Rapids "you must choose in November between Franklin Delano Roosevelt, the waster, and Alf M. Landon, the saver."

"The American people got tired of the show," he declared in referring to the Roosevelt Administration. "They cannot get their money back, but they are not going to spend any more of it. They are going to call off the show in November."

He repeated an assertion that the Nation's banks "are swollen to the explosion point with Government bonds" and the "values of our savings and life insurance are endangered by inflation."

Admiral Sims.

Admiral William S. Sims, who died Monday at the age of 77, was a sea dog with none too reverend an attitude toward the dogmas of bureaucracy.

Whenever, throughout his long life, he felt strongly on any subject where his knowledge was profound, or his convictions strong, he spoke his mind. And he invariably did so with a bland disregard of the embarrassments his actions might cause his superiors and the possible consequences to himself. On more than one occasion, in fact, he barely escaped court-martial. But sooner or later, he generally had the satisfaction of seeing his ideas carried out.

It took him almost ten years to convince the authorities that something ought to be done to improve naval marksmanship and battleship design. He bombarded the department with ideas which, at first, were relegated to dusty pigeonholes. But through the intervention of President Theodore Roosevelt, who liked Sims' fiery impatience with incompetence and forgave him his breaches of discipline, the reforms preached by Sims were ultimately carried out.

Sometimes his outspokenness was not well-advised. As a naval officer it was distinctly not his place to dabble in international politics. This is exactly what he did when, in the famous Guildhall speech of 1910, he promised the British that should the time ever come when the British empire was in danger, the American people would come to their aid "with every ship, every dollar, every man and every drop of blood." As it happened, this statement also proved prophetic. But its prescience did not lessen the shock to diplomatic equilibrium.

However, on balance, the role of stormy petrel which Admiral Sims played with such gusto was very useful. Not least of his services to the Nation was as the man in command of American naval operations in European waters when, in close co-operation with the British, he helped end the menace of the submarine.

Mr. Winant's Resignation.

The bitter disappointment felt by John G. Winant at the character of Gov. Landon's attack upon the social security program can be readily appreciated. As a leader in the social security movement the former Republican Governor of New Hampshire has been a powerful factor in marshaling nonpartisan support for this attempt to ease the burdens of the less fortunate groups in our economic setup. That part of Gov. Landon's Milwaukee address which attacked the results of these efforts naturally aroused resentment in the able chairman of the Social Security Board.

That Gov. Winant did not strike back until he had resigned his post suggests also a proper respect for the nonpartisan character of the board. "I do not feel," he wrote the President in submitting his resignation, "that members of independent commissions or boards, such as the Social Security Board, should take an active part in politics." Too few officials occupying positions of this sort manifest such scruples. In so far as Mr. Winant was determined to keep the board completely aloof from politics his action is entirely commendable.

A grave question arises, however, as to whether a man of Mr. Winant's capacity and experience can be of greater service to the cause of social security on the political stump than as director of the board which is getting unemployment insurance and old-age pension systems into operation. The co-operative Federal and State machinery designed to carry out this program is still in the critical stage of organization. When Mr. Winant leaves this work to answer a political attack he seems to attach entirely too much importance to campaign oratory.

Gov. Landon could have properly discussed the weak points in the present social security law without subjecting it to what could be regarded as partisan attack. His address would doubtless have been stronger if he had done so. For both parties are committed to the objective of minimizing the vicissitudes of old age and unemployment. That aim is in no way a partisan issue.

The unfortunate aspect of Mr. Winant's resignation and subsequent speech is that they in turn tend to magnify partisan aspects of a controversy that should never have become involved in politics. The social security act can be ably defended without disrupting the board which is putting it into effect. In spite of Mr. Winant's admirable desire to keep this entire undertaking aloof from political dispute his action is not unlikely to have precisely the opposite effect. Two mistakes seldom cancel each other out, particularly in politics.

Canada's Cattle Quota.

It appears that Gov. Landon's condemnation of the cattle provisions of the Canadian trade agreement would have been deprived of much of its political effectiveness had it been withheld just two days.

At Minneapolis, last Thursday night, the Republican nominee assailed the concession made by the United States to Canada in respect to cattle without dwelling either on the extent of the concession or the limitations within which it is circumscribed. Two days later much less publicity was given to a routine Treasury announcement showing that the concession on cattle is virtually at an end for this year.

Under the terms of the Canadian agreement the tariff rate on cattle weighing 700 pounds or more was reduced from 3 to 2 cents a pound. But to this concession was attached an important qualification limiting the reduced duty to a quota amounting to three-fourths of 1 per cent of the average annual total slaughter of cattle during the years 1928-32. This limitation meant maximum imports, at the reduced duty, of approximately 156,000 head of cattle, from all countries. Since imports of cattle of the specified weight have in the past come almost entirely from Canada it was assumed that country would derive most benefit from the concession.

When Gov. Landon made his Minneapolis speech, some 95 per cent of the 1936 cattle quota had already been imported. And with approaching completion of the quota all cattle importers have, since last Monday, been required to deposit duties at the full tariff rate. Refunds will be made later for the few animals still admissible under the reduced tariff. Obviously much of the edge would have been taken off Gov. Landon's attack had he said that the situation he condemned was virtually at an end, as far as this year is concerned.

The cattle prices cited by Mr. Landon at Minneapolis might also have been brought more closely up to date. He intimated that from January to June the Canadian importations forced the price down from $9.75 to $7.25 a hundredweight. Mr. Landon did not mention either that various other factors affected that decline, or the fact that prices when he made his speech had already climbed back to $8.65 per hundredweight. And the consumer can regard himself as exceedingly fortunate if this rising price tendency does not continue.

On three points the Administration appears to have been ill-advised in making the cattle concession, small though it was, from which so much political capital has recently been extorted.

To lower duties on meat of foreign origin, so soon after the hog-restriction program of Secretary Wallace, was bound to emphasize the inconsistencies between the AAA and the trade agreement program. Gov. Landon was richly entitled to drive this contradiction home to the American public, though the moral to be drawn is clearly more adverse to Mr. Wallace than to Mr. Hull.

A second doubtful decision was that placing the quota of importable cattle on an annual rather than a monthly basis, thus encouraging relatively large importations in the early part of the year. So far as the domestic livestock interests are concerned these early imports naturally outweighed the fact that for the last quarter of the year the concession to Canadian cattle will be completely inoperative.

A third mistake was in the failure to realize that the agreement would result in the import of many more Mexican cattle than was anticipated. Contrary to expectations, one out of every six head to come in under the quota has been imported from Mexico. This has both diminished the value of the concession made to Canada and has given point, in respect to Mexico, to Mr. Landon's charge that it is not reciprocity to make "a concession to foreign nations without getting anything in return."

The various reciprocal trade agreements made by the Administration are all subject to revision in the light of experience. Mr. Landon has shown, with respect to the Canadian pact, several instances in which minor changes would seem advisable. Indeed he has argued the desirability of adjustments and revisions much more clearly than the case for that basic alteration in policy which he set out to prove.

Brawn On The Stump.

When a playwright models his theme after nature, that is old stuff. But when a politician takes his cue from the stage, that's news. A Pulitzer prize attested the artistic quality of the musical comedy, "Of Thee I Sing," which included a scene showing professional wreslers entertaining a political gathering. And now, the New York Democratic headquarters has announced that Jack Dempsey will escort a troupe of wrestlers on a tour of the State to campaign for President Roosevelt.

The Democrats are doing nothing new in enlisting the support of athletes. Jesse Harper, who used to coach the Irish of Notre Dame, is now coaching Landon speakers in Kansas, and Jesse Owens is neglecting his sprints to work for the G. O. P. Performers in football, track, boxing and wrestling have in turn been called upon to come to the aid of their party. Unless the S. P. C. A. takes precautions, Man o' War himself will not be safe in retirement.

Speakers who have lost their amateur standing as politicians are often, we admit, no more conscious of the real issues than many a wrestler. Yet the public may well be suspicious of ulterior motives behind this deliberate recruiting of strong-arm men from sports. Even if these campaigners confine themselves to argumentation, it is an uncomfortable feeling to think what they might do with a hammer-lock.

Moreover, political audiences are not likely to be interested in mere wrestlers. Any politician is ready to give a wrestling demonstration with any subject at any time. If the campaign managers are really going in for sports, their best bet would be to produce an equilibrist who can balance the budget. And we said balance, not juggle.

German Financial Isolation.

Following French action, Switzerland and the Netherlands, the last remaining members of the gold bloc and the only two nations whose units of exchange have, until now, remained at prewar parity, are also preparing to devalue their currencies.

It is clear, therefore, that the agreement concluded last week by the French, British and American governments involves far more than the establishment of a new franc-pound-dollar ratio. This is important in itself. But the spreading nature of the action taken by France, a circumstance emphasized by what Switzerland and the Netherlands have done and by the more recent action of Latvia and Greece in devaluing their currencies to bring them in line with sterling, shows that more is at stake.

There is now at least a possibility of completing the work of stabilization begun at the London Economic Conference of 1933, but then abruptly terminated by President Roosevelt's unforgettable bombshell. This can easily be understood if we remember the wide extent of what is sometimes called the "sterling area." All those nations whose currency units move within the British or American or French financial orbits are, indeed, silent partners of the new tripartite agreement.

In that connection Secretary Morgenthau's blunder in spinning out of thin air an alleged "plot" by Russia to depress the pound is the more unfortunate. It has created justified resentment in a quarter which otherwise would have no reason for refusing to join with the increasing circle of nations now prepared to join in a program looking toward monetary stabilization. However Russia's irritation with Mr. Morgenthau's clumsy contribution to domestic politics will scarcely stand in the way of Moscow's alignment with the other capitals, as events permit.

Aside from Japan, therefore, the only important nations which, actually or in prospect, cannot be regarded as associated with the Franco-British-American stabilization move are Italy and Germany. What Italy will do is not yet clear. But in the Reich high financial authority has stated that "under no circumstances will Germany devalue."

This may well be so. The German authorities may decide that the policy of autarchy must be continued because no other alternative is open to them. But the developments now taking place in the European financial sphere are none the less likely to emphasize the increasing economic difficulties of the Reich. Switzerland, the Netherlands and France have been among Germany's leading customers, buying more from the Reich than they have sold to her. In part this has come about through the operations of barter arrangements and the system employed by Germany of paying its foreign debts with goods. But in part, too, it has been the result of the fact that all three nations remained on the gold standard while the German mark is, so far as foreign trade is concerned, below par.

This advantage which Germany has enjoyed will now tend to disappear and German trade, already severely restricted, will be damaged further. Costly as the attempt to secure autarchy has already been it is likely to prove even more so with the former gold-bloc nations pursuing the path of co-operative devaluation.

An eminent physician says 50 per cent of the doctors would starve if people would learn to control their emotions. Yes, and 90 per cent of the politicians wouldn't be any too fat.

A statistician announces that all the people in the world could be packed in a box a half mile square and a half mile deep. Somehow, the idea doesn't appeal to us.

"Because inflation is imminent, it's harder for the little fellow to borrow money now than it was during the depression," declares a banker. This sounds like adding difficulty to impossibility.

Rosenbach Treasures.

From the Literary Digest.

"The one book I want and can't get is a 1593 'Venus and Adonis,'" declared Dr. Abraham S. Wolf Rosenbach on his sixtieth birthday. "It was the first work of Shakespeare to appear in print and the only copy is in the Bodleian Library at Oxford." The value? Somewhere around $250,000.

Rounding out five decades of book collecting, the Philadelphia multimillionaire bibliophile knows of few rare items which, if they have not already passed through his hands, he could not buy. Starting early as a fancier, Dr. Rosenbach has never collected anything but books; nearly 1,000,000 tomes in Latin, English and French have come into his possession.

He paid $78,500 for the original manuscript of "Alice in Wonderland," $51,000 for the autograph of Button Gwinnett, a signer of the Declaration of Independence, and $106,000 for a Gutenberg Bible—said to be the highest sum ever offered for a book at auction.

He has also given more than $1,000,000 for several libraries. Admitted expert and enthusiast, Dr. Rosenbach was nevertheless perplexed, if amused, when an enterprising film concern queried him recently on the market value of a Shirley Temple autograph.

Challenge To The Church.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: One of the finest letters to the Editor of The Post I have ever read is that of J. O. Knott in your publication of September 28. For weeks I have been thinking over this same idea and trying to express it in calm, truthful language. Mr. Knott came to the rescue. He expressed exactly what I wanted to say, yet felt in too vindictive a mood to express it as simply, forcibly and truthfully as he did.

There is only one suggestion I would like to make. Brice said that a government is only as good as the people in it. The same applies to all churches. If these churches do not stand for the service of humanity it is not the fault of their creeds or clergymen: rather is it the fault of their members because no church is any better than its worshipers.

EDWARD HOPKINS.
Chevy Chase, Sept. 28.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Mr. J. O. Knott in his letter headlined "Our Concern Is With the Cause" appearing in your issue of September 28 drives a nail into the crux of what is slowly but surely dividing the world (society) into two camps—the classes and the masses—the inevitable result of the voluntary and involuntary evils of the present social and economic order.

The creditor class is gradually lining up behind the forces of fascism, and the debtor mass is being forced into the columns of the communistic class, whether they like it or not.

The propagandists of fascism are daubing with the stripes of communism everyone who expresses dissatisfaction with the present social, economic and religious order, and they are daubing communism with the stripes of anarchism, neither of which are true characterizations of the real underlying cause for the frantic fear that has gripped social, economic, political, and, I regret to say, religious order.

What we know as the vested interests are a vital part of the present social, political and economic order, and the destruction of one means the destruction of the other, but why should the churches be so interested in maintaining an order which Christ and the prophets have said must be destroyed to make way for the promised eternal order under the Kingdom of God and Christ?

The church should not fear the rule of Christ and his Kingdom, even though its establishment is going to bring the greatest tribulation the world has ever known. It is the same alignment of classes that resulted in the crucifixion of Christ, and which He castigated in words reported in Matthew XXIII.

C. A. M. WELLS.

Father Coughlin's Tactics.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Thank you for that editorial on Father Coughlin. Intemperate criticism seldom accomplishes its purpose. Stinging epithets, wild charges and billingsgate such as characterizes the attacks of Father Coughlin make it difficult to focus attention on the message conveyed to the public. Undoubtedly he has made some timely observations; however, he generally obscures the real issue by a flow of crude abuse. By distorted invective he robs undistorted conclusions of half their effect.

He was for Roosevelt—that is, until he tried to be the Administration's Cardinal Richelieu. He is not a just man and therefore it is never certain whether his gifts of analysis and invective will be employed to prosecute the guilty or to prosecute those whose views he dislikes. He has shown himself to be a man of deep and reckless prejudices, although he is ordained to the Christian ministry and pledged to oppose the doctrine of hate and intemperance.

Possibly he is a sincere upholder of those personal liberties which are guaranteed by the Constitution, and yet by such talk as the use of bullets in place of ballots he proves himself to be cruelly intolerant. With less ill-manners and some of the dignity of his ecclesiastical position he could perhaps become one of the most effective opponents of demagogic practices in the country, yet his own demagogic outburst is at times venomous. He believes in freedom of opinion, but he has no respect for the opinions of others. His opponents are always liars, rascals and worse. To Father Coughlin, every argument is a quarrel, every quarrel is a fight, every fight a massacre.

Indictment From Arkansas?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your Saturday's editorial, "Peonage in Arkansas," argues both ignorance and stupidity.

Ignorance, because the internal evidence would indicate its writer has never been in the State mentioned, or in any similar area which might give him an insight into life as it is lived in the richest cotton lands of the United States.

Stupidity, because it condemns a people on the basis of an indictment against one individual; because it assumes before trial that, whether the individual is guilty or innocent, the charges themselves are true of somebody, and because it displays an inclination to lay, by force, one's social opinions on another people. You should know that it was precisely your kind, clamoring in the periodicals of both North and South, who were responsible for the Civil War, although they left the battles themselves to be fought by braver men. Lastly, the piece shows stupidity because, instead of promoting amity between sections, it sacrifices what progress might be gained thereby to the stirring up of such resentment as this.

BRECKINRIDGE C. TELFORD.
Washington, Sept. 27.

Democrats Undefined.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Like so many of those opposing Mr. Roosevelt's re-election Mr. J. D. Mason in The Post of September 26 flaunts himself as a true Democrat, the inference being, of course, that Mr. Roosevelt is no longer such. Mr. Mason and others of the same bent carefully omit to define what a true Democrat is, and they likewise studiously avoid furnishing a bill of particulars setting out the damaging reasons why Mr. Roosevelt should be made to forfeit the people's confidence.

Mr. Mason chides me for having voted for Hoover and then he rambles on in vague generalities about Roosevelt's alleged destruction of business and industrial confidence. Of course, it is too much to expect either Mr. Mason or the chief campaigner, Mr. Landon, to revert to the dark days of March, 1933, and tell us who revived business and industry then, and who not only restored their confidence but plucked them from the depths of despair.

H. L. HALSEY.

"Curtain Call."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Whatever the loose-end comment on the Ethiopia cartoon, the G. A. R. "Curtain Call" is complete in every respect—sentiment, conception and execution—all that is best in the art.

This from one whose father, a Civil War veteran of the Twenty-fourth New Jersey Volunteers, was seriously wounded in action at Chancellorsville after having participated in the battle of Fredericksburg. For him, the curtain fell, and he answered the call, in 1913; but up to the hour of the closing scene he was justly proud of his part as a soldier in the preservation of the Union.

F. B. WATSON.

Ku Klux Klan In Arlington County.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Especially provoking was the article on the Arlington County Ku Klux in The Post of September 27. Rather bold was Dragon Bittings' answer as to what he would have the Klan do if a "Communist" moved into Arlington County. Bittings says that the Klan would organize a parade past the man's house . . . hundreds of white hoods would stream up and down in the road by the man's windows. If that didn't scare him, a public meeting would be called and a fiery cross burned.

This is the kind of super-Americanism that the Klan will practice: It will take hundreds of "night hawks, magis, monks and turks," robed in bedsheets, to scare one alleged Communist. Who will determine who is a Communist? Do the people of Arlington intend to tolerate this kind of "Americanism?" Will they let themselves be duped?

The article by Osgood Nichols shows that often rivalries and politics developed within the Klan. Then it was that the grander kleagles framed the lesser kleagles. That was in the days before the "red" scare. Today any dissenting group within the Klan will automatically be labeled as "un-American" and in cahoots with Moscow. Is this terrorism in harmony with the spirit and history of the State of Virginia?

ROBERT EVANS.
Washington, Sept. 27.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I am curious to know whether The Post writer had to stick his tongue very tight in his cheek when he wrote the following touching description of the present-day Klan:

"During the intervening years it has slumbered along as a quiet benevolent association, which does a great deal of good in various localities . . . in Arlington County, the Klan gives out large baskets of food to the poor at Christmas time. It holds card parties, bingo parties and picnics."

I would be the last person to suspect bingo parties harboring anti-social and un-American properties, but when we remember the reign of terror the Ku Klux Klan has spread over America during the years of its existence, and when we also remember that the slums of Arlington County are among the most loathsome in the world, we are forced to accept with a grain of salt the value of this pseudo-Black Legion to humanity and government.

It is significant that the Klan does not attack fascism. Why? Because this organization is recruited from the same disappointed strata of society that forms the bulk of Hitler's legions, only Hitler's hired assassins are not ashamed of their work and do not cover their faces in pillow cases as do our Southern fascists.

The Klan, ever a definite threat to orderly government, says in effect—the American Government is a failure, its law enforcement bodies, both State and Federal, are a failure, we must get together a lot of racketeers who call themselves kleagles, and dragons, and what-nots, and sell sheets to the small business man and disillusioned white-collar workers, and tell them it is their duty to persecute the Jews, and Negroes, and Catholics, and make America a country to be ashamed of; the laughing stock of the world; the home of the Black Legion, and gangsters, and cheap politicians making a mockery of liberty and culture and democracy, under the disguise of fighting communism. This is the true un-American Klan.

SOUTHERNER.
Alexandria, Va., Sept. 27.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Coming as it does right after the A. F. G. E. convention at which the red scare was used to expel 800 members from Washington, is it not possible that the present revival of the Ku Klux Klan for the sole purpose of fighting "reds" is in some way tied up with the present leadership of the A. F. G. E.? If there is no official connection there certainly seems to be a cause and effect relationship. The red baiting of the A. F. G. E. has given the Klan its cue. They must take the responsibility.

Christianity In Spain.

I WONDER if I am the only one who has felt some puzzlement over the apparent paradox in Spain where for hundreds of years the people have enjoyed the blessing of compulsory Christian teaching under government auspices and where today the current generation is engaged in a war whose savagery on both sides cannot be equaled in modern times. Not even the unspeakable Turk committed worse atrocities than the people of Christian Spain who torture hostages and slaughter prisoners of war by the hundred.

Does it mean that the Spaniards are just naturally savage and bad?

On the basis of a brief visit and the best inquiry that I was able to make in Spain last winter I have no doubt that the people who support the government and subscribe to the idea of a republic are not atheists at all. On the contrary, I am convinced that many of them are true believing Christians who only demand that their religion and their politics be kept apart. Under the old regime they were exploited and oppressed and Christianity seemed complacent.

At least by popular authority they established a republic, just as we did in this country, and, like us, they endeavored to separate church and state. It is true that they had their Communists among them, but it was not a Communistic state, for when I was there the public schools had been handed back to the clergy because the Spanish nation, after so long a time under Christianity, could not provide out of the lay population sufficient personnel to teach the children.

After centuries Spain was still illiterate, backward and diseased, and although the country itself is not poor, millions of people lived like brutes.

It is hardly convincing to charge that because they wished to better their condition they are enemies of Christ. Americans today are rebellious against a far superior condition in life, but call themselves Christians nevertheless. A little knowledge is worse than none, and I would gladly forego the superficial tourist's observation and reporter's information which I was able to glean during a short visit to Spain if I could hear or read a dispassionate debate between a well-informed American authority on the political and social upheaval and an equally well-informed authority on the status of Christianity there.

I would want to hear something more, however, than mere generalities about an atheistic attack on Christianity. There would have to be some explanation of the degraded intellectual, social and political status of the people under the old regime and of the shocking brutality which seems to be natural to a people after hundreds of years under the influence of political religious government.

It isn't enough, and it isn't honest or fair, to denounce as an atheist and Communist anyone in the United States who presumes to doubt that the slaughter at Badajoz, the employment of Mohammedans against Christians and the generally brutal character of the Spaniards on both sides represent a creditable demonstration of Christianity.

Way of the Crusader

By E. T.

TWENTY years ago an influential group of Bostonians aided by numerous eminent leaders of finance and of the bar in New York and elsewhere succeeded for four months in preventing the confirmation of Louis D. (originally avid but changed to Dembitz, his father's name) Brandeis as an Associate Justice of the Supreme Court. Probably few if any of the surviving opposition would boast of that performance today. Senator Borah, for one, has publicly acknowledged that he came to regret his vote more than any he ever cast.

The changed opinion about Mr. Brandeis does not necessarily reflect an intervening growth of tolerance. Approximately the same forces would mobilize today as ferociously as they banded together two decades ago against any nominee for the court who stood as fair game in front of the procession now led by Mr. Brandeis did then. They said of Mr. Brandeis that he was a radical, that he lacked the judicial temperament, whatever that may be, and they charged him with unprofessional conduct. William Howard Taft, Elihu Root and five other former presidents of the American Bar Association signed a memorial to the Senate regretfully, but none the less emphatically, declaring Mr. Brandeis an unfit person to sit on the highest court.

• • • • •

IN a new biography of the Justice, Alfred Lief, who previously edited three valuable volumes assembling representative opinions both of Mr. Brandeis and his lifelong friend and long-time associate, Oliver Wendell Holmes, adequately, if not brilliantly, recounts the story of the jurist's career and makes a little more understandable the reasons for the formidable and respectable opposition.

The story, as Mr. Lief tells it, is absorbingly interesting because the career of the Justices so engrossingly interesting. His interesting particularly because men have not changed enough to change the same relative forces which sought to defeat Mr. Brandeis then and would rise up as certainly and as violently to crush today any other man who stood in a comparable relationship to contemporary economic and political thought.

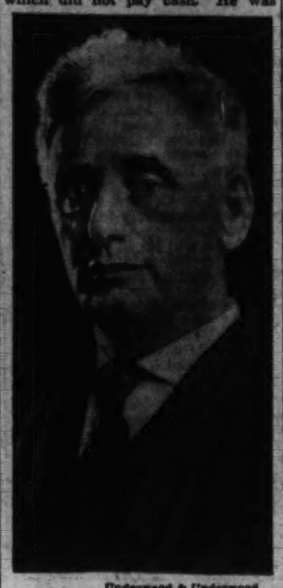

Mr. Lief entitles one of his chapters "Liberal or Conservative?" Such labels are dubious and carelessly used now as they were 20 years ago and more. Moreover, the question is an idle one. Mr. Brandeis was liberal, indeed radical, to yesterday's conservatism and seems rather old fashioned to today's avowed libelism. His faith appears to have remained unshaken in small business.

• • • •

MR. LIEF says that Mr. Brandeis felt that he was not being opposed on rial grounds, and openly, doubtless he was not. There was enough el to enrage the Brahmins again him. He was early absorbed into the intellectual and cultural background of Boston in his scholastically brilliant days at Harvard. e was accepted. Otherwise he ould never have broken the ice arriers to become ounsel for ol and oppressively respectable firm and families. He made money—a great deal of money. He as a director of powerful companies.

Respectability and intellectual stagnation all ut got him. It was is break-away that shocked his elect circle. Other men did not lo that. Probably no other man in listory s accepted, nurtured and nourished at few England shrines ever broke away. If so, he was rushed befor history made a volme or even footnote of him. That was the real crime of which Mr. Brandeis was guilty.

He commanded the felony by aking no fes for his crusading work. Th completely mystified is forme friends and his rapidly acquired emies. They found it wholly bfing. So they suspected hat somody must be paying him. Whoever eard of a gentleman taking up f the underdog for nothing? Eve worse, Mr. Brandeis with a nice scrupulousness that was even me puzzling, paid into his firm, ou of his own pocket, what he figur would have come to his partner had he spent his time fighting the battles of clients instead of taking up for people and causes which did not pay cash. He was not only suspected of being subsidized by mysterious and of course nefarious forces, but at times his enemies named the alleged backers—always erroneously. There were none, save possibly conscience.

Wisely, Mr. Brandeis did not permit his attackers to divert him from his real objectives. Had he taken the time to answer the attacks he never would have slain a dragon. And for one man he slew a good many, the biggest of them all being the monster into which the New Haven Railroad had grown to be, thanks to the forced feeding of frenzied finance. But that dragon seemed a veritable god to many a thrifty New Englander. When the monster collapsed from sheer greed and obesity, many were sure that Mr. Brandeis had administered the poison. Few, least of all the frenzied financiers, looked upon Mr. Brandeis merely as the prophetic diagnostician.

IT is rather remarkable that he was confirmed in the end, so bitter were the hatreds—and the fears. Had a less determined man than Wilson been President it never could have been accomplished. Mr. Lief devotes close to 500 pages to the whole story. It is sparing treatment for so great a theme—the impact of one man's mind, character and rare ability upon the social, economic, political pattern of the country as it was and still is to a great degree.

The book will arouse emotions according to the reader's predilections, but no fair-minded man, aware of the problems of democracy, can read it without being deeply absorbed—and without some sorrow. The way of the crusader is hard, too, for he transgresses the accepted canons of his times.

Joan of Arc: Maid and Martyr

V. Sackville-West Gives Interpretation of Peasant Saint.

By Audrey Walz.

There is no more legend-encrusted story in history than the account of the earthy girl from Domremy who became a great captain of France. Playwrights, poets, painters and those who should know better—historians—alike have contributed to the falsification of that sturdy figure. They have pictured her either as a dove-surrounded maid whose gentleness belies her career, or as a neurotic who flourished in a superstitious time. Shaw, in his play, "St. Joan," gives us one honorable exception to the rule. And in her new biography of the Maid, V. Sackville-West, for the most part, offers another. But most writers have been unable to take Joan factually.

Indeed, she has been a center of contention from the day she left her village to deliver France. In the court of the Dauphin she came to crown, she had her enemies. And in the trial court at Rouen, where her detractors sat in judgment on her, she had, paradoxically, her friends.

Through four-fifths of her solid book Miss Sackville-West maintains an admirable balance. She is a friend to Joan, but dispassionate. She makes the real miracle—the maid's rise to power—plausible and clear. She makes the real martyrdom — the maid's frustration through the inertia and treachery of the Dauphin and his advisors—unbearably poignant. She describes the troubled state of France with chart-like simplicity. And above all, she makes the maid come alive. We see the stocky, swarthy girl at every stage of her progress. She is very human in the pages of this biography—an inspiring, stubborn, hot-tempered, humorous and fallible figure.

Joan had the peasant's endurance and shrewdness. She had a woman's enjoyment of finery—and of tears. She had a fanatic's tenacity and temper. In more than one passage, Joan may remind the American reader startlingly of John Brown. She had an ascetic's contempt for the flesh as her diet of sops of bread in wine and her beating of the camp women testify. She had the visionary disregard for obstacles.

The greatest of these was her beloved Dauphin. There is, perhaps, nothing more tragic in her life than her cause—or the cause to which her Voices directed her. The Dauphin was a repulsive weakling whose claim to the throne was decidedly weakened by his mother's tacit admission that he was not the son of the King, his official father. His choice of advisers was as poor as his claim to the throne. He was consistently loyal to the wrong people, such as Agnes Sorel, first of the long line of courtesans who ruled France. Joan never had his loyalty. He allowed her to go to her death without making any effort to free her through an exchange of prisoners or a payment of gold. To the end, Joan refused to face the realities of his character, and was pitifully true, through the trial, to her King.

That trial is, of course, the most engrossing chapter of Joan's life. Miss Sackville-West points up beautifully the girl's penetration and wit, her evasions and unaccountable blunders, her endurance and faith. This newest biographer of the Maid guides the reader unerringly through the maze of the trial. As a narrator, she is more than satisfactory.

When, however, the author approaches the major task of the historian, interpretation, she is suddenly at variance with her sensible earlier pages. As she says of the judges who tried Joan, they knew that she "had to be regarded as either a saint or a devil. There was no middle ground." The modern writer, like the Bishop of Beauvais, must also avoid a middle ground. Joan must be regarded as either a saint or a human. Through more than 300 pages of her work, Miss Sackville-West shows that Joan was indeed human. She points out the tactical mistakes in the Maid's military career; the psychological mistakes in her handling of her confreres. Even the miracles Miss Sackville-West is able to take in her stride. She shows that many of them are capable of a realistic explanation.

But the crux of the problem, Joan's Voices, makes Miss Sackville-West falter. Cornered by her own facts, she takes flight into metaphysics. She is too much the modern to say simply that Joan's Voices came from God, and retreats instead to such a statement: "My readings into Joan of Arc have done nothing but increase my belief * * * that certain persons are in touch with or, shall we say, receptive to the influence of, a unity for which we have no adequate name. * * *" She admits that such a conclusion may be regarded as unsatisfactory or evasive.

It evades certain questions that her array of facts inevitably bring to mind. Joan's Voices dictated a course of action that prolonged the war seven years and brought Joan to her death. Had she, for example, marched straight to Paris after the rout of the English at Patay, she would have been able to crown her Dauphin King of a united France. But her Voices commanded her to spend precious time at Reims, crowning the weakling first. The interlude gave the English and Burgundians a chance to unite their forces and confront the new King with a deadlier opposition. Never, after Reims, was Joan magnificently victorious as she had been at Orleans and Patay. In this and other instances, her Voices apparently led her astray. The question arises: Can Divine inspiration err?

Nor can one avoid feeling that Joan's devotion to the Dauphin was due to her birth in a village which gave him allegiance. Had she been born a few miles away in Burgundian country, she might well have led the English and Burgundians against the Armagnacs—the Dauphin's party. The latter group was not France. Thousands of Frenchmen truly believed the Dauphin an illegitimate murderer — responsible for the assassination of the Duke of Burgundy. They believed also in the claim to the throne of the child Henry VI, the little English King who was more French than English. Geography, one cannot help but conclude, had much to do with the dictates of Joan's Voices.

Miss Sackville-West herself tells of geniuses who experienced at will voices and visions which they did not regard as supernatural—Socrates, Goethe and Herschel, the scientist. Was not Joan perhaps a genius of their caliber? Must she be considered the receiver, not the originator, of her plan for France?

These and other questions, Miss Sackville-West avoids. So, for a little stretch, her pages, too, are subject for controversy. Who writes of Joan cannot apparently escape it. For the first 17 chapters of this new biography, we can be thankful. And to the eighteenth, the reader will bring his own conclusion imposed by the facts in preceding pages. Miss Sackville-West has one other fault, but this is minor, and comes from her courteous assumption that the reader knows French as well as she. Not all of Joan's speeches are translated.

Fortunately, there is a small book just out which can be used as a pony with the larger work. It is "Joan of Arc: A Self-Portrait," Joan's story of herself as revealed by her words at the trial and elsewhere. Some of her words are not here either, and so an occasional statement in the large biography will escape readers. Nor do Joan's words give an adequate account of her life. They reflect her wit and simplicity and faith, but for the Book Ends

By Bett Hooper.

It was not an interview . . . Because Alice Tisdale Hobart is nervous about interviews . . . It's like saying "exam" to a student to say "interview" to Mrs. Hobart . . . So we just talked about books, and reviews, and reviewers . . . And, of course, China . . . Though it was hard to associate the crisp, cool, poised author of so many best-sellers with the great, sprawling, enigmatic Orient . . . She's efficient, you immediately feel that . . . you feel, too, that she'd be the type of author who blocked her books out meticulously before starting . . . that the characters in them would never get out of hand . . . But you'd be wrong . . . Her characters work out their own destinies . . .

ALICE T. HOBART.

• • • •

"Of course, I always know what shape my book is going to take and I have its objective well mapped out in advance," Mrs. Hobart hastened to explain, "and, at the same time, I feel that one can no more forecast a fictional character's future than that of a real person. What happens today may change not only the reaction of my hero or heroine, but it may make me feel differently about things. So we proceed slowly, my book and I, and let each experience as it comes along cast its shadings and shadows naturally and logically. You know, I have always felt that every book is more or less autobiographical" . . .

• • • •

Autobiographical? . . . The room was so pleasant and homey . . . Sunday morning was cool, if you remember, and a fire was lit in the grate . . . It had burned down to a glow as cozy and comfortable as the arm chair on which I sat, talking to Mrs. Hobart . . . Hard to believe that she had witnessed the passing of Manchu rule and the growth of the republican, nationalistic and anti-foreign movements . . . Hard to believe that she had once fled Nanking under the protective wing of British and American gun boats . . . Hard to believe she has spent so much time away from her native land . . . But gradually you get the whole story . . . you learn that she went on a short visit to her sister, who was teaching in a mission school in China . . . that she fell in love with and married Earl T. Hobart, an instructor in the same school . . . that her visit, like those of the Southerners in "Gone With the Wind" lengthened into months and then years—16 of them . . . Autobiographical? . . . Yes, to the extent of viewing that far-off country with an open mind . . . letting herself take on the colors of the market places . . . and the picturesque port towns . . . and the hot, sun-yellow interior cities . . . Autobiographical to the extent that she wants and must feel every emotion which she accredits to her characters . . . And that is fine writing . . . that is sensitivity . . . and humility . . .

• • • •

"I never thought of writing until I went to China. And then suddenly it occurred to me that there were incidents there which I would like to record. Of course, I always loved books in college and was interested in fine writing. But I had nothing to say. I find that quite the reverse of so many young people today who simply want to write without waiting for life to provide them with the necessary background and equipment and experience . . . Also, I think it's a mistake to generalize about writing and where it should be done and under what conditions. Some work best in the clatter of a city room; others, like myself, prefer peace and privacy. In fact, quiet was absolutely essential for me while doing "Oil for the Lamps of China." I was quite ill at the time and the doctor only allowed me 15 minutes a day on the book. I was sorry that the producers found it expedient to change the ending, but, on the whole, I was quite pleased with the way my characters were handled by the actors themselves and by the director in charge . . ."

• • • •

Gradually a certain phase of the life in China stood out before Mrs. Hobart's eyes from the rest of the panorama . . . That was the infiltration of Western and Eastern civilization . . . she makes you feel that strange and wonderful history may be made from the unusual combination of setting the stage with New World furniture against an Old World background . . . Her new book, soon to be released, is called "Yang Yen" . . . That is the Chinese symbol for the yea and nay of all life . . . the beginning and the end . . . It deals with a young American doctor fighting disease in the huts of the Yellow Man . . . She has been writing it three years . . . the scientific facts contained in it were garnered from a doctor in San Francisco . . . It is possible that her next novel will be of the readjustments over here to the thousands of new issues which have risen to confront Americans in the past few years . . .

• • • •

"I think most of us writers are overlooking the drama going on right here. The co-operative movement, the rehabilitation, the resettlement—all these contain tragedy, and comedy, and readjustments."

• • • •

You have a feeling that no matter whether Mrs. Hobart is gazing on alien territory with sympathetic, objective eyes or on home ground with eyes which must become accustomed to its familiarity again after 16 years' absence, that she will not attempt to interpret either without first probing beyond the surface . . . Perhaps that is why reviewers have been unusually kind to her books . . . they realize that the author has not gone off half-cocked; that she has not tried to speak the language until she has digested the people's motives . . . She is very appreciative of the way in which her books have been received by reviewers . . . but she feels that as a rule, most reviewers are too subjective . . . you gather that she doesn't think book reviewing should be a matter of interpretive writing . . .

• • • •

I have a sneaking feeling that she probably feels the same way about interviews . . . so I have tried not to present Mrs. Hobart either as a successful author or as a woman entirely apart from her talent . . . She is a delightful combination of both . . . She is direct, human, and "swell," as we say today . . . She has no thesis . . . She is simply interested in the good and the bad, the ugly and the beautiful; the sweet and the sour . . . You feel, for that reason, she is the ideal person to have chosen for her subject and title, "Yang Yen . . ."

"MOUNTAIN PATH," by Harriette Simpson. (Covici-Friede, $2.50.)

Do you like to smell hickory smoke from a wood stove and listen to the bubbling of cooking beans? Do you like to stand on top of a mountain and feel the fresh clear morning wind in your face? Do you like to sit by a fire and hear stories of the mountain folk? Do you like to rise early and see a sunrise through mountain mist? If you like any of these things, don't buy a railroad ticket. It is no longer necessary. All that you need do is read Harriette Simpson's "Mountain Path."

The big surprise of the book is the way the humble mountain people change the heroine's outlook on life. She came thinking she was the symbol of civilization and learned that she knew nothing at all of life. It was the mountain people who put her on the right track—who showed her what life meant and how to measure values.

How she learns all this is one of the most intriguing stories I have ever read and if you too, as I, are searching for a way to judge real values, by all means read "Mountain Path."

PAULINE BOWMAN.

A Man Alone

"BIRD ALONE," by Sean O'Faolain. (Viking Press, $2.50.)

"Other nights I might have spat on her for all that. But tonight, when I was leaving her, she was my home, and those were my people, and this was their life, rounding itself tonight in tune with my mood to a lamenting for what was lost and what would not return. For if there would be other houses that I might come to know and other moons that I might watch, there is, after all, in every night as in every place its own message and it lasts like the rippled sands only until the next wave rises from the center of the sea to roar upon the shore."

And so Corney Crone, molded into maturity by the tragic bitterness of a first love, broke with the faith of his fathers and the memory of the past. Ahead, the wind leaped on him like a dog and he felt the misery of being naked, but he only laughed at the shiver of it, and, following reason into the desert that was his heart, became in truth a "bird alone."

There is a haunting melody in every line of Sean O'Faolain's prose. It is the fairy music of the Irish countryside; of roads thick with night, remote in their loneliness; of meadowland drenched with sleep and the whisper of eerie winds; of ebbed tides, seductive as a woman, faintly calling the lost one, far out from shore . . .

Sad and gay, sensitive and humorous, profound and ignorant, the characters portrayed live and die and love and hate with all the intense levity of the Irish spirit, the wild unreason of the heart. Romantic and callous, charming and indifferent, they blend with the dead past of old towns, with the choking skies that weigh them down, with the mists that envelop them in perpetual summer dusk . . .

In a sense there is a similarity between "Bird Alone" and the author's earlier masterpiece, "A Nest of Simple Folk." For both are stories of three generations, caught in the swirling maelstrom of the politics of their day. Somehow there is a suggestion of Leo Donnel about Corney's grandfather, Philip Crone. Both were Fenians with strong hates, molding the life of the third generation—Leo fashioning the will of young Denis Hussey into rebellion against his parent, Philip forging the first links of revolt in the mind of his grandson, Corney Crone. But there the similarity ends.

"Bird Alone" may well rank among the greatest of the moderns. It heartens those of us who still believe (the gods forgive us) in the peerless quality of the Celtic mind.

The "Household Emotions"

"SELECTED POEMS OF T. A. DALY." (Harcourt, Brace, $2.50.)

For 30 years the poems of T. A. Daly have delighted countless readers in this country. In this new book the publishers have collected the best of the group, including ten new before published.

As Christopher Morley points out in his introductory note, T. A. Daly, although a newspaperman by profession, has not a drop of commercial fluid in his veins. His orbit is an tenderly dealing with the "household emotions." A simple character or situation treated by him takes on a deep sentiment which never lowers itself into pathos. The Italian fruit vendor's visit at the New York spring which sets back to him his Napoli, his nostalgia for his homeland, his lament as to whether to marry Angela who "was strong for carry wood" or Carlotta who "gotta song and looka pretta good"—upon such material as this T. A. Daly draws and treats it with such simple sincerity that one can not help but respond.

Christopher Morley notes that among poetry that has become universally popular, that of Daly's is almost unique in that it has a polished accuracy of form and cadence. Added to this, the natural warmth and genuine sentiment of the writer, these verses achieve a pre-eminence among that category of poetry which has a wide appeal and a large audience. Daly deals with the common, everyday situations of humble life, and by treating them genuinely and simply produces a type of verse which is never offensively oversentimental. He is the poet of the inarticulate.

In addition to the Italian and Irish dialect verse, which is perhaps the most infectious and the most popular of Daly's output, this collection contains many verses in straight, regular English. They serve to round off a volume which is truly representative of its author and should be welcomed by those who appreciate simple verse full of warming pathos and kindly humor.

"Bastus gains half a mile every time we pass a graveyard!"

'Sweet Land of . . .'

By Samuel Lubell.

LIKE a good preacher, Stuart Chase has gone forth into the land and returned with a stinging indictment of wasteful living, of a continent whose beauty and natural resources are being plundered and raped, of a land-blind people who are worshiping the false gods of mechanical inventions and money incomes, unaware of the wrath they are storing up in the bosom of the one God whose dictates cannot be defied for long, Nature.

The "tragedy of waste" is not a new theme for Stuart Chase but good sermons do not suffer from repetition. Dust storms swirling through the Midwest, spring floods tearing through city streets and the conservation attempts of the Roosevelt Administration have made us more land-conscious than ever before. Perhaps, because of that, in "Rich Land, Poor Land," Chase's preaching frequently seems to attain the heights of biblical prophecy. Certainly his book is one of the most eloquent and convincing pleas for conservation ever published in this country.

STUART CHASE.

THE American continent is the heroine of the book and Chase writes of the continent with all the warm emotion of a novelist who is in love with his heroine and whose indignation is aroused at every fresh betrayal by the white man. Ruthlessly and thoughtlessly, man went about upsetting nature's balance, plowing up the grasslands, burning and felling the forests, butchering birds and animals, and stripping the land of its protective covering so that artesian waters dried up, and rivers were swollen with rains and silt.

What is the picture in 1936 of this once so abundant country? One hundred million acres of once-fertile soil have been eroded into "man-made deserts" with another 200,000,000 acres going or beginning to go. Overgrazing, fire, the plow, dust and drought have brought 165 million acres of grasslands to the verge of ruin; there are 83,000,000 acres of lifeless forest land and stranded forest communities; entire species of fish are dying off; mines are being abandoned, and floods are growing more and more disastrous.

In 40 years, Chase estimates, our lumber will be gone and in 136 years, at present trends, all organic matter will have been "mined" from the soil. Even if the time left before the exhaustion of these resources is doubled or tripled, this nation would still be confronting a crisis.

THE concept of infinity with which Americans have always regarded their continent is the root of the trouble, according to Chase. Next to that he blames our economic system with its emphasis on land speculation, "cut and get out" lumbering and money mining of minerals and the soil. The "rugged individualist" has had his day of exploitation, Chase contends, and the time has come for the community to roll up its sleeves and get to work on conservation.

One plowman in a single afternoon can root up the grass, but a generation of careful nursing is required to restore the long grasses. Forests can be cleared in a few years, but it takes centuries to replace them. Only the Federal Government can restore grass and forest lands, as only the Federal Government could undertake a Boulder Dam or a land-use program as vast as that of the Tennessee Valley.

Many persons may not agree with Chase's criticism of the Supreme Court for forgetting that "watersheds do not recognize State lines" or with his view that collective control is necessary to rescue our natural resources. But Mr. Chase has stated a powerful case and as far as this juryman is concerned it is up to the "rugged individualists" and "free enterprisers" to prove their innocence.

Roper Deplores Pulpit Politics At Church Rally

Catholic, Protestant, Jew Join Here in Second 'Loyalty' Meeting.

By Edward T. Folliard.

A mass meeting of 2,000 Protestants, Catholics and Jews, held in Constitution Hall last night as an example of religious understanding and toleration, heard Secretary of Commerce Daniel C. Roper sound a warning against the "intermingling of the pulpit and the political forum."

"In recent years," Secretary Roper said, "we have witnessed a growing participation of religious groups, the church and the clergy in governmental policies and procedures. The science of government should be guided by the highest moral principles. But there should be no intermingling of the pulpit and the political forum. * * *

"Evils and injustices which affect the people in their human relationships fall properly within the realm of religious influence and teachings. But this responsibility invoves no political obligation. Rather it contemplates that the church should provide that spiritual guidance which will make men stronger in supporting political procedures that will bring about the alleviation and eliminatoin of evils and injustices in our economic and social systems. Religion seeks through spiritual means those objectives which government should seek through social and economic methods."

Example of Tolerance.

Last night's mass meeting, the second to be held under the auspices of the Committee on Religious Life in the Nation's Capital, would have been a revelation to those of a bigoted and intolerant mind.

A Presbyterian clergyman, a Catholic priest and a Jewish rabbi were the speakers, in addition to Secretary Roper. The Rev. Edgar A. Love, representing an alliance of colored ministers gave a Scripture reading. Choirs representing all three of the large religious groups took turns in the singing, and the ushers were provided by the Knights of Columbus, the Y. M. C. A. and the Jewish Communitty Center, and various Protestant churches.

The Right Rev. James M. Freeman, Bishop of Washington, in a greeting to those who braved the inclement weather to attend, said that the gathering was of deep significance—"in many respects altogether unique." Catholic, Protestant and Jew, he said, were gathered there—22 denominations in all—and, while respecting one another's convictions, all were conscious of a tie that bound them together in fellowship.

"For that," said Bishop Freeman, "I thank God."

Sizoo Cites Persecution.

The Rev. Dr. Sizoo, former pastor of the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church here and now pastor of the Collegiate Church of St. Nicholas in New York, recalled the bigotry and intolerance of earlier days when, in certain States, Jews were barred as judges and jurors and Catholics were denied the ballot.

"One hundred years ago," said Dr. Sizoo, "such a gathering as this would never have been thought of. Men in that day did not meet one another in the name of religion. A century ago if a gathering like this had been planned, it would have ended in disaster and the speakers would have landed in jail."

Dr. Sizoo contended that without religion no nation is safe and no civilization can survive.

"Without a fundamental sense of reverence and religion," he said, "democracy can no more survive than a watch can run with a broken mainspring."

Cartwright Agrees.

The Rev. Dr. John K. Cartwright, pastor of the Church of the Immaculate Conception, agreed with this view. He pointed out, however, that as America has advanced in a political and material way, there has been a certain neglect and abandonment of religion. In other countries, he added, people have gone further and said religion must be dispensed with in the interest of the totalitarian state.

"Now a democracy rests on ideals," Dr. Cartwright said, "on ideals that must be deeply imbedded and enshrined in the hearts of the millions of individuals who make the state. In other forms of government, ideals may be imposed at the will of a tyrannous minority. In a democracy ideals must live and grow in the hearts of the people. * * *

"In this conviction we are met here tonight. Our three faiths differ in very much, but on this important thing we all agree that the tradition of a pure and spiritual faith which arose in Palestine and which has been the mainspring of the world's civilization these 2,000 years, must still be at the heart of civilization in America as in all the world."

Deplores World Today.

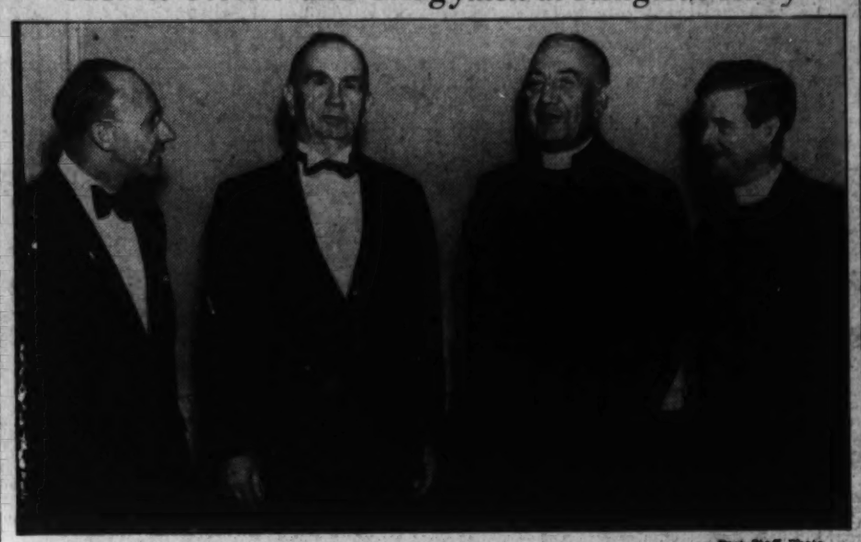

Rabbi Morris S. Lazaron, of the Baltimore Hebrew Congregation, reviewed the sick world of today, pointing to the agonies of doubt and fear, the broken pledges, the violent rule of dictators, and the slaughter of children in their sleep.

America, he said, must oppose the blood cults, the hate cults and the war cults of the Old World with a vital faith in a living God.

"Let us pool our resources, organize our energy and pit the power of our living faith against the rising forces which would overwhelm all freedom and destroy that democracy with which we too are lost. In the name of the living God—forward."

The Committee on Religious Life in the Nation's Capital, which is a continuing organization, has three major purposes: To encourage religion and church attendance; to develop mutual understanding between all religious groups—Catholic, Protestant and Jew—thus trying to prevent all forms of intolerance and to give a demonstration of essential religious solidarity at the Nation's Capital without minimizing the differences in beliefs and practices between the various groups.

Howard Opens Its 70th Year; Rolls Increase

Chapman and Dr. Johnson Principal Speakers at Exercises.

Exercises opening Howar University's seventieth academic year were held yesterday in Rankin Chapel on the university campus. Oscar L. Chapman, Assistant Secretary of the Interior, and Dr. Mordecai W. Johnson, university president, were the principal speakers. An academic procession preceded the exercises.

Secretary Chapman indicated the need for advancement of colored persons' education in America, for the sake of the Nation as well as the race. "The principle has been established," he said, "that the Federal Government feels its obligation to the educational needs of this country. We welcome you as such a government, realizing its obligations, and hope that we can perform our duties in a way that will be valuable to a great race."

An advance of 35 per cent in registration in all departments was announced by Dr. Johnson, in comparison with last year. Calling attention to the new chemistry building, just completed, he stated it is now ready for first class undergraduate, graduate and research work.

"This building," he said, "indicates not only the extent, but also the quality of interest of the Federal Government in Howard University. It is helping to establish a university capable of doing first-class university work in all of its levels, and this building declares to the world the unequivocal character of the purpose."

Musical selections by Todd Duncan, assistant professor in public school music and voice, who recently starred in "Porgy and Bess," and Roy W. Tibbs, of the school of music, also featured the program.

Spanish Pretender Dies of Car Injury

Vienna, Sept. 29 (AP).—Prince Alfonso Carlos of Bourbon, Carlist pretended to the nonexistent throne of Spain, died last night, the Reuters News Agency reported today, of injuries received when he was struck by a motorcar.

The 85-year-old Duc de San Jaime, head of the traditionalist branch of the Spanish royal family, was considered by thousands of Spainards as rightful King of Spain.

He succeeded to the leadership of his family and political adherents in 1931 on the death of his nephew, Jaime, Du de Madrid.

Alfonso Carlos, many of whose adherents are fighting with the Fascist forces in the present Spanish rebellion, spent the last years of his life in oft-reconciled family quarrels with former King Alfonso and in efforts to bring about the overthrow of the Spanish republic.

Rumors are rife in and around Detroit as to what the various automobile manufacturers have up their sleeves for 1937. But a lot of talk in the motor city concerns activities up in Flint, some sixty miles away, where, it is said, Buick is spending $14,500,000 on top of the $15,000,000 invested in plants, dies, etc., last year. That, say those in the know, is a sure sign of something big in the wind, and that Buick is out to go one better on their outstanding 1936 record. Details are lacking as yet, but it is reported that certain designers who thought they were sitting pretty began to look glum when they heard Buick described

Jackson Says Farley Made Deal With McNutt For Cabinet Post

Postmaster General James A. Farley has made a deal with Gov. Paul V. McNutt of Indiana whereby the Governor will be made Secretary of War in return for putting his State in the Democratic column, Gardiner Jackson, assistant consumers' counsel during the early days of the New Deal, charged last night.

Telling the platform convension of the Left Party of George Washington University's Student Union that he learned this from unimpeachable sources, Jackson said:

"If this ever happens it will be a great blow to liberalism in this country. Gov. McNutt is one of the lowest and most brutal gang politicians in power today."

Jackson announced that the Washington Committee for the Support of Spanish Democracy had been able to acquire some of the effects of Ramon Franco at the recent auction of the rebel air ace's belongings. They will be auctioned off at Typographical Temple Sunday night for the benefit of the Loyalists.

Jackson, whose fiery defense of the sharecroppers has caused him to be dubbed a radical, said that John Hamilton, chairman of the Republican National Committee, has been courting him in the hopes he would help swing some Southern colored votes to Landon.

"But, despite my feeling that Roosevelt is only a country gentleman who likes to see everybody happy, I urge all of you to vote for him. Under him there is a 5 per cent better chance that labor will be allowed to go ahead."

The 60 student members of the Left Party then adopted a platform under the slogan of "abundant America." It called for abolition of company unions, socialized medicine and the conversion of tenant farms into co-operatives.

Benjamin C. Marsh, chairman of the People's Lobby, addressed the meeting. Donald Cooper was chairman and Charles Kiefer, keynoter.

Admiral Sims' Funeral Is Set For Tomorrow

'Man Who Taught Navy How to Shoot' to Be Buried in Arlington.

Funeral services for Rear Admiral William Snowden Sims, who died in Boston Monday, will be held tomorrow at 2 p. m. at St. John's Episcopal Church. The "man who taught the Navy how to shoot" will be buried in Arlington Cemetery.

The Rev. Oliver Hart, pastor of St. John's, will conduct the services here. At the same hour memorial services will be conducted at Trinity Church, Newport, R. I., which Sims used to attend while president of the Naval College there. The Rev. Roy W. Magoun, superintendent of the Seamen's Church Institute, will officiate at the Newport services.

After the ceremony in St. John's, the admiral's body will be escorted to Arlington Cemetery by a naval guard of honor headed by Rear Admiral G. J. Rowcliff, judge advocate. The Rev. Sidney Evans, naval chaplain, will conduct the services.

At the cemetery the escort will be joined by the Navy Band, a regiment of Marines and a company of bluejackets. Eight bluejackets will act as body-bearers.

Tributes from all over the Nation flooded into the Back Bay home of Sims' daughter, where the 77-year-old veteran's body lay yesterday protected by his family from the eyes of the curious and the homage of the admiring.

Among the messages was one from Newton D. Baker, Secretary of War while Sims was commanding the fleet overseas. He praised the admiral as a "great help to the Allied cause."

D. C. Red Cross Mails Circulars To Apartments

Air Corps Flight Boosting Campaign Is Delayed Until Today.

Rain kept house-to-house campaigners indoors yesterday and a scheduled Army Air Corps cross formation flight on the ground, but the Red Cross enrollment swelled to 2,000, it was announced last night. The flight will take place at noon today, weather permitting.

The headquarters office staff last night completed delivery of buttons, flags, circulars and membership blanks to its huge army of 7,000 campaign workers and the apartment house committee mailed 6,500 circulars to apartment-dwelling families.

Elizabeth Wightman, chairman of the committee, said 57 apartment house captains already had begun canvassing in the afternoon. She urged all captains to report enrollments to Red Cross campaign headquarters, 1416 H street northwest, as soon as possible.

Lloyd B. Wilson, president of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. and chairman of the campaign, said he considered the enrollment to date an encouraging sign. The committee, he said, had not expected actual returns would start coming in before the end of the week.

Donald Craig, Veteran News Writer, Is Dead

Succumbs to Long Illness at Home Here; Rites to Be Tomorrow.

Donald Alexander Craig, 52, veteran Washington newspaper correspondent, died late Monday night at his home, 21 Seventh street southeast, after a long illness.

Mr. Craig worked for about 3 years as a staff member of The Washington Star and as a correspondent for various papers in other cities. He also was known as an expert on the history of Washington.

Born in Brookville, Pa., he came to this city when a boy. He graduated from the old Eastern High School in 1903 and, in the same year joined the news staff of the Washington Star. Four years later he was assigned to Congressional and political news.

In 1909 he left the Star to become a member of the Washington staff of the New York Herald, acting as correspondent for that paper, the Louisville Courier-Journal and the Toronto Evening Telegram until 1913, when he became manager of the Washington Bureau of the Herald.

He afterward was correspondent for the New York Evening Sun, the Paris Herald, the Portland, (Me.) Press Herald, the New York Herald Tribune and the Portland, (Me.) Evening Express. He rejoined the staff of the Star in 1927.

Mr. Craig was appointed director of special activities and foreign participation of the United States George Washington Bicentennial Commission in 1931, remaining in that position for two years. He was a special agent for the Secretary of the Interior in enforcing the oil code in 1933 and 1934 and also assisted in investigations of the Civil Works Administration. He was employed in the office of the National Emergency Council until last year.

He was a charter member of the National Press Club.

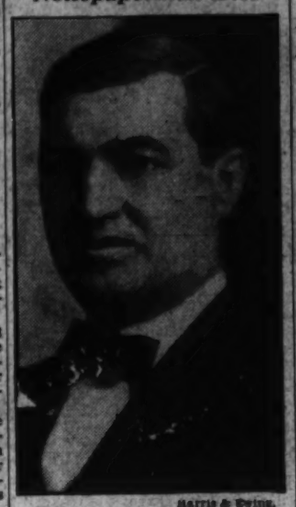

Surviving him are his wife, Mrs. Elizabeth May Craig; a son Don Craig, jr., who is drama editor of the Washington Daily News, and a daughter, Mrs. Albert A. Clagett.

Charles O. Gridley, vice president of the Press Club, designated the following to represent that organization at the funeral:

Paul Wooton, Charles A. Hamilton, Arthur J. Dodge, Oswald F. Schuette, Frank B. Lord, Ira E. Bennett, Kirke L. Simpson, John J. Daly, Fred A. Emery, Charles S. Groves, Frederic J. Haskin, A. E. T. W. Edwards Funeral Rites Set Tomorrow

Funeral services will be held at 9 a. m. tomorrow in Holy Name Catholic Church for Dr. Thomas W. Edwards, 64, instructor emeritus in the Howard University School of Dentistry and widely-known colored dentist. Burial will be in Mount Olivet Cemtery.

Dr. Edwards died Monday at his home, 1208 Linden street northeast.

A native of Washington, Dr. Edwards was gradsauted from the normal department of Howard University in 1889. He became a doctor of dental surgery in 1907 and an instructor four years later.

He was a charter member of the National Dental Association and a member of the Robert T. Freeman Dental Society, serving for two years as president of the latter organization. He also belonged to the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People and had given extensively to charitable organizations.

His body will lie in state from 3 to 7 p. m. today in Rankin Memorial Chapel at Howard University.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Marie Edwards; two daughters, Dr Lena Edwards Madison, of Jersey City, N. J., and Mrs. May Hill, of Oakland, Calif., and a son, Thomas W. Edwards, jr., now a dental student at Howard.

W. B. Loewenberg Services Are Held

Funeral services were held here yesterday for William Bennett Loewenberg, 83, who made a fortune from South African diamond mines and later ran a basket manufacturing business in Wabash, Ind. Mr. Loewenberg died in a local sanitarium Sunday.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Clara Van Baalan Loewenberg; a daughter, Mrs. Rhea L. Bernton, of this city, and a son, I. E. Loewenberg, of New York City. He also leaves four grandchilden.

Keep A Record of the Campaign with America Speaks!

WHILE you're watching the Presidential campaign—and everybody has an eye on the Roosevelt-Landon battle this year—why not keep a permanent record that will tell you exactly how the candidates have compared in strength since the nominating conventions?

Here's how to go about it:

Clip the "Summary of Polls" to the right. It records the electoral vote and major party popular vote as determined by polls of public opinion reported previously in AMERICA SPEAKS in the Sunday Washington Post.

Then fill in figures as they appear in AMERICA SPEAKS every two weeks from now until Election Day. These bi-weekly reports will show a State-by-State breakdown of the electoral and popular vote and give the vote for Roosevelt, Landon, Thomas, Lemke and other candidates for the Presidency.

On intervening Sundays AMERICA SPEAKS will report the presidential vote of farmers, reliefers, young persons and other groups, and Nation-wide sentiment toward important campaign issues.

AMERICA SPEAKS has been hailed by nationally known authorities and commentators as the outstanding barometer of national sentiment on candidates and campaign issues. Because it is impartial, scientifically accurate and timely, you'll find this weekly page an important source of exclusive campaign news. Watch for it in

British Decree Military Law For Palestine

Act Climaxes Six-Month Uprising of Arabs Against Jews.

By the Associated Press.

London, Sept. 29.—Great Britain today decreed martial law for Palestine to subdue a six-month uprising of Arabs against Jewish immigration and land ownership.

Terrorism in the Holy Land has cost more than 200 lives since the Arabs declared a "general strike" last April to resist provisions of the British mandate over Palestine, which many of the country's 700,000 Arabs never recognized.

(The Jewish Telegraph Agency in a dispatch from Jerusalem tonight estimated 28 lives had been lost in the disorders which caused approximately $14,000,000 property damage.)

Actual proclamation of military rule was left to Gen. Sir Arthur Wauchope, high commissioner for Palestine. It was believed martial law would be applied, at first, only to the most troublesome sections in hope the terrorists could be frightened into peaceful capitulation.

When in force it will invest Lieut. Gen. J. G. Dill, commander of the recently augmented military forces there, with virtual dictatorial power.

He will be authorized to impose any edict he deems necessary to present public order. He will be empowered to establish military courts, to impose censorship, to order arrests, detentions and exclusions and deportations from the Holy Land.

The government announced the military courts would have supreme power and their verdicts would be closed "to challenge or review elsewhere."

Gen. Dill will be authorized also to confiscate or seize control of property, to impose communal fines and to order the destruction of property for violation of any of his edicts.

Growing violence has been attributed to the inability of Arab moderate leaders to control their tribesmen. Since the general strike began last April 19, terrorism and open clashes between Arabs and British troops have resulted in the death of nine soldiers in fighting, of six in Royal Air Force accidents, of 125 Arabs, 56 Jews and 5 Christians. More than 1,000 persons have been injured.

Thousands of British soldiers have been sent from England to reinforce garrisons in the Holy Land and it is expected 15,000 troops, aircraft, tanks and other motorized equipment will be used to enforce the martial law.

Peruvian Arrives for Arbitration

Prof. Victor Andres Belaunde and his daughters, Sophia and Mercedes.

Peruvian Diplomat, in Capital For Parley, Warns of Marxism

Prof. Victor Andres Belaunde, member of the Peruvian commission which will confer with President Roosevelt today to settle the century-old boundary dispute between his country and Ecuador, last night warned of the world threat of Marxism as "a hierarchy of politicians."

Speaking in his room here at the Mayflower, not, he said, as a diplomat but as a professor of philosophy at the University of Lima, the oldest in the Western Hemisphere, he asked:

"Shall we sacrifice a natural hierarchy of intellectual values, moral disciplines and practical abilities for an artificial hierarchy based on the minute abilities of maneuvering the masses and exploiting low instincts?"

His answer to that threat of communism is a program of "wide, courageous and honest social reform," which he termed Christian socialism. The question is not one of programs, he said, but one of men and of methods.

"Take Jose Calvo Sotelo, for instance." He was talking of the Rightist leader in Spain whose assassination precipitated the present revolution. "He was a great man, a man of deep moral discipline with a realistic vision of Spain."

And as he spoke of Sotelo, whom he had interviewed in February, his face lighted up and his keen admiration was manifest.

He told the story of Sotelo's last debate in Parliament with Casares Quiroga, Minister of the Interior, at the conclusion of which Quiroga threatened to take his life. To this Sotelo answered quietly:

"All right. My shoulders are wide enough to bear this and other responsibilities. But I answer to the minister with the words of San Dominicus of Silos when threatened with death by the King of Spain in the eleventh century:

"'Majesty, you can kill me. That is not important. It is better to die as a martyr gloriously than to live in dishonor.'"

Three days later, Sotelo was killed by the civil guards.

Prof. Belaunde has been to this country before. When he was exiled from his native land in 1921 for criticizing the dictatorship of Leguia, he fled to this country. He headed the Latin-American department of the University of Miami for six years, delivered the Albert Shaw lectures at Johns Hopkins University in 1930 and for ten years was a member of the round-table on Latin-America at the Institute of Public Affairs at the University of Virginia. For three years Prof. Belaunde was active agent in working for the peace agreement between Columbia and Peru.

After the overthrow of the Leguia regime in 1930 he went back to Peru, where he was elected to the constitutional assembly and became leader of the Center Party.

Note ye the following paragraph or two that come in the day's mail from Pete Macias' right-hand man:

"Tomorrow night a brand-new doorman, with eighteen and one-half yards of brass buttons in full gleam, will top his hat at Approximately 9:47; will set about his task of opening the doors of sleek limousines, stubby station wagons, small, medium-sized, large, shiny and dusty charabancs.

"Ladies and their squires of Washington's social, diplomatic and theatrical sets will leave their conveyances, will enter a pair of famous grilled doors at 1536 Connecticut avenue, will sit down and, at 10, hear the first note from Ol' Massa Pete's orchestra—and the Heigh-Ho Club will embark on another sesaon."

Yes, sir, the Heigh-Ho has been undergoing the usual autumnal face-lifting and with new carpets, drapes and paint, is ready for that group of Washingtonians who make the corner of Connecticut and Q their season's rendezvous.

Conveniently spaced just 24 hours later is the opening of the Mayflower lounge. Reservations have been steadily rolling in to Teddy since the announcement first came forward that Sunny Forbes, Washington and New York socialite, would make her professional debut as a night club singer on this occasion. Several large parties of New Yorkers are expected.

This annual curtain raiser at the cocktail and supper rendezvous of the Mayflower has ben dubbed the "champagne and orchid" coming-out—and Friday's entertainment is to be no exception. Cyril Smith, English comedian, is flying down for the occasion, and Zanette and Coles, dance team of the late St. Moritz roof, are also specially scheduled. Sidney and his music for your dancing.

Adrienne, pictured elsewhere on this page, is the major attraction of the new fall season at the Shoreham. Adrienne is a psychic. In other words, she tells you what will happen to you or Uncle Joe come next February. She is said to have predicted the World Series contenders—and now says the Giants will win! She appears in the cocktail lounge and as a feature of the floor show.

Marion Swanson is now in her second week at the Ambassador Hi-Hat room—and another evidence of "home town girl makes good." She's featuring the popular ditty, "Why Did You Leave Heaven" at the nonce . . . Boulevard Farms, the suburban place just below Alexandria on the Memorial highway, believes that the popularity of its steak and chicken dinners is based no little on the fact the chef is a woman. In other words, the "meals that mother used to serve" idea. Music by Farmer Shea and His Hired Help.

Chef Chinto Maggia and Host Peter Borras, of Restaurant Madrillon, have a few ideas about food, too. They believe too few Washingtonians know the delights of wine. They say: "Americans are beginning to order cocktails with more concern over their delicate tastes and varied flavors rather than their potency. This is a good sign. Now they will learn the delights of wine, too." Wine will be featured with one of the choices on the Madrillon's Sunday menu.

Babe Baker, the tap specialist who received an unkind observation of one of my spies because of her weight not so long ago, is back at the Dude Ranch and (don't rush to learn how she did it, ladies!) she's just 20 pounds lighter. Ursula Martin, of Bubble Dance fame, is back, too.

Michel Michaeloff and his orchestra are now playing for your entertainment at Maryland Club Gardens. That is, all but Michel, who arrives very soon from a New York engagement. He was first violinist with the National Symphony last year. You may remember he originated the "Romany Trail" radio program.

Jimmy Crandell says "Pooh!" to all these fall openings. He says further than Brinkley's (that's Jimmy's spot) already has a steady following and they all know fall has arrived and they'll come oftener because of it. Tsk! Tsk! Such a departure.

Cafe La Paree returns to its winter "Skyride" by radio this season. The station will be WMAL and the time, midnight to 1 a. m., Sunday nights, featuring Al Sakol and his orchestra and guest entertainers. Leo Carilla was on hand for the opener last Sunday night. Friday night will be College Night again, too.

Reminding you that Bill Cassi is at Griffith Farms for an unlimited engagement—the same Maestro Cassi who was in charge of the music at Dempsey's Supper Club in New York. . . . Jimmy Byrd insists that his Mayfair is crowded for the cocktail hour each afternoon because of the excellence of the cocktails. But someone observes that women don't know a good cocktail when they taste it, and give credit in part to Jack and Roy and their entertainment.

The chorus hoppers in the opening number of the floor show at the Lotus this week appear in cowboy costumes and start the show off not only with a bang, but plenty of whoopies and actions. Larue and Masters add a ballroom touch with their dancing, and Vera Bayes and Irene Lee present an acrobatic number with flips and handsprings and such in a most graceful manner. Features: George Gordon in a slack wire exhibition.

Paul Tremaine, the popular dance maestro of the networks not so long ago, is featuring the show at Cocoanut Grove this week. The Tremaine band is lending a big-time touch to the K street gathering spot. Cassandra, the mystic, will surprise you with her occult powers. Tania and Kirsoff, dance team, have been retained for a third week, which gives you a rough idea of how well they are being received.

Shoreham and Lafayette Entertainers

Nona Noel, harpist, is featured at luncheon and throughout the dinner hour at the Lafayette Hotel this week. Below, Adrienne, the mystic, entertaining at the Shoreham at the cocktail hour and also appearing in the floor shows.

General Parker Retires; Served Army 46 Years

Was Decorated for Bravery in World War and Given Promotion.

Another of its World War division commanders was lost to the Army yesterday with the retirement of Maj. Gen. Frank Parker, commanding the Third Army and the Eighth Corps Area.

In closing 46 years of active service, Gen. Parker throughout this September directed the Third Army Command Post exercise, near Fort Sam Houston, the largest military exercise of its kind ever to be held in the South.

With the retirement of Gen. Parker, but one general officer who headed a division during the World War remains on the active list. He is Gen. Douglas MacArthur, now assigned to special duty with the Philippine government.

Born in Georgetown, S. C., on September 21, 1872, Gen. Parker was graduated from West Point in 1894. He served with distinction in the Spanish-American War.

In 1914, at the outbreak of the World War, he was studying at the Ecole de Guerre, in France. He became a military observer of the great conflict, and when the United States entered the struggle he was placed in command of the Eighteenth Infantry Regiment of the First Division.

He was prompted successively to command the First Infantry Brigade, and then the entire division.

Gen. Parker was cited for gallantry in action as commander of the Eighteenth Infantry in the battles of Toul, Cantigny and the Aisne-Marne, and for command of the First Brigade at St. Mihiel, and the division in the Argonne-Meuse offensive.

In March, 1919, he was awarded the Distinguished Service Medal.

Charles Ponzi to Marry 18-Year-Old Italian Girl

Rome, Sept. 29 (U.P.).—Charles Ponzi, whose golden bubble of quick riches burst in the face of thousands of Americans in 1920—for which he served a seven-year prison term and was deported—today revealed he was going to remarry "as soon as I can divorce my wife in America."

He is engaged to Anna Cinieri, 18, of Milan, student at Superior Teachers College. Panzi is 54.

"I will do my utmost to expedite my divorce and marry Anna, considering that I am growing old," Ponzi said.

Military Demands Peril Tokyo Rule

Tokyo, Sept. 29 (AP).—Joint army and navy demands that national policy be decided by a control board within the cabinet were pressed today on the government.

Influential militarist leaders in both branches of the service recommended sweeping revision of administration methods, all closely affecting Japan's military set-up.

The bloc demanded, among other reforms, that formulation of national policy be directed by a minister without portfolio and that the sweeping changes be made without discussion.

It was feared Lieut. Gen. Juichi Terauchi, minister of war, might resign, causing the fall of the cabinet, should Premier Koki Hirota reject the proposal.

Patients Saved From Fire.

Dallas, Tex., Sept. 29 (AP).—Nurses and firemen carried 23 patients of the Spann Sanitarium to safety today when fire raged through the basement and lower floor. Investigators said the fire started from a heating unit and estimated damage at $5,000.

Work Completed At Meridian Hill

Completion of improvements to Meridian Hill Park was announced yesterday by C. Marshall Finnan, superintendent of National Capital Parks.

With a new fountain, wells for 16 elms, concrete benches, walks, lighting standards and other features, the park now represents a total investment of $2,500,000. Although it has been under development many years, the most outstanding improvements were made possible by PWA funds allotted last year.

The parks office accepted the contractor's work following an inspection tour Monday by Horace W. Peaslee, PWA architect, and Malcolm Kirkpatrick, F. F. Gillen and Finnan, of the National Park Service.

Mrs. Simpson Won Divorce In Warrenton

By the Associated Press.

Warrenton, Va., Sept. 29.—News dispatches listing Mrs. Ernest Simpson as a guest of King Edward VIII at Balmoral Castle, Scotland, recalled to Warrentonians today the fact that both Mrs. Simpson and her mother had once been favorites of the social colony here.

It was here that the present Mrs. Simpson, born Bessie Wallis Warfield, of Baltimore, obtained her divorce in 1827 from Lieut. E. Winfield Spencer, U. S. N., whom she had married in 1916.

Before that, in the days when Warrenton was known throughout the East as a summer resort for society, one of the belles who attracted much attention was Alice Montague, who later married Wallis Warfield, of Baltimore.

When her daughter sought a divorce from Lieut. Spencer, she first went to Front Royal to establish a residence and engaged as her attorney Aubrey G. Weaver, now a State Senator.

But "Wallis" changed her plans and came to Warrenton, where she remained for a year, until December 10, 1927, when the divorce was granted on grounds of desertion. The case is in the Fauquier County records.

Later she married Mr. Simpson, Canadian born Harvard graduate, whom she met in London.

Those who knew her here recall her as one of the most popular and charming women ever wined and dined and escorted by the sportsmen and professional men frequenting the resort.

G. W. Registration Opens Tomorrow

Registration in the in-service seminars at George Washington University will be begun tomorrow and continued throughout October, it was announced yesterday.

Teachers and school administrators, as well as parent-teacher and similar community groups, who have educational or psychological problems to which they wish to devote study and research under university supervision, are eligible for these courses.

The in-service seminars are an experiment in educational service, conducted jointly by the university, through its School of Education and the District public schools, with a view to taking the university out to the community.

Begun last year, under the supervision of Prof. Lawrence L. Jarvie, they will be continued during 1936-37.

Woodrings Stage Party For Schleys

Acting Secretary of War, Wife Entertain for Their House Guests.

Colonel Soon to Assume Command at Fort Belvoir.

By Marylyn Reeve.

Woodlawn, the home of the Secretary of War and Mrs. Harry H. Woodring, was the essence of hospitality yesterday, when they entertained in honor of their house guests, Col. and Mrs. Julian Schley. The Schleys just have returned to the mainland from Panama, where the colonel was Governor General of the Canal Zone, and soon will move into their quarters at Fort Belvoir, the colonel's new command.

Entering the historic residence, the clinging chill and dampness and the leaden skies were completely forgotten. In the four rooms where the guests gathered were great crackling fires. Groups of the officers and their wives from Fort Belvoir and several members of the Engineers Corps who are stationed in town settled themselves about the hearths. The young student officers at the school, like youngsters out of classes, lightly discussed their studies. There also was talk of the next hop, of the dramatic club and of the fox hunts which will start soon.

Mrs. Woodring, who always is a gracious young hostess, had on a gown of royal blue crepe, fashioned with a shawl collar edged with narrow pleatings and caught at the neck with a clip. Mrs. Schley was wearing a smart gown of black velvet, made with short sleeves and a turtle neck. With this she wore a long strand of pearls. While their wives remained in the smaller reception room, Mr. Woodring and Col. Schley moved from group to group, the former making occasional introductions and the latter renewing old acquaintances.

Sister of Host Present.

At the beginning of the party, sturdy Marcus and dainty little Melissa, gay tow-headed youngsters of the household, made their appearance. Little Miss Woodring, in the arms of her nurse, wore a shell pink woolly frock, while her brother, marching through the tall doors in true soldierly fashion, was attired in a knitted suit of light blue. They were back again in time to join in the farewells.

Miss Lyda Woodring, sister of the host, who is a great favorite with her niece and nephew, was costumed in a black heavy crepe frock which had a vest of silk braid tracings.

Capt. William Ritchie, aid to Secretary Woodring, was busy seeing that the guests were provided for.

Maj. and Mrs. Alexander MacNabb, who still seem to belong to Fort Myer, so recent is their change from the Cavalry post to the one on the Potomac, were there. She was in black, her small hat cocked over one eye.

The Chief of Staff and Mrs. Malin Craig were accompanied by the general's aid, Capt. C. D. Lee, and Mrs. Lee. Others from Washington who motored down for the party were the Assistant Chief of Engineers, Brig Gen. George B. Pillsbury and Mrs. Pillsbury. Mrs. Pillsbury has just returned to join the general in their home in Wyoming avenue after a summer spent in a series of interesting visits. She and her daughter, Miss Betsy Pillsbury, spent several weeks abroad, later returning to their New England summer home, where Gen. Pillsbury joined them for the remainder of the season. Miss Betsy is finishing her last year in the study of architecture and designing in Boston. Her brother, Mr. Philip Pillsbury, now is at Harvard Medical School, and young Master Tom is enrolled at the Hill School for Boys. They will all be here for Thanksgiving. Yesterday, Mrs. Pillsbury was wearing a black and white printed crepe and a small black beret of straw.

Orchestra Hidden.

Many of the guests had their refreshments in the central salon and listened to the program of popular melodies presented by Army musicians, who were sitting out of sight up the winding stairway. Among the guests were Col. and Mrs. Douglas Gillette, the latter in a forest green knit frock with a scarf of red foxes; Lieut. and Mrs. Robert McDonough, Miss Lucy Gross; wearing a biege-mustard colored tweed frock, a dark brown toreador hat, with straps fastening under her chin; Chaplain and Mrs. John R. Wright, and their daughter, Miss Evelyn Wright, the latter in black with bands of chiffon inserted at the neck, and a peak-crowned hat of black velour, and Capt. and Mrs. Thomas R. Howard.

Mrs. Warren T. Hannum, who took her turn at the table, was wearing a dark blue satin afternoon gown and a wide-brimmed hat of matching stitched taffeta. Miss Charlotte Hannum had on a tailored costume, the jacket of which was of black velvet and the skirt of black and white plaid; her small-brimmed hat was of the plaid.

Others present included Maj. and Mrs. James McCallam, the latter wearing a black suit with a blouse printed in soft blue and ivory tones; Col. Henry Wingate, Capt. and Mrs. Homer Pettit, Mrs. Pettit attired in black with touches of white; Capt. and Mrs. Herman H. Pohl, Lieut. John Matheson, Lieut. Don Phelan and Col. and Mrs. William R. Dear.

The Barkers Announce Daughter's Betrothal

Mr. and Mrs. Reginald A. Barker, of New York, have announced the engagement of their daughter, Mrs. Thelma M. Leonard, to Mr. Robert Thompson Pell, son of Mr. and Mrs. Stephen H. P. Pell, of New York.

Mr. Pell formerly was press attache of the United States Embassy in Paris. The wedding will take place in the autumn.

Social Season Under Way With Entertaining, Concert Planning

The Merry Whirl

By Marylyn.

When Audrey Campbell bought herself a house, she did so with the intention of doing all kinds of things to it. We can well believe this now that we have heard she purchased 60 yards of window drape material. That sounds like a lot of windows. Then, perhaps she has in mind having some of those glass bricks put into her abode.

What will Washington do without its stag-line standby—Buck James? We have it from reliable sources the popular Charlie is engaged, to a very brilliant young woman from the West and that formal announcements will shortly confirm our rumor.

• • • •

Jane Esther Platt has a knack of looking very unrainy, even in a steady downpour. Yesterday we saw her skipping through the puddles on Q street, sans rubbers, umbrella, and yet seemingly spatterless. Her trim suit was a tailored model of brown checks, made with the newer shorter skirt, which for a wonder we liked, and her hat was one of those ever ready and terrible good looking simple sports models of brown felt.

Just picture (if you can) poor Brad Ross, who is spending altogether too many of his hours in the middle of a mountainous heap of antiques. Several weeks ago he and his mother, Mrs. Nellie Tayloe Ross (who was taking time off from her duties as Director of the Mint.) indulged in shooping for old things. After their travels they returned to town, took a nine-room apartment and then there was nothing more to do but wait until all of the purchases started pouring in from the various stopping points of the trip. In the meantime, Mrs. Ross left on a tour of Michigan, Indiana, Iowa, Nebraska, Colorado and Wyoming, where she will campaign for the President, and Brad remained behind. Hence his present predicament, each day finds more antiques arriving, and still no place to put the first ones.

Mme. Perazic, the vividly attractive wife of the Secretary of the Yugoslavian Legation, and her tall, handsome husband, with Dr. Ivan Franges, the Counselor of their legation, made a mad dash from the Perazics' honey colored roadster into Piere's where they had luncheon yesterday. Mme. Perazic was attired in severe black, her small, closely fitting hat tipped at a saucy angle.

Kitty Hall and Betty Ralston believe in cheering up a gloomy day with bright clothes instead of wearing dull drab waterproofs. Saw Kitty on Nineteenth street walking along with a friend. She looked very chic in her canary yellow suit and hat, with a dark woodsy green sweater. Not five minutes later we passed Betty, rounding the corner of Connecticut avenue and Q. She was wearing a gay rose worsted ensemble with brown accessories.

Jiggs Donahue was enjoying a toploftical view of Washington at luncheon yesterday on the Washington roof. After dessert and coffee he took himself out onto the "deck" for a cigarette before going on about his business.

Mrs. Roosevelt Aiding Concert

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt has been announced to head the list of patronesses for the concert of Giovanni Martinelli, Metropolitan Opera tenor, who will appear here for the first time in eight years Friday, October 9, in Constitution Hall. His concert will be sponsored by National Homeopathic Hospital.

Mrs. Clarence Dodge, president of the women's board of the hospital, has also announced boxes have been taken by Mrs. Evelyn Walsh McLean, Mrs. John W. Guider, chairman of the concert committee; the Italian Embassy, Dr. W. Calhoun Sterling and Mr. O. D. Albertini.

Additional patrons include Mr. and Mrs. Kingman Brewster, Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Harison, Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Zoller, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Burke, Mrs. Jeter Horton, Mme. Marianna von Allesch, Mrs. Donald A. Linard and Mrs. Roberta Campbell Lawson.

It is probable the new Ambassador of Italy, Signor Fulvio Suvich, who is scheduled to arrive in New York October 8 on the steamship Conte de Savoia, on which Mr. Martinelli is also traveling, will be a guest at the concert.

Miss Poindexter Will Be Married To Mr. Lindsey

Former Atlanta Debutante to Be Wed October 17 in New York.

Maj. William Anderson Poindexter, U. S. A. Reserve Corps, and Mrs. Poindexter, announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Margaret Bowyer Poindexter, to Mr. Eldon Russell Lindsey, of Washington and Atlanta, son of Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Eldon Lindsey, of Marietta, Ga. The wedding will take place on October 17 in the Little Church Around the Corner, New York.

The bride-elect made her debut in Atlanta several years ago and is frequently the guest of her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Oglesby, there. She is also a niece of former Senator Miles Poindexter. She was a graduate from Northwestern University, where she was a member of Kappa Kappa Gamma Sorority. Her father served in in both in the Spanish-American and the World War and is a former United States Consul to Dundee, Scotland.

On her maternal side, Miss Poindexter is a great-granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Don Williams, of Lynchburg, Va., and a descendant of the Flood family of Appomatox, Va.

Mr. Lindsey, on his paternal side, is the grandson of Mr. and Mrs. Sanford Jackson Lindsey. He attended Middle Georgia College, at Cochran, Ga., where he distinguished himself as an athlete. He has traveled extensively abroad.

Isabel F. Booth Becomes Bride

Miss Isabel F. Booth, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Fred M. Booth, and Dr. E. Leonard Goodman, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. T. Goodman, were married at All Souls Memorial Church at noon yesterday, with the Rev. Edward S. Dunlap officiating.

The bride wore a frock of steel blue, with matching princess style coat, and with gray accessories and a corsage of orchids. She was attended by Miss Tracy Williams, who wore a wine-colored costume with accessories of a deeper shade, and a corsage of yellow tea roses.

Mr. Carl Goodman attended his brothers as best man and the bride was given in marriage by her brother, Mr. Fred M. Booth.

Following the wedding Mr. and Mrs. Goodman left for a trip to Atlantic City, New York and Florida and upon their return in November, will make their home in Washington.

Society Notes

Baroness Selma von Wirsing, sister of Mme. von Boetticher, wife of Lieut. Gen. Friedrich von Boetticher, Military and Air Attache of the German Embassy, has arrived from Germany for a few weeks' stay.

Mr. and Mrs. Eric W. Tattersall and their small daughter have closed their home in Toronto, Canada, and returned to Washington to live. Mrs. Tattersall is the former Miss Mary Catherine Dorsch, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Dorsch. Mr. and Mrs. Dorsch have returned from Atlantic City, where they spent the week-end

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Jewett have returned from Nantucket, Mass., where Mrs. Jewett and their small son spent the summer and Mr. Jewett joined them the last of August.

Dr. and Mrs. Alfred L. Ridings, of Sherman, Tex., are the guests of their son-in-law and daughter, Dr. and Mrs. C. L. Miller, Embassy Apartments, 1613 Harvard street. Mrs. Ridings, who writes under the name of Grace Dupree Ridings, is the author of two books of poetry, "Shawl of Song" and "By the Light of the Lone Star," and numerous published short stories and plays. Dr. Ridings is a fellow of the American College of Surgeons.

Mrs. B. Frances Saul entertained at luncheon Sunday prior to closing her home, Tempo Farm, and opening her house on Wyoming avenue for the winter. She is expecting her daughter, Mrs. Rose Saul Montgomery, to arrive soon from Massachusetts.

Mrs. Mary McCracken Jones, who was to have arrived today aboard the City of Norfolk from England, will not land until tomorrow, as the ship is docking in Norfolk a day later than scheduled. Miss Hazel Edgar and Miss Gertrude Crocker will drive to Norfolk to meet her.

Mrs. James C. MacSherry has returned to her home in Georgetown after a stay at the Chalfonte-Haddon Hall in Atlantic City.

Mrs. Guy Despard Goff has returned from Canada and New Hampshire, where she spent the summer months, and has taken an apartment at 2400 Sixteenth street for the winter.

Box Chairman Outlines Work For Orchestra

Mrs. Roosevelt to Attend First Concert of Year on Oct. 25.

Princess Ourusoff, chairman of the box committee for the National Symphony Orchestra, met with Mrs. John R. Hill, vice chairman, and Mrs. R. H. Dunlap yesterday at the home of Mrs. Hill to discuss the opening of the orchestra's sixth session October 25 in Consttiution Hall.

Mrs. Roosevelt has again taken a box for the midweek series, Princess Ourusoff has announced. The first of the midweek programs which also will be the first evening concert of the season, will be November 4. Hans Kindler, conductor of the orchestra, will present Guiomar Novaes, Brazilian woman pianist, as guest soloist, and the concert is expected to be a musical highlight as well as a brilliant social event.

Princess Ourusoff, who also headed the box committee last year, expects to have every box taken before the opening of the concerts. Assisting her are Mrs. Hill, Mrs. Carl Droop and Mrs. Dunlap.

Among the regular boxholders are included: Mrs. Roosevelt, Mrs. Beale R. Howard, Mrs. Lewis Emery, jr., Mrs. Edawrd Potter, Mrs. Eugene Meyer, Mrs. Chester Bolton, Mrs. Walter R. Tuckerman, Mrs. Frederick Hicks, Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss, Mrs. Anne Archbold, Dr. William McClelland, the Ambassador of the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics, Mr. Alexander Troyanovsky; Miss Alice J. Clapp, Mrs. William A. Becker, president general of the D. A. R.; Mrs. William L. Crounse, Mrs. Frederick Keep, Miss Mabel Boardman, Mrs. Henry Alvah Strong, Mr. Percy Atherton, Mrs. Edwin B. Parker, Mrs. Christian Heurich, Mrs. Harlan F. Stone, Miss Elizabeth Patterson, Mrs. James C. Dunn, Mrs. Walter Bruce Howe and Mr. and Mrs. Joseph E. Davies.

Mr. Hoehling 3d And Bay State Girl Wed Today

Chevy Chase Resident and Miss Mary Eugene Duprey to Marry.

Miss Mary Eugenie Duprey, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Philip Henry Duprey, of Worcester and Bass Rocks, Mass., will be married today to Mr. Adolph August Hoehling 3d, son of Judge and Mrs. A. A. Hoehling, of Chevy Chase. The Rev. Miles D. Kiley will perform the ceremony at 11 a. m. in St. Ann's Church, Gloucester.

Miss Duprey will be given in marriage by her father and will wear a costume of gray tweed, trimmed in astrakhan and a corsage of white roses and sweet peas. Her maid of honor will be Miss Dorothea Duprey, who will wear spruce green with a corsage of talisman roses. The bridegroom will have his father, Judge Hoehling, as best man.

A reception will be held at Dorruth Barma, Bass Rocks, summer home of the bride's parents. Receiving with the couple will be the bride's mother, who will wear a gown of hyacinth silk with a corsage of gardenias, and the bridegroom's mother, who will wear a black suit, trimmed in lame, and a corsage of orchids.

The couple will sail for an extended tour of Europe and, on their return, will live in Washington.

The bride attended Wheaton College, Norton, Mass., and the bridegroom was graduated from Trinity College, Hartford, Conn.

Saitos Hosts At Luncheon

Ambassador Grew Honor Guest at Japanese Embassy.

The Ambassador of Japan and Mme. Saito were hosts at luncheon yesterday at the embassy in honor of the United States Ambassador to Japan, Mr. John Grew, who is in Washington for a short stay.

The other guests included the Charge d'Affaires of the British Embassy, Mr. V. A. L. Mallet; the Special Assistant to the Secretary of State and Mrs. James Clement Dunn, the Chief of Protocol and Conference and Mrs. Richard Southgate, Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Dooman, Mr. and Mrs. Walter R. Tuckerman, Mrs. Louis Caldwell, the Counselor of the Japanese Embassy and Mme. and Mme. Okazaki, the Second Secretary, Mr. Shun-ichior Kawahara, Yoshizawa, the Second Secretary and the Third Secretary and Mme. Hayama.

Nees Entertain Miss Whiteside

Mr. and Mrs. Dermot Anthony Nee entertained at a cocktail party yesterday afternoon in honor of Miss Martha Gene Whiteside and Mr. Algernon S. Gardiner, jr., to whom her marriage will take place Saturday.

The bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John G. Whiteside; the bridegroom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Algernon S. Gardiner, members of the bridal party and a few close friends of the couple, comprised the guests.

The wedding will take place at the Washington Club at 4 o'clock Saturday afternoon with the Rev. Joseph O'Connell, S. J., officiating. Those of the wedding party present yesterday were Miss Ennis Little, maid of honor; Miss Mary Heppel Daney and Miss Patricia Young, who will be bridesmaids; Mr. Wimbert Mohler Gardiner, who will act as best man, and the ushers, Mr. Nee, the host at yesterday's party; Mr. Hartley Bingham, of South Orange, N. J.; Mr. Harold A. Ley, jr., of New York City, and Mr. Richard T. Walsh.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

When Suitor Grows Indifferent After Five Years' Courtship, What Can Girl Do to Revive Interest?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: For five years I have been going with a young man my own age. We were schoolmates together and graduated together. He is the best friend I ever had. I care a lot for him and I am sure he cares as much for me. We see each other every other night, as a rule. We don't care much for shows, dancing and social affairs, but spend our evenings at my home, or attending meetings of organizations to which he or I belong. Sometimes we go to his home, but not often, as I don't wish to make a practice of it.

* * * *

Sometimes he gets miffed and stays away for a week, but I leave him alone and he soon comes back like nothing had happened. This summer I went away for a two weeks' visit with friends, without telling him I was going. A few days before I returned I wrote him a letter telling him I would be home on a certain day and would like to see him. I missed connections and didn't return until a day later than planned. I understand he was over the night I was supposed to get home. But that was a month ago and he hasn't been over but two or three evenings since then, and then to see my brother, who is one of his closest friends.

* * * *

When I meet him he is awfully nice and chats as pleasantly as he ever did. He is prominent in local affairs, and recently I met with evidence to show a certain young girl—of the flapper type, with not very good reputation—is running after him. I asked my brother about it, and he didn't seem to take it very seriously. Said she is interested in all the men, married or single, and that my friend teases her and jokes with her just like he (my brother) does, and it doesn't mean a thing. I have never taken the matter up with my friend, nor even attempted to find out why he stays away. My brother says he is head over heels in work, worry and financial problems. He is the mainstay of his family and keeps a brother and sister in college. Now, what would you do if you were me?

He never arranged dates with me, just came over when he could. He claimed he had been coming long enough and had shown enough interest not to have to ask for dates. But there is a difference in him recently. I know it. His cousin stays with them and she is an awful talker and influence. She makes mountains out of molehills and she despises me, so I feel she has a lot to do with it.

* * * *

Please tell me if you think I should exert myself to save our friendship. Also, tell me if there is any way I can win him back, for I do care for him very much. I feel rather backward and nervous when I run into him. I guess it's because I care so much for him. Next time he comes over, how should I act? Should I call him and tell him I would like to see him? Do you think he really cares for me? Sincerely yours, LEANDRA L.

Acquire Other Beaux.

DEAR LEANDRA L.: When a long-time romance takes this turn, there is very little the girl can do about it. Probably her wisest course is to build up her social fences by making as many engagements with as many persons as she possibly can. She needs to get out and around; to take more pains with her appearance than ever before; and to give the impression that life goes merrily on for her, whether the boy friend comes or goes.

* * * *

The next time this man comes over, treat him with the sweet, pleasant, casual courtesy you would show to any of your brother's friends. Whatever you do, don't telephone him. If you are ever to regain your erstwhile place in his affections, you must wait for him to make the first move. And if and when he does, don't fall into his arms, metaphorically speaking, by holding a lengthy post mortem over the whys and wherefores of the period of coolness which existed.

* * * *

If he is still interested in you, the best way to rekindle his interest to its former pitch is to let him see you going out happily with other young men, on those evenings when he drops in unannounced. I realize it will be difficult for you to get other beaux immediately, after having gone with this man to the exclusion of all others for the past five years. But if you wish to exert yourself in getting him back, spend that effort in attracting other young men. You must win him back by indirect methods of that sort, if you are to win him back at all.

* * * *

You ask me if I think he really cares for you. It is impossible for me to say. Probably the young man himself couldn't give a definite answer to that. One thing seems apparent—he has come to take you too much for granted, however, he feels about you. He needs to be jolted out of his complacency. And if ever you get back to a "going-together" basis with him again, insist on his making definite dates a little in advance of his calls. Any association wears longer and more happily if patterned more on formality than familiarity. M. H.

Seeks Certain Work.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Here is my problem: I am unable to leave home for work outside even though I am qualified for office work. Could you advise me if there is any place in the city where I might get envelopes to address at home for any firm? I would appreciate your advice very much. Sincerely, EAGER.

DEAR EAGER: I have seen much work advertised from time to time in the classified sections of the daily and Sunday newspapers locally published. The best advice I can give you is to watch for such advertisements; to insert an advertisement of your own soliciting such work, and to file an application with local employment agencies. M. H.

* * * *

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Woman's Page.

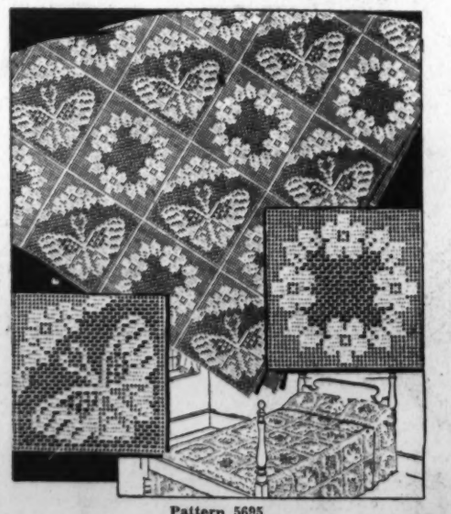

Shirts and Ties Match in Tone

Striped shirts harmonizing with the suits, worn with figured silk ties also in harmonizing tones, are a high fashion note of the hour, we are told by a Washington man who is very careful in his selection of ties and shirts. The ground of the silk matches the highest color tone in the shirt and the figured motifs are small and quite far apart.

While women eschew the wearing of stripes and figured motifs together or a striped dress and polka tie, the present day man of fashion is fearless in his combination of these designs. Polka dotted ties are very much in the masculine vogue and are worn with any kind of daytime suit. If a handkerchief does peek out of a breast pocket it must match the tie in color and design rather than the shirt, we are told by this same well dressed man.

But there are some who insist that the only kind of shirt and tie to wear with a plaid or striped suit is a plain one. Others insist that a striped shirt can be worn with any kind of suit, but that the tie must be plain and dark in tone.

Two Crochet Squares Form Theme of Lacy Spread or Scarf

Pattern 5695.

By Alice Brooks.

IN THIS PATTERN filet crochet, that favorite of the modern needlewoman, is adapted to two lovely squares—handsome used together—effective each used alone in cloth, bedspread or scarf. The lace stitch sets off the design in each square. String is the matrial used and you'll be delighted with the result. You can also use mercerized cotton to make the squares a smaller size. In patter 5695 you will find instructions and charts for making the squares shown; an illustration of them and of the stitches needed; material requirements.

To obtain this pattern send 10 cents in stamps or coin (coin preferred) to The Washington Post, Household Arts Dept., 259 W. Fourteenth street, New York, N. Y. Be sure to write plainly your name, address and number.

Sheer Wools Predominate Paris Styles

Broadcloth Runs Gaumet, Even Adapted Now to Formal Wear.

THE PARIS openings all emphasized the fashion prestige of wool, especially broadcloth. This popular fabric of yesteryear has not only appeared in the smartest of suits, coats and daytime frocks, but has now gone completely formal for evening. It is used alone depending entirely on line for chic effect, and also in combination with very sheer materials, such as lace, for interesting contrast.

Broadcloth has a lovely sheen which is in keeping with the present trend toward glamor and glitter. The sheer broadcloths, however, are usually dull, making an excellent foil for shiny accessories, such as jet or rhinestone jewelry. In any of the new or old interpretations, the texture adapts itself well to the numerous and various style vagaries of the present season. Unlike other woolens, broadcloth is an "all-time" fabric, equally at home, attending a football game, in an office, or dining formally.

Particularly Adaptable.

Such noted designers as Alix, Creed, Vionnet, Lelong and Maggy Rouff have sponsored broadcloth in all of their collections; in both the chiffon and conventional weights. The high waistlines, swallow tails and large lapels of the directoire period are particularly smart when broadcloth is used as a medium for the fashioning. The same is true of the Incroyable, Victorian and Edwardian influences. This versatility of styling makes broadcloth adaptable to all women—short or tall, slim or plump. It is the one fabric this season, which is 100 per cent in fashion trends and versatile enough to cater to every member of the feminine world—young or old.

Black Leading Color.

Black broadcloth is first in importance. This cloth has always seemed synonymous with black, and is at its best when interpreting the mode, in this color. Greens come next in the color parade and then, wine reds, purplish and ink blues, deep dark browns, some beige and gray. Lavishly trimmed with fur, such as Persian lamb or gaylack, the sheen and texture of this popular fabric is enhanced, especially when used for daytime suits or coats, or the long-skirted cocktail-dinner suit.

For simple daytime frocks, the broadcloth is usually unadorned, except for buttons of self-material. Formal evening, finds the sheer broadcloths styled alone, intricate in fashioning; the heavier broadcloths, combined with laces, marquisette, sequins and embroidered net. Either choice is the epitome of smartness, in accordance with the present mode. Broadcloth coats and suits for general wear may be of the flared or pencil silhouette and dramatic in their simplicity, or simply loaded with fur. The 1936 broadcloth is as flexible as the 1936 style trends.

Pleasant HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

"WHENEVER I mention making any changes around our nice old house, my college daughter says in dismay 'Oh, Mother, then it would be different!' You see all of us who are left get home at vacations and holidays and everything is just as when the children were little.' This is from a letter from a reader who lives in the country.

"But a house does have to have repairs from time to time," she continued, "and it's up to 'Mother' to make them, whether or no. So that's what I'm busy doing now. The main hall has ivory walls with white woodwork, walnut steps and banisters . . . the curtains on each side of the door and over the top of the door. I'm having in a sort of turquoise-acquamarine. A hall bedroom, which we use as a powder room except when someone sleeps on the couch there, has ivory walls and red toile de Jouy curtains and dressing table skirt. My bedroom has mahogany furniture and yellow walls, but I'm going to have them repainted to a peach shade . . . and have flowered chintz curtains made to draw. The guest room has twin beds, which are new, but the rest of the furniture is antique mahogany. There is matting on the floor, then hooked rugs over that, and light-green walls with white woodwork . . . it looks pleasantly 'country.' This room opens into a 'pink' bathroom, which is really all white with a solid black floor and pink accessories and curtains. My daughter's room has blue walls, hooked rugs, old mahogany furniture, white dimity curtains, spread and dressing table skirt. . . .

"But I mustn't say another word how I've rambled on, and I seem to have put in the family history, too. But anyhow it's a happy family."

With a very grand lady for a mother, too, is what we add to that story of a pleasant home.

TODAY'S HEALTH TALK

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

Welfare of Kidneys.

As a rule, the body will exhibit what we call "symptoms" whenever illness comes along. Pain, swelling, disturbances of vision, the inability to use muscles, etc., all mean something. Perhaps it is unfortunate that disease in the kidneys is rarely associated with pain. As a result, we must look to the secretion from these structures (the urine) to tell us what is wrong. We study this fluid, therefore, and we have learned that when it contains blood and albumin the organs are diseased.

Every part of the body can be injured by infection. For example, if scarlet fever or tonsilitis comes along, the toxins produced by the growing bacteria may so damage the delicate kidney tissue that blood will leak through. The "smoky" or reddish appearance of the urine may constitute the first warning sign that all is not well.

Great Care Urged.

If an excessive number of red blood cells are found we know that trouble exists in the tufts or nests of capillaries that form the urine secreting depots. There are myriads of these and we can suffer the loss of many of them without danger to life. On the other hand, a poison may affect them all alike, thus lowering their output greatly. If swollen, they may allow blood and albumin to filter through and mix with the urine. This is called acute nephritis, indicating inflammation of the kidneys. Not infrequently the patient's face and body will become puffy, due to the accumulation of fluid that has not been excreted.

With absolute rest in bed, bold starvation and appropriate remedies which the physician can prescribe, the state of affairs usually subsides. Great care must be exercised, however, not to permit the patient to assume the slightest activity until the effect of the poisons responsible for the trouble has passed away completely. Getting out of bed too soon after an acute illness may fasten upon the patient a chronic kidney irritation that will prove a handicap troughout life.

He must recognize that chronic (persistent) kidney disease does exist. In many cases it begins with some acute infection. In others it comes along as a result of high blood pressure. In this latter situation the secreting power of the kidneys is lowered because important changes have occurred in the blood vessels.

Diet, Rest Factors.

Another form of chronic renal [kidney] disease is known as the degenerative or nephrotic type. This is characterized by a large amount of swelling, particularly of the legs. The blood pressure is not increased and there are no signs of arterial disease. The outlook is favorable in many cases if the source of the causative toxin can be located and removed. It is the old story of focal infection which must be sought for, located, and destroyed.

Diet, rest, and the avoidance of exposure are essentials in treatment of the chronic form. If a large amount of protein is excreted in the urine, that loss must be made up by food. Salt [sodium chloride] should be eliminated entirely or substituted for with a chloride of some other type. The sodium fraction seems to have a determined hold on water and will retain it in the tissues. This may reflexly embarrass the heart. Chilling of the skin is harmful as cold will contract the surface blood vessels and lead in turn to internal congestion.

Baked Tomato Dish Awarded Recipe Prize

Four Out of Five Best Submitted by Out-of-Town Women.

Mrs. C. P. Cregger, of Warrenton, Va., is the winner of the first prize of $5 in the tomato recipe contest conducted last week by The Washington Post. The winning recipe is Mexican baked tomatoes.

The second prize of $3 is awarded to Miss Jennie Bennett, of Leonardtown, Md., for her tomato luncheon hash recipe. The three $1 prizes go to Mrs. Mary C. Spangler, 1835 K street northwest, for her green-tomato preserves recipe; Mrs. G. A. Legge, Charles Town, W. Va., for her ripe tomato and apple relish recipe, and Mrs. Elizabeth A. Porter, 2425 W. Lanvale street, Baltimore, Md., for her sweet tomato butter recipe.

Mrs. Cregger's recipe follows:

Mexican Baked Tomatoes.

6 medium-sized tomatoes
1 small can chili con carne
½ cup dry bread crumbs
Salt
½ teaspoon chili powder

Wash tomatoes, cut off stem ends and scoop out centers. Crush centers slightly and combine with chili con carne, chili powder and small amount of salt. Heat until ingredients are well blended. Fill centers of tomatoes and place in baking dish. Top each tomato with dry bread crumbs. Bake in moderate oven about 20 minutes, of until tomatoes are tender and crumbs are browned. Leftover kidney beans, small amounts of browned hamburger, the tomato centers, salt and 1 teaspoon of chili powder will give about the same taste effect when baked as described above.

Miss Bennett's recipe:

Tomato Luncheon Hash.

4 large tomatoes
6 slices of bacon (crisped)
1 stalk celery
1 tablespoon onion
1 pint bread crumbs
1 teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
¾ teaspoon sage
2 tablespoons butter

Peel and chop the tomatoes; chop onion and celery and add to tomatoes. Season with salt, pepper and sage. Then mix in the bread crumbs. Stir well. Have a hot skillet ready in which the butter has been melted. Turn in the mixture and bake in moderate oven until a delicate brown. Serve hot and garnish with slices of crisped bacon.

Mrs. Spangler's recipe:

Green-Tomato Preserves.

8 pounds green tomatoes
6 pounds sugar
1 tablespoon preserved ginger
6 lemons

Wash the tomatoes, remove any dark parts about the stems and weigh. Cover with boiling water let stand 5 minutes, drain and slice into a preserving kettle, placing a layer of the tomatoes, then a layer of sliced lemon, then the sugar with the ginger sprinkled over it. Repeat this until all the ingredients are used. Let the mixture stand over night. Drain and boil the sirup for 10 minutes. Skim, add tomatoes and cook rapidly until clear. Pour into clean, hot jars and seal.

Mrs. Legge's recipe:

Ripe Tomato and Apple Relish.

2 quarts ripe skinned tomatoes
1 quart ripe chopped apples
1 cup celery chopped
2 green peppers chopped
2 red peppers chopped
1 cup onion chopped
1 tablespoon cloves
1 tablespoon cinnamon broken
1 tablespoon white mustard seed
1½ cups vinegar
2¾ cups sugar

Combine all ingredients and cook until thick, with frequent stirrings, to keep from sticking. This recipe makes three pints.

Mrs. Porter's recipe:

Sweet Tomato Butter.

Skin and slice red-ripe tomatoes. For each quart of tomatoes use 1 lemon, ¼ cup raisins and 1 pound of granulated sugar. Slice the lemon. Put tomatoes in preserving kettle with other ingredients and bring to a boil. Let cook slowly until thick. Pour into jars, paraffin and seal hot.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes.

New York, Sept. 29.

THE LAST few days have given me a new slant on things, and I hope I shall be a finer, kinder woman for the experience—gentle and tender with all those who view the world off-balance through some physical affliction.

ALICE HUGHES.

It all happened when I developed an eye-stye the size of a baseball, though loving friends told me it more resembled the head of a pin. At any rate I looked like a pugilist after a difficult evening and quickly donned an eye-patch and tried to talk as fast as Floyd Gibbons.

I found the whole aspect of the world completely changed. No one stopped to help me through traffic—no kindly old gentleman came up and pressed a dime into my hand. On the contrary, it had a horrible psychological effect on me which communicated itself to the city of New York, in toto. I battled the doormen over parking the flivver. I snapped at salesgirls and they gave me the rough side of their tongues, right back. My secretary went hay-wire—filed the paper clips and threw the carbon copies out the window. Even phone operators sensed my rancor and gave me every wrong number they had on the board.

Perhaps it was a warning visitation of Providence, but whatever it was it taught little Alice plenty. From now on I am going to be all attention and solicitude with anyone whose eyesight is not a clear, sharp 20-20. At least, I hope and pray I am.

* * * *

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—At long last I've found a feminine Russian emigree who isn't a cosmetician or a dressmaker. Our hundreds of exczarists all incline to those trades, it seems—unless they are former Grand Duchesses and can write a book or two. Her name is Zenia Colaer, and she manages the social activities of the Hotel White, a noted residential-transient inn of my neighborhood. Zenia fled the whirlwind with her family when she was 16. She's handsome, talented, a fine linguist . . . I know several girls of her sort here—Lyolene, the dressmaker of Paris and New York; Elizabieta Krasevsky, whose husband makes fine modern furniture. They're all superior people. They are all of good blood, trained in the gentle arts, touched by suffering and privation. They all stand out in a crowd of us. But this same suffering, years ago, has them moody, high-strung, forever maladjusted. Certainly all social revolutions produce the bitterest, and I hope some of the sweetest fruits . . .

* * * *

Strike me cerise if I didn't see a get-up at the races! Rigan McKinney, our brilliant gentleman-rider in jumping races, appeared in the clubhouse on a day when he was not leaping, wearing a green suit and matching hat from which a purple feather popped. The ensemble was completed by a yellow shirt and tie, with green and white socks. "Dashing" is the mot juste. For the uninitiated, a "gentleman-rider" is one who gets a "mister" before his name in the racing charts instead of just "Schmaltz" or "Smug" like a plebeian jock . . .

* * * *

In spite of our criminal civic jamming, in spots, this is an astonishingly healthy island, in many respects. For instance, in a recent week Manhattan, area of worst crowding, reported not one death from four scourges of childhood—scarlet fever, typhoid fever, measles and whooping cough. Not so bad for this place, was it?

* * * *

Dorothy Shaver, beautiful and brilliant vice president of one of the Avenue's biggest stores, comes back from Paris with high praise for the courage of the French dressmakers in this year of torment for the republic. "They brought out their collections in the face of great political unrest and economic insecurity," Dorothy told me the other day over a bumper of old crusted oolong, "yet they produced lavish and elegant clothes that were thoroughly representative of their great tradition."

* * * *

Dorothy herself looked wondrous smart in a black knitted two-piece suit from Aniwo, topped by an Alphonsine black felt with a feather jutting forward. And how glad she was to be home! People are learning to love this blessed country all over again—if they've ever forgotten!

Dutch Cooking Weathers Modern Culinary Methods

Endurance of Pennsylvania Types of Foods Due to Wholesomeness and Fame of Recipes Beloved for Generations by German Housewives.

State pride centers as much about food as about illustrious sons. In Washington, where representatives of every State are gathered, the famed wishes of "back home" are never forgotten. The following article is the first of a series on States that have developed distinctive cuisines.

By Elisabeth E. Poe.

When Benjamin Franklin strolled down a Philadelphia street one Sunday morning in 1721, a baker's loaf under one arm and munching on another, no doubt the bread was of that sturdy type known as "German bread," a favorite in Penn's State from that day until the present.

Food experts maintain that Pennsylvania Dutch cooking is the only purely regional cooking left in this country. With a tenacity unequaled, the Pennsylvania Dutch have clung to their ancient eating habits, undisturbed by the modern clamor of vitamins, calories, proteins and starches.

The endurance of this type of cookery is due somewhat to the fact that the Pennsylvania Dutch brought with them from the Palatinate in Germany many famous recipes of German cooks, beloved for generations by German housewives.

Cooking Done in Open.

These transplanted home makers kept true to the ancient traditions of their kitchens. Behind their farm houses they built wide stone ovens, now known as "Dutch ovens," large enough to admit a small log. The base of the oven was heaped high with wood and a roaring fire built in it. After the fire was burned low and the coals were red hot, the housewives would rake it out and set their foods within to cook. Today all Americans of Pennsylvania Dutch ancestry respond with delight to the summons for a meal which will contain many of these famed dishes.

In planning such a meal one should remember the quaint tradition of Pennsylvania Dutch cooking lore "The Seven Sweets and the Seven Sours." The housewife of old would set her table with precisely seven sweets and seven sours. Sometimes the count on "sours" was achieved by a liberal use of "relishes" as they were then called.

Relishes Survive.

The Pennsylvania Dutch housewife had two relish standbys. They were Pennsylvania Pepper Cabbage, now known as Cole Slaw and Piccalilli. Both of these dishes gave piquancy to the meat courses and both have survived to modern times.

In making Pennsylvania Pepper Cabbage the good wife first prepared a hot salad dressing as follows:

2 teaspoons sugar
½ teaspoon dry mustard
⅛ teaspoon pepper
½ cup vinegar
1 tablespoon goose, chicken, bacon fat or butter
1 teaspoon flour
½ teaspoon salt
1 egg yolk

After mixing the first four ingredients, stir in the vinegar and boil. Blend melted butter and flour until smooth and pour over the boiling vinegar mixture. Allow this to cook 4 minutes and pour over the beaten egg yolk.

Then take two cups of shredded cabbage, one green or red pepper, cut fine, mix the shredded cabbage and pepper and salt, let stand, press and drain. Then pour the salad dressing over while it is hot.

In making pacalilli the following formula was carried out:

Chop a gallon of green tomatoes mixed with 2-3 of a cup of salt. Let stand over night. In morning, drain colander. Add 1 cup grated horseradish, 2 tablespoons ground cinnamon, 2 tablespoons ground cloves, 2 tablespoons of allspice, 2 tablespoons of mustard and 4 tablespoons of ground pepper. Cover with vinegar in which a small amount of sugar has been dissolved.

"Schnitz un Knepp."

Say "Schnitz un Knepp" to any person who can boast of Pennsylvania Dutch ancestry and watch his reactions. The very name brings memories of a racial childhood, when this dish of Schnitz un Knepp (apples and buttons) aroused the keen delight of every boy and girl at the table. Here is the recipe:

Boil a three-pound piece of ham for two hours. Pick over and clean one quart of dried apples; soak in enough water to cover. When meat has boiled for stated time, add dried apples and water in which they have been soaked and continue to boil ham for another hour. Prepare dumpling batter as follows:

2 cups flour
1 teaspoonful salt
4 teaspoonfuls baking powder
¼ teaspoonful pepper
1 egg
3 tablespoonfuls melted shortening
4 tablespoonfuls milk

Sift together dry ingredients and mix the dough with egg, which has been well beaten, the melted shortening and the milk.

Drop batter by spoonfuls into the boiling liquor of the ham and apples. Cover very closely and cook for 18 minutes. Serve on large platter—steaming hot. Cleaned and seeded raisins may be added if desired.

One of the most famous dishes included in seven sweets was apfelstrudel it's preparation was in art. Here it is:

Sift 2½ cups flour with 1 teaspoon salt. Cut in 2 tablespoons shortening. Add 2 slightly beaten eggs and ½-cup warm water. Kneed well, then throw or beat dough against board until it blisters. Stand it under warm cloth for 20 minutes. Cover kitchen table with small cloth and flour it. Put dough on it. Pull out with hands very carefully to thickness of tissue paper. Spread with mixture of melter butter, 5 cups sliced apples, 1 cup brown sugar, ½-cup seedless raisins, ¼-cup chopped nuts, cinnamon, grated rind of lemon. Fold in outer edges and roll about 4 inches wide. Bake in hot oven for ten minutes, then in one 50 degrees cooler to brown 20 to 30 minutes. Let cool before serving.

Trimmings Follow Straight and Narrow

Paris (AP).—Fur trimmings follow straight and narrow paths, or else make twists and turns like designs in landscape gardening. Fox heads top hats and fox tails trim purses. Feathers like ostrich and pigeon trim evening bodices, and flowers blossom out with new fervor to decorate evening frocks at shoulder, at waist, or even at knee.

All manner of beads and paillettes go into evening decoration, both in the solid all-over effects and in open patterns.

Well-Filled Jar Of Cookies Path To Child's Heart

There's nothing like a cookie to fill that empty spot. A cookie or two tucked in the children's lunch boxes or handed out at luncheon time will make you the best mother ever in their eyes. Take a little time out and look up your favorite cookie recipe and enter it in this week's recipe contest conducted by The Washington Post.

Cash awards will be offered for the five best recipes received. The first prize is $5, the second $3 and the three remaining prizes $1 each.

All entries must be typed or neatly written in ink. Due to the vast number of entries, it is suggested that each contestant submit but one recipe.

Be sure to mail your recipe in time to reach this office not later than Saturday morning. Address all entries to the Home Economic Editor, The Washington Post, Washington, D. C.

AAA Dismissals

The latest news on the AAA front is rather reassuring. T. Weed Harvey, business assistant to the administrator, revealed yesterday that the long-awaited dismissals are not likely to commence much before January 1.

Only a small proportion of the 400,000 wheat contracts on which payments must be credited have dribbled in and all of the contracts are not expected to arrive before another two months.

The number of employes dismissed probably will be less than the 1,200 originally estimated. Hardly a day passes but five or six employes submit their resignations. Then, under the new program the payment work for the Northeastern and East Central Divisions will be done in Washington.

A keg of dynamite has been planted under the seat of the president of one A. F. G. E. lodges. The fuse, however, is still unlighted.

Stengle's Assistant

W. J. Voss, a former Washington newspaperman and for the last two years with the National Labor Relations Board and the Department of Labor, has been named executive assistant to Col. Charles I. Stengle, the A. F. G. E.'s new president.

Voss was on the staff of The Post from 1920 to 1924. He has also been employed with the Herald and the Times and with an independent newspaper syndicate. When the A. F. G. E. organized, Voss assisted in a public relations capacity. His work with the NLRB and Department of Labor was also in public relations.

In his new job, Voss is to concentrate on contact and adjustment work in the Federal and District departments and act as legislative assistant to Stengle.

Congratulations to Betty W. Bullion, the new women's tennis champion at the Department of Agriculture . . . Incidentally, the department's girl's softball team, the U. S. Aggiettes, will stage a dance tomorrow night at the Broadmoor Apartments. Dancing will start at 10 p. m., with curfew bells around 1 in the morning.

Shrimp and Snakes

John C. Pearson, the Bureau of Fisheries' shrimp specialist, has returned to Washington to prepare a report on the field work he has been doing for the last few years with shrimp.

Shrimp, for their size and short life span—they are believed to live only a year or so—have an amazingly complicated existence, Pearson revealed. They pass through eight stages from egg to full size and although separated in the earlier stages manage to school together at full growth. That a shrimp is as tasty a morsel for fish as for humans is clear from a few statistics. Although each female shrimp at spawning lays roughly 500,000 eggs the total annual catch is only 3,000,000,000 shrimp—which is no mean cocktail at that.

Besides his shrimp work, Pearson is trying to cultivate a black strain of the usually olive-drab mosquito fish for private aquarium purposes and also delights in telling strange snake stories.

Here is one story which he said, learned from first-hand experience, actually happened.

Several years ago a rare cobra snake, one of the most venemous reptiles, was captured by a mid-western scientist. A museum asked the scientist if it could borrow the snake, etherize it and make a cast of it while still alive. The scientist agreed and sent the snake to the museum in a glass jar with several strips of tightly bound cheesecloth on top of the jar. This smaller jar was placed within a larger case in which the scientist's pet king snake was lodged.

The snakes arrived at the museum on a Saturday morning and were left untouched until the following Monday. When the cage was opened the glass jar was found empty, the cheesecloth top lining rent. Had the deadly snake escaped or had it been eaten by the king snake in the cage. The scientist had to permit the museum officials to cut open his favorite king snake, but no trace of the cobra was found.

News of what happened was suppressed and for weeks thereafter the museum officials went about with anxious faces for fear some person visiting the museum would suddenly be bitten by the cobra. Nothing happened, but to this day what happened to that cobra snake has remained a mystery.

Much reading of constitutional history is going on among National Labor Relations Board employes. Perhaps its because the NLRB act is high on the Supreme Court calendar.

Washington Convention?

A committee of the District Federation of the N. F. F. E. is sending up trial balloons to determine the advisability of bidding to have the 1939 convention held in this city.

Heading the committee is Robert W. Cushman, of the Library of Congress branch of Local No. 2. Working with him are Louis A. Rosafy, of the Adjutant General's Office local, and Pearle Cooper, of the War Department local.

In the course of their "soundings" the committee plans to get the views of the national officers and of N. F. F. E. leaders in the Baltimore and Philadelphia districts. Only about 20 per cent of the N. F. F. E. membership is in the District and the committee feels a conventon here would stimulate local membership. The organization convention of the N. F. F. E. back in 1917 was held in Washington.

Plan to Buy Gas Firm Held 'Inflexible'

No Alternative to Proposal, P. U. C. Is Told by Utility.

Commission Puzzled by Divergent Analyses of Effect of Deal.

By James D. Secrest.

Officials of the Washington Gas Light Co. late yesterday told the Public Utilities Commission there was no alternative to their proposal to buy the Alexandria Gas Co. and the Washington Suburban Co., of Hyattsville, Md., for $1,375,000 from the parent holding company — Washington & Suburban Cos.

Asked by Richmond B. Keech, vice chairman, whether the petition meant what it said when proposing a price of "not to exceed $1,375,000" and whether the regulatory body could fix another price, John Bruton, attorney for the gas company, said the commission could only approve or reject the plan.

At the conclusion of a two-day hearing, the commission was smothered with statistics and puzzled by the divergent accounting analyses of the effect of the deal should it be approved.

Byers McK. Bachman, chief accountant for the commission, offered exhibits which showed acquisition of the suburban plants would bring the Washington company only a deficit at the beginning, while Robert C. Owers, treasurer of the Washington concern, submitted estimates to support his contention that the investment would pay dividends at once.

Disparity Explained.

The disparity between the figures of Bachman and his own was explained by Owers as being due to the gas company having more facts available regarding probable expansions of service.

Hinman D. Folson, attorney for the commission, in showing his distrust of the company's estimates, inquired of Owers somewhat jocularly as to his weather predictions for the rest of 1936.

Keech said he could not say how soon the commission could reach a decision, due to the conflicting testimony. Meanwhile, the Securities and Exchange Commission, which had scheduled a hearing on the same matter for today, announced its inquiry would be postponed until the first business day following the issuance of an order by the District agency.

Several times gas company officials have disclosed impatience to have their petition approved. It is obvious they want the deal consummated before the 109,000 shares of Washington Gas Light Co. stock are placed on the market by the Washington & Suburban Companies with its other holdings.

May Go on Market.

If the deal is not approved by the commission, the stock of the suburban companies will be placed upon the market with the controlling shares in the Washington company.

The questions confronting the commission are whether the proposed price is too high and whether the acquisition will be advantageous to or endanger the interests of Washington consumers.

Henry J. Saunders, consultant of the commission, submitted an estimate of $1,392,000, including the acceptance of debts of the suburban concerns, as the worth of the plants to the Washington company, but under questioning said he knew of no outside interests that might find the investment equally attractive.

People's Counsel William A. Roberts participated in yesterday's cross-examination, but offered no testimony or opinions. He said he would file a brief. Outside the hearing he expressed an informal approval of the purchase plan, although he had stated previously he considered the price from $100,000 to $200,000 too high.

Bachman, in his statistical analyses of the proposed purchase, approached it from several angles. In one of his exhibits he estimated the cash burden to the Washington company of operating the subsidiaries for the first year to be $7,589 on the Hyattsville plant and $6,471 on the Alexandria company.

In other exhibits he showed that the Washington company already had investments amounting to $2,991,344.06, and that the purchase of the Alexandria and Hyattsville plants would bring the total to $4,466,342.

He placed the estimated net corporate income of the Washington company at $665,375 for 1936, and figured it at $671,246 on the basis of the proposed consolidation.

Owners submitted comparative figures of $706,000 and $728,625, and predicted the combined companies would enjoy a net corporate income of $740,000 in 1938 after $2,000,000 had been expended for improvements, and interest of $150,000 paid on a new $3,000,000 stcok issue.

At 101, He Predicts He'll Live to Be 109

JOSEPH R. JONES.

Civil War Veteran Is Honored With Hospital Birthday Party

His sallow face lined with deep furrows, his knotted hands palsied with age, Joseph R. Jones hunched forward on his wheel chair at Soldiers' Home Hospital yesterday surrounded by a coterie of friends.

Last year he had sat thus. Then he had reached the century mark—100 years from that day when he first saw the light in a humble home in Harrisburg, Pa. At the century mark he had said, "I shall live to be 109"

And now another year has rolled around. Joseph still lives. After all a year is but a moment to old men beclouded by twilight and shade.

A year—and yet time has laid a heavy hand on this old man. The voice falters and hearing is impaired. But he is still defiant, still confident that his 101st birthday is a mere stepping stone a ripe age.

"I first set the mark at 110," he said, "but I changed it to 109 because I think there is luck in odd numbers."

Yesterday they wined and feted him. A huge birthday cake lit by myriad candles was brought in. Champagne flowed, friends chatted gayly. The old man smiled, though his face was wan.

Was it memory that caused that tear? Memory of that warm fireplace in the long ago? Memory of that youth who went forth to battle, of the cornet that he played, of bloody Gettysburg that was won? Who knows . . . old men's memories are as one with shadows . . . old men's thoughts are broken by passing feet . . .

The elixir of life? Jones thinks it is good eating and good care. Smoking and drinking? All right in moderation.

"I have smoked a pipe since the war," he said, drawing feebly on his own that faintly glowed. "But drinking—if I had a thirst, well maybe I'd take a glass of beer. I was never good at the whisky drinking."

Enlisting in the Sixty-ninth Cavalry at the outset of the Civil War, Jones was wounded in two engagements.

One son—Thomas A. Jones—just a boy, to his centenarian father, though he is 67—was here to greet him with his wife.

Citizens Oppose 1-Man Trolley Increase Here

The Southeast Citizens Association, meeting last night in Hine Junior High School, went on record as opposed to any increase in one-man street cars as recommended by the Public Utilities Commission.

In threshing out the problem of taxation, the association, on a motion of Verris Abshur, adopted a resolution opposing any weight tax on automobiles and opposing diversion of gasoline tax revenues to any other purpose than highway and bridge maintenance.

Abshur said the automobile-weight tax would put a burden on the poor man.

Claiming a strip of park in the center of Pennsylvania avenue between Second and Seventeenth streets southeast was a traffic hazard, the association decided to ask for its removal.

It was voted to send a letter of appreciation to Capt. Joseph C. Morgan, Fifth Precinct, for his work in clearing up dumps in the southeast area, and another letter to William A. Roberts, Peoples' Counsel, expressing the association's gratitude for his work in behalf of the District. William A. Maio presided.

Tax Policy Outlined.

Opposing any increase in real estate taxes, the Brookland Citizens Association, meeting at the Masonic Hall, Twelfth and Monroe streets northwest, proposed instead three other methods of obtaining revenue should additional taxation be found necessary.

The alternatives suggested by the Brookland citizens were an inheritance tax, an additional 1 cent a gallon gasoline tax and a weight tax on commercial trucks.

On a motion offered by Dr. George Ellis, the association voted to indorse Dr. George C. Ruhland's health program and to favor an increase in the appropriation to the Health Department.

A resolution commending the District Commissioners and Police Department for their drive on gambling was adopted. Marvin McLean presided.

Frank M. Thompson was elected as delegate to the Federation of Citizens Associations by the Logan-Thomas Circle Citizens Association at a meeting last night. He will fill the vacancy created by the resignation at the meeting of Walter W. Stout, who is also secretary-treasurer. The latter position will be filled at the next meeting.

The association reaffirmed its previous request for the restoration of the old Second Precinct.

Tax Assessor To Advertise Delinquents

Allen Seeking to Clear Files and Systematize Collections Here.

Lack of Uniformity in Laws Held Factor in Confusion.

Seeking to clear the files of thousand of cases of delinquent special tax assessments and to place the collections of these levies on a more systematic basis, Tax Assessor Fred D. Allen is preparing to have all unpaid assessments advertised and to recommend to the Commissioners that all such special levies be placed on a basis of uniformity.

Many property owners learned this month for the first time that they have unpaid levies against their property for new street, sidewalk or alley paving or for water and sewer main installations.

Because of the size of the task, the tax assessor will be unable to advertise the property of persons delinquent in special assessments before January, 1938, he said yesterday.

The recommendation that the varied interest rates and periods for payment of the assessments be made uniform, however, will be made to the Commissioners before Congress convenes so that, if they approve, it may be submitted in the form of legislation at the next session.

Some Notices Unreceived.

Although the special assessment had been served on a member of the household in the usual manner of sending a personal messenger, the property holder in some instances failed to get the notice and was in ignorance of the debt until this month.

This season, however, the tax assessor's office had these assessments noted on the semiannual realty property tax bills. It was by this means that many of the delinquents discovered the unpaid levy, which has been accumulating interest since the expiration of the period allowed for payment.

One woman was given a bill for an alley assessment that dates back to the spring of 1926. She said it was the first time the debt had been called to her attention.

Allen said he has no tabulations of either the number or the amounts of the delinquent special assessments, as they are kept on card files and are subject to constant change as back debts are reduced or eliminated.

Cites Lack of Uniformity.

Calling attention to the difficulties raised by the varied laws imposing penalties for failure to pay special assessments, Allen said that the lack of uniformity added gretaly to the confusion.

The penalty for unpaid assessments on new streets, sidewalks and curbing is 6 and 12 per cent, and the assessment is payable in three installments of 60 days, 1 year and 2 years. If the levy is paid in full within 60 days, there is no interest charge; if paid in part the remainder accumulates 6 per cent interest for the first year and 12 per cent for the second year.

On water and sewer assessments the interest rate is 6 per cent on all of the unpaid balance after 30 days.

On widening of streets and alley paving the interest is 4 per cent, with four installments allowed.

RONALD MILLER.

Boy, 4, Enjoys Trolley Ride, But Gets Lost in Meantime

What's the use of having red hair and a curiosity for life in the rough if you haven't a touch of wanderlust and the courage to adventure in strange places?

So Ronald Miller, 4, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Miller, of 6311 Chapel road, Seat Pleasant, Md., must have reasoned in his boyish way yesterday.

Outside it was raining. Ronald's mother gave him an umbrella and sent him to the street car line to meet his big sister, who works for the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co.

"Don't let her get wet, Ronald, and take care of yourself," she said.

Ronald watched the street cars and wondered where they went, so he got aboard one and was off on his big adventure. At the end of the line, Fifteenth and H streets northwest, the conductor noticed Ronald.

"Where are you going?" he asked, and Ronald shook his head.

The conductor turned Ronald over to a policeman, who sent him to the Receiving Home.

It was there his father found him.

"It's all wet and raining, and sure I'm glad to be home again, but I had a fine ride," said Ronald last night.

Justice Group Seeks Support In Crime Fight

Enlisting public support in its drive against organized crime, the Washington Criminal Justice Association will mobilize forces today at a luncheon in the Carlton Hotel.

James M. Hepbron, acting director of the group and noted authority on crime and its control, will sound the association's opening call for members by describing elaborate plans to promote swift and certain criminal justice within the District.

As president of the association, Eugene Meyer, publisher of The Washington Post, will stress the need for public co-operation and outline the organization's activities. He will be followed by Vincent Saccardi, chairman of the membership committee.

The Criminal Justice Association, through Hepbron, its executive committee and its board of directors, will strive to promote and obtain an efficient administration of criminal justice in the District by constructive co-operation with all officers, departments and tribunals charged with such administration, it was announced.

Hepbron and his staff of assistants already have delved deep into criminal records of District courts and the Police Department. Local authorities have offered co-operation in any move the acting director may make.

Far Eastern 'Explosion' Imminent, League Told

Geneva, Sept. 29 (AP).—Delegates to the League of Nations' annual assembly today heard a warning of "the danger of explosion" in the Far East."

The warning was given by Dr. Wellington Koo, Chinese delegate, who declared present developments in the Orient "might have serious repercussions in Europe."

Darnell Wins Higher Rank; Shakeup Seen

4 Policemen Promoted; Homicide Chief Noted for Goodwin Case.

Detective Sergt. George Darnell, chief of the homicide squad, whose brilliant work solved the murder of Mrs. Florence Goodwin, will be promoted to the rank of acting lieutenant, effective tomorrow, it was learned yesterday.

Four privates will be made precinct detectives, in what appears to be a drastic shakeup in the personnel of the Detective Bureau as well as the 12 precincts.

The men to be made detectives are William Ellery, assistant to Darnell; Fred Antonelli, of the Second Precinct, and William G. Fawcett and Robert V. Murray, both of the vice squad.

Ellery will remain in the homicide squad, where his work in questioning murder suspects is considered invaluable. Antonelli will stay at the Second Precinct, while the other men will be removed from the vice squad to precincts.

Maj. Ernest W. Brown, chief of police, who recommended the promotion of Sergt. Darnell, said the change is being made to further the efficiency of the Homicide Squad.

Brown said that Chief of Detectives Bernard W. Thompson has made a study of the functioning of homicide squads in the larger cities and all have a lieutenant, captain or inspector in command. The Washington bureau has had only a detective sergeant, who holds the same rank as those under his command.

Maj. Brown said the work of the Homicide Squad, under the direction of Darnell, was hampered several times during the investigation of the Goodwin case by the apparent resentment of privates and other detective sergeants in obeying orders of Darnell.

"All detective sergeants hold the rank of private, but receive additional compensation and the rank when they work in the Detective Bureau," the major said. "Naturally friction arises when officers are dictated to by men of their own rank."

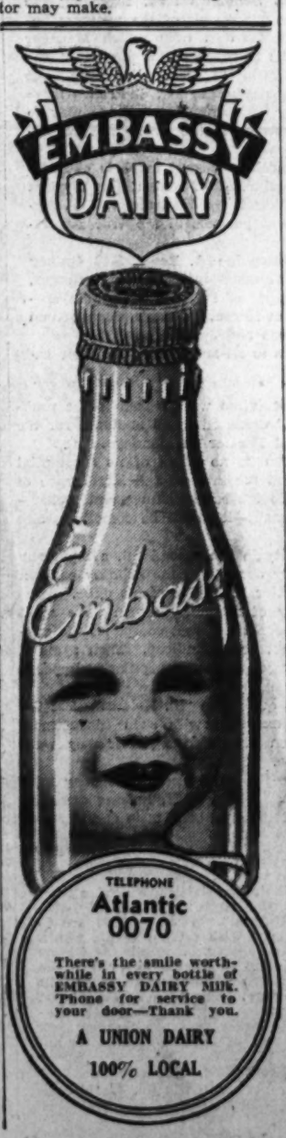

Darnell's rank will carry no additional compensation. The other men promoted will receive $260 additional pay annually.

A coroner's jury today will investigate circumstances surrounding the death of Mrs. Sadie Watkins, 35, who was found dead with marks of violence on her body in a blood-spattered bedroom at 303 D street northwest, Saturday afternoon.

Three men will appear at the inquest. They are Robert T. Wood, described as Mrs. Watkins' common-law husband; John McGarrgle, 33, of 212 Indiana avenue northwest, and Edward T. Sellers, 32, of no fixed address. They have been held by police for investigation since the woman's body was found.

Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald ordered the inquest to determine whether Mrs. Watkins was slain or died as the result of an accident. An autopsy showed death was due to a ruptured heart which could have been caused by a blow or excessive drinking.

The funeral of Mrs. Watkins was conducted at Danville, Va., yesterday at the home of her father, S. C. Watts. The Rev. Ralph Yow, Methodist minister, officiated.

That Type Hunt For Male Stars Bobs Up Again

Two Producer-Directors Go in Quest of Mythical Perfect Man.

By the United Press.

Hollywood, Sept. 29.—That "composite actor" idea which periodically excites Hollywood manhunters is here again.

Two accomplished talent backers—Cecil B. DeMille, graying glorifier of the bathtub, and William Wyler, director-henchman of Sam Goldwyn—have the bug, and are off on hunts for the mythical "guy who has everything."

What He Must Have.

Just what constitutes "everything" seems a matter of controversy, however, and to make a long story short here are the comparative specifications:

	De Mille	Wyler-Gold'n
Head:	Gable's	McCrea's
Eyes:	Boyer's	Colman's
Nose:	Shield's	Barrymore's
Mouth:	Cooper's	Howard's
Physique:	McCrea's	Crabbe's
Hands:	Howard's	Chaplin's
Voice:	Marshall's	Hohl's
Personality:	Taylor's	Cooper's

The Hunting Grounds.

Wyler will hunt his paragon in western Europe (including Scandinavia) during a four months' vacation, while DeMille has the original idea of calling on the "girls of the Nation" to yank the "perfect man" from obscurity.

If the "perfect man" did show up in Hollywood our guess is casting directors would give him the thumb with: "Sorry, but you're too much like present types. New faces are what we need."

And Speaking of Adonises.

Showering sparks fit to curdle greasepaint, Elissa Landi, red-haired Italian spitfire, denied all matrimonial intentions toward liquid-eyed Mino Martini, film and opera tenor.

"I'm not engaged to anyone," stormed Landi. "When I am I'll be the first to admit it. I'll shout it from the housetops!"

Martini was present at the time—visiting Landi's "cockeyed cruise" set—equally deprecating reports he and Landi were altar-bound, but seeming somewhat aghast at her vehemence.

"I am continually being reported engaged," boiled the actress. "Recently it was to J. F. T. O'Connor, Comptroller of the Currency—later to Douglas Fairbanks, jr.—now to Mr. Martini.

"Mr. O'Connor happens to be a good friend of our family, and that is all. I believe I had dinner once with Mr. Fairbanks. Mr. Martini and I are just friends. Can't I associate with amusing men without being "engaged" to every last one of them?"

Hollywood's Film Folks

By Sidney Skolsky.

Watching the Making.

Hollywood, Sept. 29.

Merle Oberon stands in the foyer of the public building in London where the conference is going on between the Irish and English delegates concerning Ireland's home rule. It is a scene for "Love Under Fire," which Hank Potter is directing.

ELEANOR POWELL.

Merle stands there smartly attired in a tailored suit, a fur piece, a hat and bedroom slippers. She is chewing gum. No matter what Oberon is wearing, even if it is an evening gown, if the camera isn't photographing her feet she wears decorative bedroom slippers. The men, coming out of the conference room, walk past Oberon, and while the camera is focused on her, she stops chewing the gum.

The opening scene of "One in a Million," the flicker in which Sonja Henie makes her film debut, takes place in a train traveling through Switzerland. A female jazz orchestra is rehearsing a song, title the same as the picture, on this train. The orchestra is composed of Twentieth Century-Fox stock players and girls who were in the "The Great Ziegfeld." They are very shapely and very pretty. Director Sidney Lanfield gives the signal and the gals strike up the band. The principal player working in this scene is Arline Judge. "Because you named me as one of the actresses with the best figure," says Arline, "these girls have been giving me the once over many times. They wan't to know what it is that I've got that they haven't got." I look over my prize entry, Arline Judge. The selection still goes.

Eleanor Powell is dancing in Central Park. On the sound stage for one of the big numbers in "Born to Dance" they have built a section of Central Park. There is a rolling green turf with trees whose autumn leaves are beginning to fall. You see also a sidewalk and a lamp post with a sign stating that bicycle riding and roller skating are prohibited. And surrounding this sector of Central Park are enlarged photographs of actual buildings on Fifth avenue, Central Park West and Central Park South.

Miss Powell plays her big love scene with James Stewart, a naval officer, in this park. After the love chatter is spoken, La Powell does a solo ballet dance to the tune of Cole Porter's "Easy to Love." In this sector of Central Park, on the set, there is a large bronze statue of Abraham Lincoln. Miss Powell does her dance before the statue.

Now, as a fellow who used to get around Central Park a little, I don't recall this statue of Lincoln. However, the assistant director assures me that it is standing in Central Park, and exactly in this section of it. The research department assured him it was so. I wish that the next time you're strolling through Central Park you'd check on this for me. It seems like a movie boner in the making.

Co-Star in Comedy at RKO-Keith's

CAROLE LOMBARD AND WILLIAM POWELL, the two leading players in the film version of Eric Hatch's fanciful tale of "My Man Godfrey," the picture to be seen at RKO-Keith's today, now that "Swing Time" has made up its mind to stop running. If the picture is half as funny as the book it should justify the raves it has received everywhere it has been shown.

About The Showshops

IF ONE were in quest of tangible evidence of the versatility of Wallace Beery he would only have to visit the current revival of "Grand Hotel," at the Rialto, in which he plays the role of the industrial tycoon, Preysing, and then bend an eye to the new Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production of "Old Hutch," previewed for the drama desks yesterday afternoon. The contrast in the treatment of the two roles is so vidid as almost to create the impression that it cannot by any chance be the same actor in each.

BELL.

In "Old Hutch," Beery reaches probably the high point in his utilization of the slow delivery that more and more has been becoming one of the standard trade marks of his brand of screen portrayal. This device is a perfect one for the expression of the spirit of Mr. Hutchins, who enjoyed a considerable reputation as the laziest man in his community. To the deliberate reading of lines, Beery has added the face massaging long practiced by Edgar Kennedy, although as an indication of perplexity rather than the inception of what, in Mr. Kennedy's case, has been so classically described as the "slow burn."

There was a good deal of exercise for Mr. Beery in the making of this latest of his starring vehicles. He does an enormous amount of sprinting from his rustic home to the spot where he thinks he has cached $100,000 in currency, found during a misadventure on a fishing trip to the nearby stream where he loafs his life away.

The money proves to be "hot" and under the constant surveillance of the band of thugs who stole it from a Buffalo bank. It is all marked and all registered by serial numbers in all of the banks and large money-changing institutions of the United States and nearby countries. It is upon this circumstance that the chief plot interest of "Old Hutch" is hung.

But plot is secondary in this subject to the expert playing of its star and the unusually competent support accorded him by Elizabeth Patterson as his long-suffering wife. This alliance of compatible talents is probably the happiest that has occurred since Beery played with the late Marie Dressler in such rough-and-ready items as "Min and Bill" and the like.

It requires no great astuteness to reach the conclusion that you will enjoy this Beery vehicle when it comes along to an early Loew screen.

Not the least of the picture's recommendations is the performance of a canine actor of more than usual discernment. In fact, I would classify "May" as costar with Beery and Miss Patterson.

There seems to have been some basis, after all, for Mr. Melvin D. Hildreth's letter, published in last Sabbath's lead, regarding the probable age of the National Theater. By all of the program announcements and the elaborate decorations with which Manager Stephen E. Cochran has adorned the marquee of his playhouse, the official estimate of the National's age is 101 years. Yet there have come to this desk many letters substantiating Mr. Hildreth's more expansive tabulations and recalling with some interest the play to which he referred as the first performed in the house in Washington, "Venice Preserved."

Among those who have been especially cogent in their observations may be mentioned Wallace Werble, 2100 I street; Miss Virginia Ellis, 1720 Twentieth street, and that eminent old trouper, J. S. McFadden, now engaged in the peaceful pursuits of the War Department.

Then there is the letter from Josephine A. Beals, 1352 Quincy street, approving, as some others have done—including Rudy Berger, Washington Branch Exchange Manager of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer—our stand with regard to the merits of Norma Shearer's recent screen performance in Shakespeare's "Romeo and Juliet."

All very gratifying and my thanks to all and sundry for their interest and responsiveness.

There is a tremendous field for speculation with regard to the probable box-office appeal of "St. Helena," disclosed to an audience for the first time on any stage in the National Theater on Monday night.

As a sheer character study there can be no doubt of its substantial worth as a document aimed directly at the interest and intelligence of students of history and biography. To the casual amusement seeker—if there is any such thing as that extant—it might be something else again.

There is, incontestably, and especially in the second act, a monotony of scenes among men that might easily overpower the primary concern with a fallen hero's conduct in the bitter last years of his exile.

"St. Helena" is primarily the study of a man. Women have scant place in the period of the Little Corporal's life that comprises the subject matter of this play. This may not be a handicap. Then again it may be. "Romantic interest," as the saying goes, is popularly supposed to be a vital element in stage entertainment.

There is not a dime's worth of this quality in "St. Helena." Yet the piece is staged, directed, acted and executed with such consummate artistry that every preconceived notion of what the public may want may easily be upset. I hope it will be.

"St. Helena," in case I did not make the point clear in Monday midnight's hurried review, deserves the respectful and admiring attention of every discriminating advocate of intelligence, good taste and sincerity in the theater. Those are virtues that Max Gordon and his associates never fail to impart to their productions. "St. Helena" is no exception. The arguments are all on the side of its being a hit.

• • • •

Incidentally, but not so very, at that, the National's next attraction, "And Stars Remain," opened in Pittsburgh simultaneously with the first performance here of "St. Helena." Wired reports are to the effect that Helen Gahagan, costarred with Clifton Webb, gets a little the worst of it in the matter of comedy lines. She is the widow of a banker suicide, which may have had something to do with the Brothers Epstein's notion that there was nothing very comical in her situation. The Epsteins, by the way, have been in Hollywood most of the past two years scribbling, things for what are still colloquially referred to as "the movies." They are twins, in case you hadn't heard. Which seems to have nothing to do with it, after all.

Out-on-a-Limb-Again Note.

We would be of the opinion that New York will win the World Series. Don't say I didn't tell you.

The Post's New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons.

LEGEND: In last week's Time it was reported that Dick Merrill always carries a bottle of perfume during his flights and likes to sniff at it now and then. That isn't true—and here's how the legend started: In his early days of carrying the mail for Uncle Sam Merrill was the adored of the Southern belles in those cities where he'd drop from the skies at night. Night fliers to them were romantic figures. One night two ladies in Carolina thrust two bottles into his hand before the take-off. He opened the bottles, took one whiff of perfume, was kidded by the other pilots—and hasn't been near the stuff since that day.

CHANGE: Alex Yokel, the producer, is bringing "Love From a Stranger" to the Broadway boards. When the script was presented to him Yokel thought it perfect except in one instance. He ordered the change immediately—a change eliminating the line: "This thing makes us look like yokels."

PARTING: At present writing Michael Romanoff is hitch-hiking Westward, bound for a restaurant job in California. He will be employed in a barbecue owned by Harold Ross, editor of the New Yorker . . . Ross gave Mike $50 for fare and Mike promised to mend his ways immediately and become a common laborer. Two hours later Ross went to Westbury to see the polo matches. In the box next to his, surrounded by the bluest of New York's social set—was Mike Romanoff.

YOUTH: A newspaper columnist who resides uptown toured the night spots with Herbert Bayard Swope, jr. . . . "I'm tight," the columnist confessed some hours later. "How'm I gonna get home?" Young Swope suggested: "Stay at our home tonight." The reporter agreed, especially with an early appointment the next day, stepped into the car and fell asleep . . . He opened his eyes the next morning, calculated that he still had plenty of time to breakfast and take the subway to his office—and leisurely walked to the window. "Hey," he shouted to Swope, "what's the Atlantic doing on Ninety-sixth street?" . . . Oh, I meant to tell you," the lad informed. "By home I didn't mean the town house. This is our place at Sands Point!"

D. W. Griffith has landed a minor job with Universal's scenario department. At the same time his refilmed "Broken Blossoms" is now playing its fifth month in London and is being readied for exhibition in America . . . A member of the crew of the Zephir, the German seaplane which just arrived here, is still fighting the Hauptmann case. "Such a thing," he insisted to a group of local aviators, "never could happen in Germany." One of his listeners nodded, and agreed: "That's right. An American kidnaper couldn't sneak into Germany, murder a German baby—and then raise such a hullabaloo" . . . The Union League Club is all excited. Two members sat together, reading their papers. After an hour, one turned to his clubmate and said: "Looks like rain." An hour later the other replied: "Clearing up." Two hours later a third member told them: "If you two men don't quit arguing, I'll resign."

It happened on the old World shortly after Sir Hubert Wilkins flew over the North Pole. A member of the staff brought some photos to the city editor and said: "Here are some pictures Wilkins took of the North Pole. They're the first photos ever taken of that region." The editor examined them, tossed them into the waste basket and answered: "Oh, I dunno. Perry was there, wasn't he?"

"What's the matter, Ellen dear?" David dropped back and put his arm about her. "I can't have you looking frightened."

"I'm dreadfully worried about Pam. I want to tell you something, David, in strictest confidence."

"Same here. But keep it to yourself. Ellen, haven't you suspected the truth about Pam and Mr. Mallard?"

Ellen said she thought she knew what he meant.

"Of course, you do! They're breaking their hearts loving one another. But the catch is—he's married, unhappily, and can't get free."

Ellen squirmed around in the crook of David's arm to stare at him.

"Why, how did you know?"

'He told me himself. He wanted you to know, too, Ellen. He's so eager for our friendship it makes you feel sort of unworthy. He's a really great man, Ellen. But not just because of what he's done professionally. Because of what he's had to overcome in himself. He's been compelled to go through life—and he does it courageously and uncomplainingly and with great thoughtfulness for others—getting everything that's said to him by picking it off brains and lips and faces. Did you guess it?"

Ellen's silence implied that she hadn't.

David broke it solemnly by saying, "If I could help a man like that, even just a little, I'd consider it a privilege."

Ellen pushed away from him in excitement.

"Perhaps you can, David. I'm going to do a dreadful thing—give away a professional secret."

And forthwith she hurriedly repeated the interview which had taken place in Mr. Geddes' office that morning. When she had finished, it was David's turn to be rendered speechless.

"It's serious, isn't it, David? I could see Uncle Gordon thought so."

"You bet it is! . . . It'll about kill Mallard if Pam gets hurt, even indirectly, through him!"

"O, what can we do!"

"Wait . . . Let me think. . . . This guy, Chetwyn, who and what is he?"

"Her business adviser — her cousin——"

"Cousin, nothing!" barked a seasoned man of the world. "Where's she staying? The Wellington? Come on!" David dragged Ellen to her feet. "Detective Barkley is on the scent." He started to run with her toward his parked car.

"David, where are you going?"

"Up to the Wellington to see Jerry."

"Who's Jerry?"

"The doorman at the Wellington. I've known him since I was a kid."

The great hotel, blazing with lights, towered on its hill like a ship riding billows made by the shadows of trees.

David drove his reconditioned roadster boldly up under the portico. It was deserted except for a stocky man in a blue coat and brass buttons who stood yawning beside a telephone box.

"There he is!" said David.

"Do be careful," whispered Ellen, frightened now that she had started something.

"Don't worry. Jerry knows when to keep his mouth closed and when to open it. . . . Hi, there, Jerry!"

The man had stepped forward with a beaming smile to open the car door as if it were a limousine.

"Well, if it ain't Master David! How you've grown—if I may say so."

He had a round, red, jovial face, so honest and good-humored it seemed to place a benediction on all arrivals. His clean shaven lips were parted in a radiant grin, brightened by an assortment of gold teeth. There was no doubt that his lively blue eyes beneath the visor of his cap saw all and knew all that came and went through the imposing entrance he guarded.

He extended a hand in a white cotton glove to help Ellen out of the car.

"No, Jerry, we're not going in," said David. "I want to see you—on business."

"Sure an' I'm honored."

Jerry climbed down the high step to lean confidentially against the car. His all-seeing glance approved of Ellen.

"Glad to see ye'r not runnin' around wild like some of these young squirts, Master David."

"That sort of thing has ceased to appeal to me, Jerry," David laughed. "I've got a job, am planning to get married, and am doing a little detective work on the side—to help a friend."

"Now, Master David, all that's fine. But I don't like to see you get mixed up with anything that requires a detective. What with some of these nice old dames gettin' sued by their gigolos, and the diamond robberies we've had lately with folks—leavin' their crown jewels around loose for any passerby to pick up, I'm sick of the snoopin' business."

"But, Jerry, this is different. The happiness of two of the grandest people in the world is at stake. If I can get something on a woman at this hotel——"

"Master David, you run along home and forget it."

"Listen, Jerry. Do you know a woman staying here by the name of—— What's she calling herself, Ellen?"

"Mrs. Zelda Manners," Ellen whispered, scared to death.

"Naturally I get to know the hotel's guests," Jerry guardedly answered.

"It may interest you to hear, Jerry, that she and a guy by the name of Chetwyn are out to do dirt to a prince of a man, and what is more important, to a very lovely girl, who is his friend. I'll tell you who my friend is. Then you'll see it's pretty important."

When David leaned over and whispered, Jerry pursed his mouth into a silent whistle and looked quickly up at one of the lighted front windows.

"This will ruin him professionally and perhaps financially," David said earnestly. "Besides breaking a couple of hearts the world has need of for its betterment. And it will send an innocent lady's name bandying about the world for the rabble to chew on."

Jerry agreed with a nod, adding, "and him slated for knighthood—which would never come off."

"Great Scott!" David cried. "I didn't know that. It makes the chances of publicity worse than ever. Jerry, do you know this guy, Chetwyn?"

Jerry slowly closed and opened one blue eye.

"Quite a curt bird. Not partial to the Irish."

"Is he staying here?"

'No—but calls often and remains late. He's over to the Arroyo."

"How about the lady?"

"Not very merry. She and the gentleman are always having words."

"Jerry, all I ask of you is to keep your eyes open."

"Let me put a flea in your ear, Master David. Watch your step. That curt little bird could be pretty nasty."

Culbertson on Bridge

In less than expert contract games it is a common occurrence for the errors of one team to equalize the errors of the other, with the final result, ironically enough, exactly what it should be on all-around perfect play. From one point of view, no one is the loser by this exchange of courtesies, but from another, O, what wonderful opportunities are booted about!

A barometer would have had hard work recording the sudden and violent changes affecting the hand described today. At the offset "icy-cold" would have been the reading, since that is what the game contract would have been on correct play. But from the declarer's first lead on the needle would have done some fluctuating!

South, dealer.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 spade	Pass	2 spades	Pass
4 spades	Pass	Pass	Pass

West opened the queen of clubs and declarer won in dummy with the ace. Then when a diamond finesse and subsequent diamond ruffing virtually shouted for recognition, declarer not only led the jack of spades for a first-round finesse, but played the eight instead of the ten from his own hand, thereby blocking a vital entry in the dummy. West took his queen and laid down the club jack. East, of course, should have overtaken with the king, having nothing to lose by such a play, but he was blissfully unconscious and let the jack hold. As it happened, this did not matter or, rather, would not, except for the fact that West now proceeded to make a ghastly error: he led the jack of diamonds! Declarer smugly accepted the free finesse, captured East's king, cashed the queen, and ruffed a third round. Now the heart finesse was taken with an irritating air of confidence and, of course, it succeeded. (Why is it that this type of declarer wins so many finesses?) The fourth diamond was ruffed and then the remaining trumps and heart ace cashed for the fulfilling tricks.

I watched this hand being played and was bewildered by the rapid change of fortune, now to declarer, now to defenders. When the declarer muffed the opportunity to lead a diamond at the second trick West could have seized an equally good chance to mete out a real drubbing. He should have returned a trump, and declarer would have found himself in his own hand, with no place to go. If he should make the best of a bad bargain and lead the ace and another diamond, West could again win and play his last trump. On this perfectly obvious line of defense declarer easily might have lost two diamond tricks instead of none, but at the very least he would have lost the one trick necessary to his contract.

Yanks Favored to Win Series, Giants to Take Opener Today

Frisco Kid

Joe DiMaggio? As He Goes, So Go the Yankees?

By Jack Cuddy.

Copyright, 1936, by the United Press.

New York, Sept. 29.—The Frisco Kid unquestionably is the problem child of this five-cent, million-dollar World Series that opens at 1:30 p. m., E. S. T., tomorrow on the banks of the Harlem River.

There's almost as much uncertainty as to how slender Joe DiMaggio will conduct himself during the classic as there is in the outcome of the series or what the Yanks will do to mighty Carl Hubbel, and vice-versa.

You'll meet a flock of fans who insist that the Yanks' widely publicized rookie centerfielder will prove that he has what it takes this time when the chips are down and that he will come through brilliantly—the series hero.

And you'll meet just as many who smile sardonically and claim that the son of the retired Frisco fisherman will prove the all-America out—the series goat—just as he was a complete flop-eroo in the inter-league all-star game on July 7.

That was a sad day indeed for Marse Joe McCarthy's brilliant young fly hawk. With the eyes of the baseball world concentrated on the Hub City, the young Californian went hitless in five times at bat. Worse than that he lined into Billy Herman's glove in the seventh with the bases loaded for the third out and the score 4-3, in favor of the National Leaguers. And he missed Hartnett's drive in the second session and it went for a triple, with Demaree scoring. And in the fourth, he fumbled Herman's single long enough to let Herman take an extra base. Then Herman scored on Medwick's single to left.

I mean poor Joe had a terrible day up there at Boston when the pressure was on. A lot of people said he lost the game for the American Leaguers, their first loss to the National League in the all-star contest's four-year history. Hubbell, Dizzy Dean, Curt Davis and Warneke were pitching that day for the senior circuit.

Strangely enough, the 21-year-old picket man had played brilliantly before that stellar contest, and he has performed just as brilliantly since. A lot of experts believe that Joltin Joe, with his rifle arm and his antelope gollop and his deadly arm snap of the bat, was the real spark plug behind the Yanks' thundering march to the pennant this year—that he was murder with a capital "M" on murderers' row and suicide with a capital "S" on the suicide squad. He turned in a batting average of .323 for the season, which is mighty fine hitting, even for a rookie who came up from the Pacific Coast League with a $75,000 price tag and great fanfare.

Manager Bill Terry, of the Giants, popped off recently to the effect that "you can tell the cockeyed world that DiMaggio made the Yanks this season." And other members of the Giants' squad have stated that "As DiMaggio goes, so go the Yanks." If this is true, you can bet your last sawbuck that Memphis Willyum and his Polo Grounders will concentrate on making the North Beach bambino wish that he were out with the mackerel fleet instead of playing in his first world series.

Mr. Terry and any number of baseball people believe that Signor DiMaggio is the guy who sets the pace for Larruping Lou Gehrig, the clean-up man—and that when Joe sloughs off at bat, so does the "iron horse" first sacker. You see, DiMaggio is third man up, just before Lou.

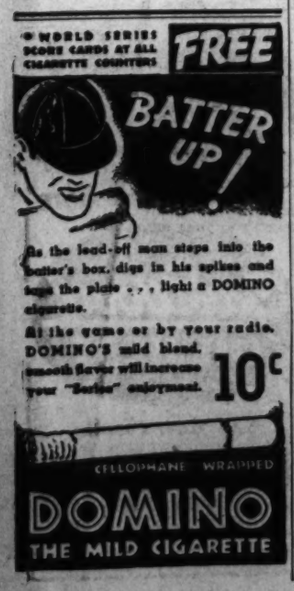

Some tacticians insist that DiMag can be pitched to. If I recall correctly, it was Rajah Hornsby, of the Browns, who gave off an opinion recently about how curves breaking low and to the outside of the young right-handed batsman would send him to the dugout conversing with himself every time. Others say he is easy meat for able southpaw flingers.

Portney Wins Verdict.

New York, Sept. 29 (AP).—Jack Portney, southpaw Baltimore welterweight, outboxed and outpunched Joe Pennino, of New York, to win a ten-round decision in the feature bout at the Broadway Arena tonight. Portney weighed 146½ and Pennino a quarter pound less.

Dallas Evens Series.

Dallas, Tex., Sept. 29 (U.P.).—Dallas evened the baseball series for the Texas League championship tonight by defeating Tulsa, 11 to 3, in the fourth game between the two teams.

Patty Berg's Rally Wins in Golf Play

Helen Dettweiler Also Triumphs in Women's National Tourney.

2 Down, 5 to Go, the Minneapolis Star Wins on Putts.

By the Associated Press.

Summit, N. J., Sept. 29.—Her red hair shining like a beacon in the raw mist and gathering darkness, Patty Berg, of Minneapolis, staged a courageous uphill fight today to stand off youthful Eva Shorb, of Canton, Ohio, and avert elimination in the first round of the U. S. women's golf championship.

Two down and five holes to play against the comparatively unknown 18-year-old Ohioan who gained the match play competition via the play-off route, Patty gamely pulled out the match on the eighteenth green. She sank a ticklish 7½-foot putt for a par five while Miss Shorb's try from 8 feet for a half stopped delicately at the edge of the cup.

Helen Dettweiler, only Washington, D. C., contestant left in tournament play, fought off impending darkness to defeat Helen Waterhouse, of Providence, 3 and 1, Miss Dettweiler led throughout.

Shaky at Start.

Miss Dettweiler turned in 45 to Miss Waterhouse's 49 to become 2 up at this point. The Washington girl went 5 over par for the eight holes of the second nine, being 11 over par for the 17 holes.

Appearing shaky at the outset, Miss Dettweiler took a 6 and 7 to lose the first two holes. She quickly made up this deficit by holing a 10-footer for a birdie deuce and win on the fourth and taking the fifth with a par 4. Another par, a 3 at the seventh, put Miss Dettweiler, 1 up, and she won the 561-yard eighth with a bogey seven.

Miss Dettweiler went 5 up by capturing the tenth, eleventh and twelfth with 3, 5, 4.

Attempting a rally, Miss Waterhouse won the fifteenth and sixteenth, and the match ended on the seventeenth, where both got bogey fours. Tomorrow the Washington golfer faces Mrs. Maufeen Orcutt Crews, nationally famous golfer, at 9:10 in the second round.

Cards:

Miss Shorb Putts Well.

It took par golf on the back nine for the 1935 runner-up to the now retired Glenna Collett Vare to vanquish Miss Shorb, who wielded one of the hottest putters of the tournament. However, it was this narrow steel blade that ultimately betrayed her and led to her downfall just when it seemed she would knock out the tournament's top-heavy American favorite.

Miss Shorb went out in 42 to stand 2 up at the turn, while the 18-year-old Patty had difficulty keeping her tee shots in line and scored 43 up to the half-way mark. Patty started back with a deuce on the tenth, produced by a 20-foot putt, and squared the issue on the eleventh when Miss Shorb missed a three-footer for a half in 5s.

The Ohio girl rammed down a four-footer to win the twelfth and a put from 10 feet to capture the thirteenth with a birdie 4, putting Patty 2 down again. Miss Berg got one of those back at the 190-yard fourteenth, where Miss Shorb's tee shot was short and she barely missed a 10-foot putt.

As they halved the fifteenth and sixteenth with par 5s and bogey 6s, a bone-chilling rain fell, but it couldn't budge a crowd of several hundred.

Ross Cancels Trip, Australian Bout

Chicago, Sept. 29 (AP).—Barney Ross' invasion of Australia to defend his welterweight championship against Jack Carroll, December 8, is definitely off.

Sam Pian, one of the 147-pound titleholder's co-managers, dropped plans for the trip today when Charles Lucas, Sydney, Australia, promoter, cabled he would not be able to deposit a $45,000 guarantee, and an additional $7,000 in a Chicago bank, as stipulated in the contract.

Buffalo Wins First Series Victory, 2-1

Buffalo, N. Y., Sept. 30 (AP).—The Buffalo Bisons, International League champions, stayed in the running in the Little World Series tonight by defeating the Milwaukee Brewers of the American Association, 2 to 1, for their first victory in the four games the series has gone to date.

New York, Sept. 29 (AP).—Jack Johnson, one-time world's heavyweight boxing champion, is going to appear in grand opera.

The husky Negro, who recently has been employed as a whisky salesman, said today he would appear Friday night at New York's Hippodrome, in the opera "Aida" as the leading Ethiopian general brought as a captive in chains to Memphis by the conquering Rhadames.

Ruffing Not Worried

By the United Press.

New York, Sept. 29.—A big guy with four toes missing from his left foot is going to eat an invalid's breakfast of poached eggs and orange juice tomorrow morning and then go out to the Polo Grounds and try to outpitch the great Hubbell.

The name is Charley Ruffing and he found out about the chore he is going to have tomorrow in the clubhouse at the Polo Grounds today while the rain fell and the wind whistled colder than an umpire's heart.

Manager Joe McCarthy of the Red Ruffing, leading pitcher of the New York Yankees' American League championship team, has been given the honor of hurling the first game of the World Series for his club today.

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich.

New York, Sept. 29.

Take it from a guy who never expects to see a better pitcher than Carl Hubbell, it does take an abiding faith in batting averages to work up a strong case for the Yankees in this 1936 World Series which they say will start tomorrow.

POVICH.

Yeah, I know that the Yankees are the short-enders of the 3-to-5 odds, that the Broadway bookies have tabbed 'em as the probable winners, and that murderers' row is no more of a myth than the United States Supreme Court.

But, allee samee, it is with a tremulous typing finger that this department is casting one timid vote in favor of the Yankees to win the series in six games—or six heats, as we say in our set.

If the Giants are a pushover, then so is the Commerce Building at Constitution avenue and Fourteenth street. One more squint at Hubbell's record and a few other assets of the Giants and I'm liable to change my vote.

In fact if, in casting this ballot for the Yanks, I'm rushing in where angels fear to tread, I won't be surprised. It's all a matter of habit, anyway.

They're not going to come and get me if I don't give myself up, but, in one respect, I am really like Napoleon. I take the side with the heavy artillery, too, that means the Yankees, of course. Ya almost gotta like 'em.

Take a gander at those Yankee dynamiters, Gehrig, DiMaggio, Lazzeri, Rolfe and Selkirk—if that ain't all the ingredients of a pitcher's nightmare then I'm in a deep sleep right now. Awright, no cracks from the gallery.

They've got pitchin', too. There's Ruffing and Gomez, and Broaca and Hadley and Pearson, perhaps, and they can be dismissed about as lightly as a kick in the mouth.

But every time I let my mind (no cracks, I said) wander away from the Yanks and play around with the Giants I'm scared stiff, honest. And it's mostly on account of that Hubbell.

No one man figures to beat any ball team n a World Series, but if it can be done then Mr. Hubbell is the hombre who can do it. Because Mr. Hubbell, as you may have heard, is the pitching-est pitcher you ever did see since a fellow named Walter Johnson was letting fly with that whitened bullet a couple of decades ago.

And there's an old fellow named Fred Fitzsimmons who has been throwing a knuckle ball around the National League for a dozen years who's apt to bother them Yanks, too. A little help like that for Hubbell and it won't be the banshee's wailing that you'll hear on Broadway. It'll be the bookies in full cry.

Ya gotta like those Giants. They're come-from-behinders. It's the kind of a team that wins a pennant after being 10½ games out of it on July 4. Guys like Bill Terry and Travis Jackson and Mel Ott ain't gonna be cowed by those Yankees' reps.

Say, who'n'ell am I pickin' to win this World Series, anyway.

Lobbying.

Managers, club owners, coaches and ball players are a dime-a-dozen in the hotel lobbies . . . Frankie Frisch experting the series for a St. Louis paper . . . Mickey Cochrane, the successful young vice president of the Tigers, holding court for the news hawks . . . Joe Cronin here because he's nuts about baseball and wouldn't miss the best that baseball has to offer in the way of competition . . . Roger Peckinpaugh, hero of Washington's 1924 series and goat of the '25 series, trying to rustle up a pair of tickets . . . and you wonder if he's haunted by that item in the record books showing that his eight errors with the Nats against the Pirates set a new high . . . or a new low for shortstopping as the case may be . . . Al Schacht reporting that he will make twice as much money free-lancing as a baseball clown since his resignation from the Red Sox . . . and saying he had to turn down 200 engagements last year . . . talk that it was the Red Sox who engineered the protest of the Des Moines club to Judge Landis anent young Bob Feller, in the hope that they could sign the star Cleveland rookie as a free agent . . . $50,000 is supposed to be their offer to Feller.

Waiter Waits 11 Days to See World Series

By the Associated Press.

New York, Sept. 29.—What price glory!

Steve Brodie took a jump in the river and made his name imperishable.

One-eyed Connolly made a career of getting into places without paying even the war tax. Such is fame.

And tonight we have Anthony L. Albano, who bids for everlasting remembrance as the guy who was first in line at the bleachers gate of the Polo Grounds for the 1936 World Series.

In some ways Mr. Albano inspires greater awe than Brodie or Connolly, for Mr. Albano has been waiting at the gate for 11 days, exposing himself to the elements with reckless abandon and amazing persistence so that he may be present tomorrow to see the Yankees and the Giants vie for victory.

Eleven days is a long time to wait for anything. One thing has been in Mr. Albano's favor. He didn't have to worry about going to work because by a cruel twist of fate he has no job at the moment. His revenue, according to his wife (who is staying at home with the kiddies), consists of $60 a month from the home relief bureau.

Mr. Albano, who is 38, had a chance to augment this modest sum yesterday when a man offered him $20 for his place at the head of the line. But Albano indignantly spurned the offer, saying:

"I would not sell my place for $20—not even for $50."

There was a rumor, though, that he would take $150.

His determination to be No. 1 man at the bleacher gate, come weal come woe, was given even greater emphasis last Saturday when one of his children came to where he sat—he has a chair and a blanket and clean linen so as to minimize his suffering—and said:

"Mama told me to tell you that we have another baby. It was born yesterday."

Consensus Says Yankees Will Win Series in 6 Games

By the Associated Press.

New York, Sept. 29.—The New York Yankees will win the World Series in six games, an Associated Press consensus of newspapermen and baseball officials indicated today.

Summarized, the reasoning of the majority was as follows:

The Yankees' power is greater than the wizardy of the Giant's ace pitcher, Carl Hubbell. Yankee batters are long-range hitters and will benefit by the short left and right fields in the Polo Grounds. Hubbell may not be effective if it is cold and damp tomorrow, as the weather man predicts.

The minority opinions holds that the prospect of bad weather favors the Giants. Any postponement will give Hubbell another day of rest and with Hubbell on the mound, the Giants hold the upper hand, the minority claims. Furthermore, the Yankees' batting reputation was made against American League pitching which, they claim, is inferior to the National League pitching.

World as a Whole Has Little Interest In World Series

By the Associated Press.

New York, Sept. 29.—Millions of words will be spoken and printed about the World Series in the United States, but the world, as a whole, won't rumble with excitement over the achievements of Carl Hubbell, Lou Gehrig and Joe DiMaggio.

A survey of foreign news agencies disclosed that Canada, Mexico, Cuba, the China coast and Japan are interested in varying degrees. Most of the rest of the globe will be content with the bare result to 100 words, or nothing at all.

as the favorites to win tomorrow's game at 4 to 5 odds, despite the fact that the Yankees still rule as the favorites to win the series.

In that opening game it will be Hubbell vs. Ruffing—Big Charley Ruffing, a remnant of that vanishing tribe of ball players who came up to the big leagues from the coal mine areas of Pennsylvania. It will be the screwball of Hubbell versus the fast ball of Ruffing.

Manager Joe McCarthy, in a press conference today at the Polo Grounds where a light rain canceled the Yankee's last scheduled workout, dispelled all doubt as to his pitching nominee for the opening game.

"It will be Ruffing," he declared. "He's our man to send against Hubbell. It's an honor he deserves, with 21 victories this year, more than any of our other pitchers. We can win with Charley."

Thus McCarthy spurned the strategy that many believed he would attempt. That was, to pitch one of his second-string pitchers against Hubbell on the theory that it would be useless to waste a first-rank pitcher against the Giants' ace. It will be best versus best out there at the Polo Grounds tomorrow.

On the eve of New York's first "Nickel World Series" in 13 years. The nickel had no place in the program except to transport by subway the thousands who will storm the gates at the Polo Grounds and Yankee Stadium. New York, thoroughly alive to the spectacle that awaits, is painfully aware of sky-high ticket prices.

Speculators who are reported to have cornered as much as $200,000 worth of the series tickets are demanding and receiving shocking prices. A single $5.50 grandstand seat is bringing $20 at the Broadway scalping booths. A choice box seat sets the willing customer back 50

Chief Cherokee Comes From Last to Win Graw Feature Race

$490 Mutuel Is Returned By Double

'Field' Horses Score in First, Second Races; My Count Wins.

By Walter Haight.

A Staff Correspondent.

Havre de Grace, Md., Sept. 29.—Chief Cherokee, a 4-year-old gelding that runs with its head down as if it were sniffing the track, came from last to be first in the running of the Sykesville Purse, feature event of today's ordinary program. Carrying the yellow and blue silks of Mrs. E. Denemark, of Chicago, Chief Cherokee added to the many successes of its stable by leading Sandstone, half of the Shandon Farm entry, to the wire by two and a half lengths. A length away came the Bomar Stable's Billy Bee to salvage third money in the field of six.

Jackie Westrope, the meeting's leading jockey, rode Chief Cherokee over the 6-furlong course in 1:12 2-5 and those who backed the Cherokee-Pongee gelding collected $10.20 for each $2 invested.

The weather was the worst of the meeting, despite the fact that the track was fast as the feature was run. Overcast skies, a chill in the air and intermittent rain marked the afternoon, which saw a crowd of 7,000 in attendance.

Chief Cherokee had all the appearances of a listless horse as the field left the gate. Patriotic and Ampersand struggled for the lead while Chief Cherokee jogged along in the rear. However, with the stretch near, Westrope shook up his charge and guided for the outside. The pair circled their opposition. In a few bounds midway of the stretch, Chief Cherokee assumed command and the remainder of the running was a formality. Sandstone closed well to be second ahead of the favorite, Billy Bee.

The daily double brought a return of $490.90 to those who played the combination of Light Chatter in the first and Galon Boy in the third race.

"Field" Horses Score.

The mutuel "field" scored its first victory of the meeting in the day's opening event, a test for maiden juveniles over the six furlong course. Light Chatter, owned by W. Elliott, made a show of her field to have a length and a half advantage over Blacksod at the finish. Third money in the field of a dozen fillies went to Happy Hostess. Jockey O'Malley sprinted Light Chatter along the rail to take the lead soon after the break and she had a lead of five lengths at one stage before O'Malley took her in hand in the stretch. Those who bet the "field" collected a $20.80 mutuel. Light Chatter ran the route in 1:14 3-5.

E. K. Bryson's Vivola took the day's record sprint by a neck from Miss Adeline, a "field" horse, with third money going to Exhort. Vivola, hard ridden throughout by Jockey R. Root, shook off repeated challenges of Exhort but bore out through the stretch carrying Miss Adeline with her. After deliberation, however, the stewards decided that Vivola had won fairly and a mutuel of $8.90 was displayed. Vivola was clocked in 1:15 2-5 for the 6 furlongs.

Backed into favoritism, W. W. Vaughan's Galon Boy ran accordingly in the third race, another 6-furlong sprint, winning by a length and a half. The judges had to have the aid of the camera to determine the other awards. After a wait of 8 minutes, Second Guess was given second money with the show position being taken by Credulous. Galon Boy shook off Laura S. to take the lead and then drew clear in the late stretch after being headed momentarily by Betty Shaw which finished fourth. Galon Boy produced a $4.50 mutuel and stepped the three quarters in 1:14 2-5.

Mrs. E. Denemark won her second purse of the day through the medium of a game effort by My Count which scored a nose decision over the favored Chatmoss in the fifth race.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—LIGHT CHATTER (field), $20.80, $8.50, $5.80; BLACKSOD, $5.60, $4.50; HAPPY HOSTESS, $30.50.

LIGHT CHATTER, sent up along the rail to take command in the opening furlong, drew out to open a gap leaving the backstretch, saved ground and was well in hand at the end. BLACKSOD, away alertly, was closest to the winner, but could not menace under vigorous handling. HAPPY HOSTESS raced wide most of the trip and showed a good effort. MELODINA went evenly and had no excuses. BLUE KING closed with a rush on the outside from a slow beginning. CHILKAT held his position throughout. TENERIFFE had early speed.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 2-year-olds. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 2:51. Off at 2:53. Winner, E. K. Bryson's ch. f. (2), by Diavolo—Viva America. Trained by G. R. Bryson. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:24, 0:48 1-5, 1:15 2-5.

*Field.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—VIVOLA, $8.90, $5.80, $4.10; MISS ADELINE (field), $7.40, $3.90; EXHORT, $5.10.

VIVOLA assumed the lead just after the break, was hard ridden throughout but swerved, carrying MISS ADELINE wide in the stretch and just lasted. MISS ADELINE sent to the outside for racing room, fought it out willingly despite interference. EXHORT, closest to the pace of VIVOLA from the start, took command briefly in the early stretch but tired. LOVELY DAY ducked in along the rail for the final test and closed resolutely. TOUCHE raced on the inside throughout. MAX B. faltered after reaching contention in the final straightaway. FLYING BREEZE had good early speed.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:25½. Off at 3:28½. Winner, W. W. Vaughan's ch. g. (4), by Gonfalon—Gnome Girl. Trained by G. Kelley. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:24 4-5, 0:48 2-5, 1:14 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—GALON BOY, $4.50, $3.00, $3.00; SECOND GUESS, $3.20, $3.20; CREDULOUS, $4.60.

GALON BOY ran LAURA S. into defeat to take command, swung to the middle of the track for the final drive and drew clear under a drive. SECOND GUESS, always a forward factor, responded to pressure in the closing stages. CREDULOUS, outrun for a half, came with a rush in the late stretch. BETTY SHAW took a brief lead when straightened out, but faltered in the last 20 yards. CORA KAY went evenly but could not threaten. LAURA S. stopped to a walk. POLLY BARCAROL, first away, could not hold her advantage and closed well after dropping back.

DAILY DOUBLE PAID $490.90.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000. The Sykesville. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:06. Off at 4:09½. Winner, Mrs. E. Denemark's ch. g. (4), by Cherokee—Pongee. Trained by B. S. Michell. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:23 3-5, 0:47, 1:12 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—CHIEF CHEROKEE, $10.20, $4.40, $3.00; SANDSTONE (entry), $3.90, $2.70; BILLY BEE, $2.90.

CHIEF CHEROKEE, allowed to settle into stride while trailing, swung wide for racing room entering the stretch, responded to pressure to assume command midway of the stretch and was opening a gap at the end. SANDSTONE, eased back when in tight quarters leaving the backstretch, came with good courage in the final drive. BILLY BEE swung out to the middle of the track entering the stretch and was going well at the close. AMPERSAND was used up forcing the pace of PATRIOTIC and faltered. PATRIOTIC quit from hustling tactics. LEMONT showed high early speed.

FIFTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:40. Off at 4:41. Winner, Mrs. E. Denemark's ch. c. (3), by Reigh Count—Annie Gowdy. Trained by B. S. Michell. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:24 3-5, 0:49, 1:14 1-5, 1:40 2-5, 1:47 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MY COUNT, $10.50, $3.30, $2.50; CHATMOSS, $2.60, $2.20; ZAY, $2.40.

MY COUNT, saving ground while assuming command in the dash for the first turn, shook off DEDUCE to open a good lead swinging for the stretch, but had to be kept to a stout drive to stave off closing rush of CHATMOSS. The latter, bothered slightly at the first turn, gained gradually to the stretch and responded to intermittent punishment to just miss. ZAY was taken back while closest to the pace leaving the backstretch and came again on the outside. DEDUCE was used up hustling. GOOD FLAVOR was never a factor.

SIXTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 5:15. Off at 5:20½. Winner, H. C. McGhee's ch. f. *Field.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MARIOLET, $42.50, $16.50, $10.00; SIT OUT, $4.40, $3.30; COPPER TUBE, $16.80.

MARIOLET worked her way to the leaders in the early backstretch, was forced to race on the outside, rallied when placed to drive and gradually wore down SIT OUT. The latter raced DILWIN into defeat, was hard ridden to hold command through the stretch and closed willingly, but was unable to resist the winner. COPPER TUBE, outrun for five furlongs, came through on the inside to enter contention and was best of the others. WISE WILL gained sharply entering the stretch, but hung thereafter. MOON PENNY dwelt slightly at the break and closed with a rush. DILWIN was used up setting the pace. SYLVIA G. dropped out of it early.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 5:45. Off at 5:46. Winner, Mrs. P. Da-Lee Watt's red r. h. (5), by Golden Spire—Daisy Vein. Trained by P. Da Lee Watts. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Two-dollar mutuels paid—GOLDEN VEIN, $6.90, $4.60, $3.20; JUSTA FLIGHT, $7.80, $5.40; SOU'WESTER, $9.00.

GOLDEN VEIN, steadied along while close to the pace, rallied when put to pressure midway of the stretch and easily drew clear at the end. JUSTA FLIGHT, hustled to the front in the opening furlong, drew out to a good lead leaving the backstretch, but could not resist the winner while vigorously handled in the closing eighth. SOU'WESTER came with a rush on the outside in the last three-sixteenths. EXAGGERATION faltered after running forwardly for six furlongs. BUD BROWN dropped far out of it in the early stages and could not menace when put to a drive.

Time Out!

Havre de Grace Race Track, Md., Sept. 29.

Dear Al:

It seems that some one was kidding E. M. Senes whom I said yesterday had entered racing in a modest way. The truth is that he purchased a pair of cuff links and not a pair of horses. Asked why they disqualified Kenty and did not disqualify Gold Seeker after Jockey Wayne Wright was suspended for fouling, the stewards said they had made the result official before getting the report of the patrol judge. In Kenty's case they waited for the patrol judge. The fact that Kenty was from an obscure stable and that Gold Seeker was from the Foxcatcher Farms was a mere coincidence. The same rules should prevail in both claiming and stake races. The Widener forces would like to have Jockey L. Balaski reinstated in time for the $100,000 Belmont Futurity. Jockey Jimmy Lynch has signed a contract with the Glen Riddle Farms. Tatterdemalion, winner of the Potomac Handicap, has been shipped back to New York. War Admiral will not be seen in action again until the second week at Laurel. Anybody having any information as to the whereabouts of Clocker Mike will please forget it. Leave them alone and they'll come home wagging their tails behind them—when they get hungry.

BILL.

First race—Rough Time was a well-meant juvenile last out and met with interference while running close up. Clear sailing tomorrow may bring this one a set of brackets. Savage must carry 122 pounds, but is a good one and has a chance. Bandersnatch showed a flash of speed here last week and is dangerous.

Second race—Philippi Boy is a take-a-chance proposition that I've dug up. Not a spot to risk the family jewels but one may get an excellent return for a deuce. Acautaw, the bad-legged, has changed stables again, but is a threat. Portden would like an off track.

Third race—Purple Knight may show to advantage in this company. The Vanderbilt horse runs well for Jockey Knapp. Sang Froid has been improving and promises to be a keen factor. Xandra should squeeze into the money circle.

Fourth race—The Denmark entry of Chasar and Count Rae combines a pair of fit horses, either one of which could take the long end of this purse. Scatter Brain's last was an indication that this one is not far from a set of brackets. Moonside for the show.

Fifth race—I'm forced to take Discovery in the big race. He should do well with the 128-pound assignment. If he is to be beaten Gold Seeker may do it. She bumped Bow and Arrow in the Potomac last Saturday, but in doing so hurt her own chances. Roman Soldier won impressively here and promises to do a lot of running.

Sixth race—Masked Queen is going to get my call here. Perhaps I'm wrong, but saw this one messed about last out and I'm satisfied she can take care of these. Tiempo and Pencader promise to take part in the purse distribution.

Best bet—Denemark entry.

D.C. College Grid Forces Work on Tactics as Rain Halts Drills

Hoyas Learn Battle Plans For Debut

Cards Get Lesson on New Rules; Terps Polish Up on Defense.

Jupe Pluvius won a battle royal with all seven of Washington's college football squads yesterday, forcing them to abandon the wide open spaces of their practice fields for comparatively cramped gyms, where work was confined to light exercises and signal practice.

At Catholic University Harry O'Meara, president of the District Board of Football Officials, conducted a round table discussion on the grid code with the Cardinal coaches and players. O'Meara clarified the interpretations agreed on by officials at their meeting last week. He and other members will visit all colleges and schools eventually with a view toward furthering co-operation and understanding between players, officials and fans regarding the rules.

Catholic University alumni will gather at the University Club tonight at 7 o'clock for a dinner meeting which will be addressed by the Rt. Rev. Joseph M. Corigan, rector of the university, Mgr. McCormick, vice rector, and Coach "Dutch" Bergman also will speak.

At Maryland the Terrapins worked on defensive tactics to be employed against Virginia Poly this week, using Ritchie Coliseum for the afternoon. Tomorrow will find the players outdoors again, barring a cloudburst, as Coach Frank Dobson prepares to put the finishing touches to the offense which will be used against the Gobblers.

Practice at Georgetown was just a jot of talk, but important talk, as Jack Hagerty took his men over the battle plans for Saturday's inaugural with Delaware. An aerial attack, featuring laterals, both behind the line of scrimmage and downfield, will be used extensively, it appears, although the running attack will not be neglected.

Hagerty intends to use as many men and as few plays as possible against the invaders, provided they aren't another Albright. He is prepared for any eventuality, however, and if Delaware is tough it will find the Hoyas just as tough and as well prepared for 60 minutes of blistering football.

Griffs Acquire Outfielder in Draft Grab

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, Sept. 29.—Out of the grab-bag known as the draft, the Washington Ball Club tonight fetched a young outfielder from the Class D Georgia-Florida League.

The Nats were intent on acquiring Luke Hamlin, a pitcher with Milwaukee, and Joe Peacock, a catcher with Nashville, but teams with prior claims snatched those two prospects.

The 23-year-old right-handed outfielder who was the Nats' lot in the draft, is Beverly Ferrell, a cousin of the renowned Ferrell brothers, of the Red Sox. With the Thomasville team of the Georgia-Florida League last season, Ferrell batted .329 in 112 games. Little is known of his fielding talents.

Fourteen home runs, 11 triples and 19 two-bagges are included in young Ferrell's 18 hits of last season. He stole 31 bases.

President Clark Griffith was advised of Ferell's talents by Branch Rickey, vice president of the Cardinals, whose high position in the National League pennant race precluded all prospects that they would be awarded the player inasmuch as tams with a lower standing in the league are entitled to first choice.

12 D. C. Pinwomen In Charlotte Open

Washingon's outstanding pinwomen will journey to Charlotte, N. C., Saturday to take part in the first Southeastern open sweepstakes against the county's ranking feminine stars.

As an added inentive to attract stars from other cities, the Charlotte Bowling League is contributing toward the traveling expenses of out-of-town entries. A guarantee of $100 is offered for first prize, besides awards for high game and sets of each block.

Local women who will bid for the Southern title are Lorraine Gulli, Bronson Quaites, Blanche Wooton, Lucy Rose, Evelyn Ellis, Esther Burton, Polly Shugrue, Florence Douglass, Mabel Hering, Margie Smith, Pauline Ford and Margaret Lynn.

Hampden-Sydney Squad Polishes Attack for Tilt

Offense Stressed By Navy Gridders Practicing in Rain

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Annapolis, Md., Sept. 29.—Working in the rain this afternoon, the Navy football team was given a stringent rehearsal of its running plays, the team being lined up against the blocking dummies for the first half of the practice, and the remaining being spent in offensive scrimmage against B squad.

Every effort was made to obtain better co-ordination between the backfield and line, and the work done during the scrimmage upon the whole indicated that the team had profited by the lesson.

The varsity started as it did in the William and Mary game with the exception that Newell Thomas was in the running back position, as side mate of Sneed Schmidt, instead of Charley Reimann. This was the position that was also played by Bill Ingram in Saturday's game.

It was hinted that Thomas might start against Davidson here Saturday. He is very fast and may be given the choice in order to cope with the Davidson backs, particularly Lafferty, who is reported as very fast.

St. Joseph's Tough for Mounts

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Emmitsburg, Md., Sept. 29.—Looking forward to one of the toughest games of their 1936 season, members of the Mount St. Mary's grid clan today began preparations for their game next Sunday with St. Joseph's at Philadelphia.

Successful in their season opener, against Davis-Elkins last Saturday the Mountaineers will undergo a week's routine of rounding off the rough edges which appeared in that game last Saturday.

Head Coach Jo-Jo Lawler today indicated that the same 11 men which faced Davis-Elkins will start against St. Joseph's. This team is led by an inexperienced quarterback, Stan Kokie, who in spite of his novitiate showed up well in the opening game.

W.-M. Back Stars In His First Game

By the Associated Press.

Williamsburg, Va., Sept. 29.—The fans wouldn't have guessed it from the way he played, but Joe Flickinger, 140-pound halfback, who ran 50 yards for William and Mary's touchdown against Navy last Saturday, was playing his first football game that day.

Flickinger, well known as a basketball and pole-vaulting star for the Indians, paid little attention to football in high school and did not go out during his first four years at William and Mary. Now, as a fifth-year man, he is the sensation of the squad.

Early last spring Joe decided to stay at William and Mary and try for the football team. A natural athlete, he took his place in the backfield, and his play in the Navy game vindicated his ambition.

Giants to Face All-Stars Here Tomorrow

"Tuffy" Leemans comes home tomorrow, officially, when he trots out on the Griffith Stadium gridiron to receive the plaudits of a crowd that knew him well as a college player and would see him perform as a pro. But, unofficially, "Tuffy" will be home this afternoon, preceding his teammates by a full day.

The Giants are coming and it is an unpleasant frame of mind they are in. Two successive defeats, both by field-goal margins, have stung the Eastern pro champions to the quick and Coach Steve Owen sees in tomorrow night's game with the College All-Stars a chance to get his men back in winning stride. Owen has let it be known that his men are coming to Washington with blood in their eyes and a grim determination to hand the home team one of the fanciest pastings a squad ever received.

Leemans Is Regular.

Leemans will be one of the featured stars in the Giants' backfield, having won a regular position by his brilliant play in the two league games. While Tuffy has yet to score his first professional touchdown, it was his ball-carrying that paved the way for the Giants' scores in both games. Leemans, too, it is interesting to note, is an important cog in the passing attack, sharing honors with "Big Ed" Danowski in this respect.

The Collegians, meanwhile, are biding their time, quietly confident of giving their more widely known opponents a surprise party. The team is in fine fettle and, to coin a phrase, rarin' to go. A light workout under the lights and in the rain at Griffith Stadium last night completed the most serious part of the training program. Tonight will be devoted exclusively to signal practice.

Torrance to Turn To Pro Ring Career

Baton Rouge, La., Sept. 29 (AP).—Friends of Jack Torrance, 320-pound Baton Rouge policeman, rejoiced today over the prospect of finding out what they have been wanting to know for years:

"What kind of fighter would he make?"

Ever since Torrance, former Louisiana State University athlete, sent the shot sailing beyond the previous world mark with a heave of 57 feet 1 inch, there has been a burning question here about the big fellow's potential ring ability.

News that Mike Jacobs, New York sports promoter, had signed him as a professional boxer gave new life to the speculation.

G. W. Line-up For Elon Is Uncertain

Mahan, Morris, Turner and Kavalier Nurse Injuries; Yurwitz Away.

George Washington's regular line-up remained as unsettled as last week's weather as Coach Jim Pixlee's squad was smitten with another plague of injuries and misfortune.

Bruce Mahan, Capt. Frank Kavalier, Leon Morris and Jay Turner are nursing injuries received in last Friday's game with Emory-Henry, and Pete Yurwitz, line-smashing fullback, has been lost to the team temporarily because of the death of his father.

Pixlee yesterday had Herb Reeves at fullback, Joe Kaufman and Frank Merka at the halves, and Jenkins and Burnham alternating at quarterback. Four of this quintet will start against Elon Friday barring unforeseen developments or more bad luck. The only possible change in the line involves Ray Hanken, end, who may give way to Washington Lloyd Berry.

"Botchy" Koch, assistant coach, scouted Elon against Washington and Lee last week and returned with reports that the North Carolinians have a good solid defense that will cause the Colonial backs no end of trouble. The "Fighting Christians'" offense, he said, is built around Amos Shelton, a sharp passer, and Jim Abbott, behometh fullback.

St. James Eleven Faces Landon in First Game

Hagerstown, Md., Sept. 29.—The St. James' School eleven will open its football season October 24 with the Landon School at St. James and will close its season November 21 with its old rivals, St. Alban's, of Washington, at St. James.

Coach Jack Smart has 60 candidates out for the team this season. On October 31 the team will play St. Andrews, away; on November 7, St. Paul's School, at home, and November 13, Severn School, away.

Tickets for the Navy-Davidson football game, to be played Saturday at Annapolis, now are available at headquarters of the Keystone Automobile Club, 1643 Connecticut avenue.

120 Women to Compete Today In Times Cup Golf at Manor

The heavy fall schedule for members of the Women's District of Columbia Golf Association finds close to 120 women golfers competing today at Manor Club in the annual Times Cup tournament.

Play will begin at 8:15, with Washington's better known golfers entered.

Women contestants may bring their own caddies.

The tournament will be 18-hole medal play handicap. A raft of prizes will be awarded.

Following today's Times event will come the annual President's Plate tournament at Congressional Country Club tomorrow. This is a rather exclusive tournament, only members of the executive committee of the association, and former champions being eligible. Mrs. J. W. Beller, of Columbia; Mrs. Frank Royer Keefer, of Chevy Chase, who placed the plate in competition four years ago, and Mrs. Douglas Tschiffely, of Washington, are former titleholders participating.

Thirty will compete for the plate.

Pairings and starting times follow:

9, Mrs. R. W. Payne (Cons.), Mrs. R. C. Miller (Ken.); 9:05, Mrs. R. E. Burks (Cons.), Mrs. A. S. Gardiner (Col.); 9:10, Mrs. H. L. Simcoe (Manor), Mrs. O. C. Roney (Wash.); 9:15, Mrs. H. A. A team of 17 representing the Women's District of Columbia Golf Association returned yesterday from Richmond, where they defeated the Richmond Golf Association team, 17½ to 8, in their home-and-home series.

The victory came in the foursome matches Monday, at Country Club of Virginia, as rain killed off yesterday's singles scheduled for Lakeside.

Mrs. Jean Jones, of Richmond, with 43—41—84, and Mrs. Y. E. Booker, of Chevy Chase, 45—41—86, reported the lowest scores.

Washington (17½) vs. Richmond (8).

Mrs. Roland Mackinzie and Mrs. Y. E. Booker (1½), Mrs. Jean Jones and Mrs. R. C. Welton (2½); Mrs. Harry A. Knox and Mrs. Agnes Bowden (1½), Mrs. J. M. Whitlow and Mrs. J. C. Devilbiss (1½); Mrs. C. The Muncaster Cup tournament will be played at Washington Golf and Country Club next Monday and Tuesday, Mrs. Douglas Tschiffely announced yesterday. All players interested in competing should communicate with Mrs. Tschiffely at Adams 9042.

Flynn, D. C. Boy, Goes to Indians

Larry Flynn, former Roosevelt High athlete, has been signed by the Cleveland Indians, is was learned yesterday. The Washington boy hit .375 with the Akron Yankees of the Middle Atlantic League this season but an injury to his throwing arm forced him to leave the club rather than be sent to the Bassett Club of the Bi-State League.

He was signed at once by the Indians and ordered to report at New Orleans in the spring for training. During the last two months the injured shoulder improved considerably and when Bill Bradley, Cleveland scout, conversed with him last week Flynn disclosed he was in first class shape.

An invitation from General Manager Cy Slapnicka of the Indians followed, contract offered him and Flynn signed; getting a healthy allowance for expenses. A husky 6-footer, Flynn is rated by Akron papers as the best base runner in the Middle Atlantic League. In the opening game, he hit a home run to win the game for the Yanks.

Alexandria Cop Gets Eric McNair for $10

Alexandria, Va., Sept. 29 (AP).—Eric McNair, Boston Red Sox infielder, forfeited $10 collateral in Police Court here today on speeding charge. The arresting officer said McNair, who told him he was en route to Meridian, Miss., his home, was traveling 55 miles an hour.

Granville Hurt, May Be Out of Cup Race

Champion Won't Start in Jockey Club's $5,000 Event Unless Well.

By the Associated Press.

Belmont Park Race Track, N. Y., Sept. 29.—William Woodward's champion American thoroughbred, Granville, is not likely to start in the Jockey Club Gold Cup here Saturday, closing day of the Westchester Racing Association's meeting, James Fitzsimmons, trainer of the 3-year-old colt, reported here today that the son of Gallant Fox suffered a slightly filled leg after cooling out subsequent to his victory in the Lawrence Realization, decided here Saturday.

The Jockey Club Gold Cup, a test of 2 miles with $5,000 added, has been expected to provide one of the most interesting tests of the year, with Granville slated to face such older stars as Discovery and Firethron. Granville, with earnings of $110,225, is the leading money winner of the year.

Granville will only be started in the cup if he responds soon enough to be at his best for the week-end fixture.

24 Pros to Seek 3 Berths in P. G. A. Sectional Golf Trials Today

2 of 10 D. C. Stars Seen Winners

Six Low Scorers at End of 18 Holes Eligible for Final 18.

By a Staff Correspondent.

Richmond, Va., Sept. 29.—Twenty-four professionals, 10 from Washington, will battle for three places tomorrow over the James River course of the Country Club of Virginia in the National P. G. A. qualifying trials.

Thirty-six holes are scheduled, but only the 6 low scorers at the conclusion of the morning round, it was announced today, will be eligible for the final 18 holes in the afternoon.

The three qualifiers from the Middle Atlantic section will compete in the national proper at Pinehurst, N. C., November 16-22.

Washington's best professionals are entered in tomorrow's test, and at least two of 'em are expected to make the grade.

The District contingent is composed of Wiffy Cox, of Kenwood; Roland Mackenzie, of Congressional; Bob Barnett, of Chevy Chase; Al Treder, of Manor; Mel Shorey, of East Potomac; Gene Larkin, of Woodmont; Cliff Spencer, of Beaver Dam; George Diffenbaugh, of Indian Spring, and Leo Walper and Al Houghton, unattached pros.

Bobby Cruickshank, recurrent bombshell of National Open championships, will be host to the pros. Holder of the course record, and knowing every blade of grass as he does, the Wee Scott bid fair to capture one of the three places. His failure to qualify on his home course would be most disappointing.

Rain Hampers.

Baltimore is well represented: Charlie Betschler, of Hillendale, Middle Atlantic P. G. A. champion; Ralph Beach, of Suburban, several times a qualifier; Frank Invernezzi, are among the Monumental City challengers.

A steady rain today washed out all hopes of good practice scores, although virtually all of the candidates sloshed through the muck and mire to get the slant of this long and tricky layout, which Hagen once acclaimed a "honey of a course."

Play will begin at 9 in the morning.

Pairings and starting times follow:

9:00—Bob Barnett (Chevy Chase), Al Treder (Manor) and Jack Isaacs (Newport News).

9:07—Tom Galloway (Richmond), Benny Loving (Farmington) and Mel Shorey (East Potomac).

9:14—Charlie Betschler (Hillendale), Sam Snead (Hot Springs) and Al Houghton (Washington).

Mr. Ruffing Is Not Worried, Thanks

"Ruffing."

That was the formal announcement of McCarthy's pitching selection. The Yankees, who had hoped to work out at the Polo Grounds to learn the fence angles and where the shadows fall at sundown, began drifting out into the rain. Pat Malone took his little black dog under his arm. ("I paid $30 for this damned pooch"); Joe DiMaggio tore up a letter ("Some screwball wrote me this"); McCarthy smoked his cigar and watched Lefty Gomez, who had wanttd to start the first game, walk out into the rain bareheaded, a disappointed man. Over in the corner stood Ruffing, a big fellow in a gray suit. His hair is getting thin around the edges. Everybody crowded around him.

"Which one of those Giants is going to be toughest to get out" he was asked.

"I guess they're all tough," Ruffing said, "but I'm not losing any sleep over those guys."

"Do you thing Hubbell's screwball will bother the Yankees?"

"I don't know. I've seen some screwball pitching in the American League. Braxton (Garland Braxton, formerly of the Washington Senators) had one. Andrews (Ivy Andrews of the St. Louis Browns) throws one, but it only breaks about 2 inches."

"Are you nervous?"

"No."

"Cold weather going to bother you?"

"No, I go just as good in this kind of weather as any."

Ruffing, one of the few pitchers who also can hit, was asked if he thought he would get a hit off Hubbell.

"Maybe," he said, "I'm sure going to take my cuts at him anyway."

"Ever pitch to any of the Giants?"

"Yeah, I pitched to Terry in an All-Star game."

"Did he hit you?"

"Got a single to left."

"You don't know much about the Giant batters then?"

"No, but Joe McCarthy does."

District Umpires to Play Annual Game Sunday

Now that the baseball season is practically over, the District Umpires Association is going to play ball. In case you want to see what an umpire playing ball looks like, trot over to the South Ellipse any day this week after 5 p. m. and you will see the erstwhile boys in blue puffing and muffing in great shape.

The umps are trying to get in trim for their anual game Sunday, 11 a. m., with the Hecht Co. team of the Department Store League. Umpire "Snitz" Nau is in charge of operations and warns all his fellow arbiters to show up for practice daily.

the hardy spectators and herself by canning a 7-foot putt for a winning deuce at the seventeenth and another half a foot longer to win the eighteenth with a par 5. She had an incoming par 38 and a round of 81, against 42—42—84 for her rival.

While the youngsters were waging their battle all of the other ranking favorites except Mrs. Goldthwaite, of Fort Worth, Tex., 1936 international Curtis Cup player, come through with less difficulty.

Mrs. Goldthwaite was knocked out by the veteran Mary K. Browne, of Willoughby, Ohio, runner-up to Dorothy Campbell Hurd, 12 years ago, by the score of 3 and 1, after leading 1 up at the turn.

Mrs. Hill Survives.

The veteran Mrs. Opal S. Hill, of Kansas City, survived the first round by defeating Gail Wild, of Springfield, Metropolitan girl champion, 3 and 2, after a stiff fight.

Mrs. Hill won the first hole with a par 5, but Miss Wild played her even through the next four. Mrs. Hill then won three holes in succession, the sixth, seventh and eighth, the first two with pars and the long eighth with a birdie 5. Miss Wild cut her deficit by one by winning the ninth with a par 4 to the veteran's 5.

At the turn, Mrs. Hill had a medal count of 40 to her young rival's 44.

They halved the tenth and eleventh, then Mrs. Hill lost two holes with 6s. The fourth was halved in bogey 4s, both falling short of the green.

Mrs. Hill won the fifteenth with a par 5 and closed out the match on the sixteenth with a birdie 4.

Ruffing to Start for Yanks bucks. American League headquarters announced 400,000 requests for tickets remain unfulfilled.

New York's ticket brokers, who can sense a sell-out in advance like a hound dog can scent an elephant's trail, are having a gay time as business men frantically take off the limit for choice seats promised clients in moments of weakness and faith in their ability to grab off a cluster of tickets.

Into the Polo Grounds tomorrow will march 51,856 fans to fill out every vacant seat in the park. But when the series moves to Yankee Stadium for the third, fourth and fifth games if neither club wins the series in four straight, then the greatest World Series crowd in history will be in attendance.

Stadium Seats 71,700.

For Yankee Stadium, enlarged this summer when Owner Jake Ruppert envisioned his team in the World Series, will seat 71,767, approximately 20,000 more than the capacity of the Giants' home park.

But Mr. Average Fan has not been forgotten by either club. Tomorrow, at 9 a. m., 24,000 unreserved seats will go on sale at the Polo Grounds to those hardy souls who care to stand in line. And the line began forming on the right a week ago, when a Jersey Italian took up his bivouac outside the bleacher gates determined to be the first to enter the park.

No master of lip-reading did it require today, however, to learn the chief topic of the sidewalks, the hotel lobbies, the elevators and every spot where fans were gathered, the hubbub and hullabaloo concerned Carl Hubbell and what Hubbell would do against the Yanks.

The Giants' winner of 26 games this season, while he was losing only a half-dozen, tonight dominated the pre-World Series scene like no other player in World Series history. Even American Leaguers—loyal to that Yankees' murderers row of Gehrig, Dickey, DiMaggio, Lazzeri, Rolfe and Selkirk—are given to doubting their effectiveness against the screw ball artist who is baseball's greatest modern - day pitcher.

But still pleasant to contemplate was the unbroken array of batting power the Yankees can assemble against the Giants' pitching. The team that galloped away with the American League pennant by 19 games is admittedly the most devastating group of sluggers ever mustered by any one club.

Into the series against the Giants they will carry a .299 team batting average that is 18 points higher than the Giants' team figures. But their superior power is not reflected in those figures alone. To find that, you delve into the extra-base hitting propensities of the two teams and discover that the Giants are, indeed, outclassed at the plate.

One hundred and eighty-two home runs the Yanks have clouted this year compared to the Giants' 97. Eighty-three triples they have socked compared to the Giants' 48. Three hundred and twelve two-baggers they have clouted in contrast to the Giants' 240. Truly the batting edge lies with the Yankees, emphasized by the fact they have driven in 993 runs this season, compared to the Giants' 692.

And there is small balm for the Giant supporters in the fielding figures which show the Giants sporting a .974 average to .973 for the Yankees.

At this writing, the 1936 World Series waits only on 1:30 p. m. tomorrow and the word of baseball Commissioner Landis.

D. C. Pros Perfect Attack in Workout

Dissatisfied with their first performance of the season, which resulted in a 6-to-0 defeat at Richmond's hands, the Washington Pros last night spent the better part of a two-hour workout in the rain at Duffy Stadium, Seat Pleasant, perfecting their attack for Sunday's second Dixie League engagement at Norfolk.

Location of a capable back to replace Frank Cumberland, who will be out for the season with a broken wrist, is the most serious problem facing the Pros at this time. Geroge Sachs, former Maryland star, who looked good against Richmond, was in Cumberland's position last night and may win the assignment. Lee Carlin, who also was outstanding against the Arrows, is scheduled to see plenty of action this week.

All-Star Game Tickets.

Tickets for the New York Giants-College All-Stars game are on sale at the Griffith Stadium box office and Spalding's Sport Shop. Box seats, the only reserved seats, are $1.65, and general admission sell for $1.10. Schoolboys will be admitted for 25 cents.

High Schools Facing Busy Week-End

Coaches Are Pessimistic as Tests Near; Western Plays St. John's.

High school coaches of the city are getting no more optimistic as Friday draws nearer, bringing with it formidable foes for Central, Eastern, Tech, Western, St. John's and Gonzaga. Western and St. John's will be beginning their seasons with their annual get-together at Western Stadium but Roosevelt is not scheduled to open until next week.

Central faces the ever formidable Washington-Lee High eleven, of Ballston, Va.; Eastern tackles Gonzaga and Tech takes on the Episcopal High team, which tripped Eastern, Saturday.

Coach Dan Ahern, of Western, is bemoaning the prospect at the Georgetown school, pointing out particularly that he lost nine regulars last year. He has, however, a fast string of ball carriers, including Black Brewer and Morris Snead, a couple of will-o'-the-wisps from last year's team.

The only rosy comment shed by Coach Irving ("Horse") Holbrook, of St. John's, related something about a very heavy St. John's line this year and it appears as though Western will be meeting a forward wall averaging about 180 pounds.

Central, holder of a hard-won 14-0 win over Gonzaga Friday, faces a Little General team which beat a powerful National Training School eleven, 9 to 6 Friday. Eastern smarting from its defeat by Episcopal, has little consolation in facing the Gonzaga crew. Tech, on the other hand, faces another busy afternoon in taking on Episcopal after turning back George Washington High, 12 to 0.

Meanwhile, Roosevelt is being whipped into shape by Coach protem Herman Littman in the absence of Coach Lynn Woodworth, still laid up with a scalp injury. Sid Kolker, former George Washington and Tech High star tackle, and Phil Fox, Wilson Teachers star, are assisting Littman.

Of the 50-odd candidates for the Roosevelt team, a number of lettermen are conspicuous, including Red Birch, tackle; Bernie MacDonald, center; Loyal Grimm, Dutch Kollmyer and Truman Lancaster, backfield men.

Arch McDonald Leaves For Series Assignment

Arch McDonald, Station WJSV sports commentator who broadcasts all of the Washington road games under the joint auspices of The Post and Peoples Drug Stores, left last night for New York, where he will attend the World Series beginning today. McDonald will be on the air as usual each evening at 6 p. m. over Station WJSV, giving his day-by-day impressions of the blue-ribbon classic of baseball.

Middleburg Horse Show Opens Today With Competition Keen

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Leesburg, Va., Sept. 29.—Middleburg, Va., Sept. 29.—Everything has been put in excellent shape for the thirteenth annual Middleburg Horse Show and races which will open at Glenwood, estate of D. C. Sands, Middleburg, tomorrow at 10 a. m., with the pony classes. A splendid program has been arranged for the two-day event, which promises to be interesting from start to finish. Both horse show and race events are well filled and competition promises to be keen in many of the numbers.

Following the four pony classes the scheduled numbers for tomorrow will be shown as follows: Thoroughbred brood mares, half-bred yearlings, half-bred 2-year-olds, thoroughbred yearlings, bantam class for hunters 15.2 and under, thoroughbred 3-year-old handicap jumpers, 3-year-old hunters, fault and out and ladies' hunters.

At the finish of the afternoon hunter classes, a flat race of about 6 furlongs will be called. This will be followed by a 2-mile steeplechase, which will close the day's events.

The class for the hunt teams, which carries the Silver Challenge Bowl presented by Mrs. William Mitchell in honor of Gen. Mitchell will be shown Thursday afternoon, just before the champion of the show receives the Middleburg Hunt Club Plate. Other classes scheduled for Thursday, the closing day, will be shown in the following order: Thoroughbred 2-year-old lightweight green hunters, 4-year-olds and under, heavy and middleweight green hunters, lightweight qualified hunters, middle and heavyweight qualified hunters, Corinthian class and thoroughbred hunters. The flat race on the second day will be one mile. This will be followed by the two-mile steeplechase which will close the sporting classic. The judges will be Beatty Brown, of Port Chester, N. Y., and Teddy Wahl, of Greenwich, Conn., hunter classes, and Mrs. Marion Dupont Scott, of Montpelier Station, Va., and Humphries Finney, of Annapolis, Md., breeding classes.

Police Boys Club Grid Loops Form

Police Boys Clubs are mapping out an active football season this year, including sponsorship of leagues for 85-pound, 135-pound and 150-pound teams. Phil Fox, Wilson Teachers athlete, will coach the No. 5 Precinct 150-pound eleven; Gene Davis, the three No. 4 Club teams, and Herman Bateler, the No. 11 Club. Leo Marcopolis also will lend a hand at No. 5.

The Police Clubs are sponsoring 12 fully equipped teams for every juvenile league up to the 150-pound class. The No. 5 Club is entering teams in leagues in the following classes: 85, 100, 115, 125, 135 and 150 pound; No. 4 in the 85, 100, 115 and 125 pound, and No. 11 in the 100 and 125 pound. The 115-pound and 125-pound class elevens of the No. 5 Club will enter the National City League.

EXTRA DRY RUM

(SIBONEY WHITE LABEL)

90 proof

● More and more our palate-wise drinkers are saying: "Make mine dry!" Dry Martinis. Dry Manhattans. Dry Sherry. Dry Champagne. There's more zest and delicacy in a fine dry liquor, they say.

So here is America's first Extra Dry rum—Siboney White Label! Siboney has been working on it for three long years. Lavished on it the life-long experience of Nemesio Alvaré, Cuba's great rum maker. Planned it as a master's masterpiece.

And now it has just been released. Siboney White Label (Extra Dry) is an absolutely natural rum. Nothing whatever is added to it. That's why it has such a rich, natural bouquet and flavor.

You will never forget your first Daiquiri or Rum Collins made with Siboney White Label (Extra Dry). But first try a taste of it straight. Once you've sampled its natural zestfulness, you'll never drink any other kind.

Siboney White Label (Extra Dry), like Siboney Gold Label, is made from finest Cuban materials but distilled in the U.S.A. It pays no import duty! Try it today.

Manufacturing Jobs, Pay Rolls Gain in August

Increase in Earnings Is Offset by Rise in Living Costs.

New York, Sept. 29.—A gain of 2.4 per cent in manufacturing activity, as measured by total man-hours worked, was noted in August as compared with July, according to the reports from manufacturers in 25 industries received by the National Industrial Conference Board.

The number of workers employed increased 0.3 per cent in August. Total pay-roll disbursements rose 2.1 per cent.

Average hourly earnings were 0.2 per cent lower in August than in July, declining from 61.7 cents to 61.6 cents.

Average weekly earnings were 1.8 per cent higher in August than in July. This resulted from an increase of 2.0 per cent in the average work-week, which rose from 39.2 hours in July to 40.0 hours in August.

Part of this increase in nominal weekly earnings, however, was offset by a rise in living costs. Real weekly earnings were 1.3 per cent higher in August than in July.

Since August, 1935, hourly earnings have increased 2.2 per cent; average hours of work, 7.0 per cent, and average weekly earnings, 9.8 per cent.

The cost of living has not risen to the same degree as have weekly money earnings, with the result that the purchasing power of weekly earnings was 5.8 per cent higher in August of this year than in August of last year.

Employment in manufacturing increased 7.6 per cent in August, 1936, over August, 1935. Total man-hours worked exceeded those of August, 1935, by 15.1 per cent, and pay-roll disbursements by 18.1 per cent.

Comparison with conditions in August, 1929, shows that average hourly earnings in August, 1936, were 4.4 per cent higher. Although weekly money earnings were 13.4 per cent below the August, 1929, level, real weekly earnings were 2.3 per cent higher and average hours worked per week were 17.2 per cent lower. There were 12.7 per cent fewer workers employed, total man-hours worked were 27.8 per cent lower, and total pay-roll disbursements were 24.5 per cent lower than in August, 1929.

Debenture Payment For Kreuger & Toll

New York, Sept. 29 (AP).—The Marine Midland Trust Co., trustee, announced today it will distribute $1,059,684 to holders of 5 per cent secured debentures of Kreuger & Toll on October 15. This will result in each holder of a $1,000 debenture receiving $22.50.

With this distribution a total of $3,209,051 will have been paid to the debenture holders.

3 Companies Vote Extra Dividends

New York, Sept. 29.—Directors of Holly Sugar Corporation declared today an extra dividend of 75 cents per share on the common stock in addition to the regular dividends of 50 cents per share on the common stock and of $1.75 per share on the preferred stock. All dividends are payable November 2 to stockholders of record October 15.

The declaration of the extra dividend of 75 cents per share, according to a statement issued by the company, was made in view of the existing Federal tax law and the directors said that there was no intention of setting any precedent by the declaration of this extra dividend.

Chicago, Sept. 29 (AP).—Stewart Warner Corporation directors voted today an extra dividend of 50 cents a share on the capital stock and the regular semi-annual payment of 25 cents. Both are payable December 1. An extra of 25 cents was paid last November 1.

The Gardner Denver Co. today declared an extra dividend of 50 cents and the regular quarterly dividend of 50 cents on the common stock, both payable October 20 to stock of record October 10. A similar extra was paid on the common stock the preceding quarter. The company also declared a regular quarterly of 75 cents on the $3 preferred stock, payable November 1 to stock of record October 20.

Printing Ink Increase.

New York, Sept. 29 (AP).—International Printing Ink Corporation today announced a quarterly dividend of 50 cents on the common stock, compared with 45 cents paid in the two previous quarters. A regular quarterly dividend of $1.50 on the preferred shares was also ordered. Both dividends are payable November 1 to stock of record October 15.

Transit Lines Plan to Spend $300,000,000

Survey Covers Five-Year Equipment Program in 548 Cities.

New York, Sept. 29.—Transit operating companies will spend $300,000,000 for new equipment in the next five years, according to a survey of transit equipment in 548 cities by Transit Journal, published today, which says that 26,000 new transit vehicles will be bought during this period. Of these, about 16,220 will be gas buses, 5,880 will be street cars, and 3,530 will be trolley buses. Orders will also be placed for at least 500 rapid transit cars.

Indications are that orders for 1936 alone will be the largest of any year in the entire history of the industry. New equipment is being ordered at a faster rate than the manufacturers can produce it, the survey shows. Current orders are about 20 per cent ahead of current deliveries. There has been a steady increase in riding, amounting to nearly 10 per cent for the country as a whole and to more than 25 per cent in some places.

Street Car Buying.

One of the outstanding facts developed by the survey is the revival of activity in street car buying. During the first seven months of the present year, orders have been placed for a total of 326 new street cars, with prospects of 500 for the full 12 months. For the five-year period, through 1941, the industry is planning to buy new street cars at the rate of over 1,100 units per year. This buying will be done largely in cities of over 500,000 population.

Another fact developed by the survey is the keen interest of operating companies in the trolley bus. This was shown mostly by companies in cities of intermediate size. Prior to 1936 the largest number of trolley buses bought in any one year was about 200. This year's purchases, however, will exceed 600 units, and for the ensuing five years they will average 700 a year.

Operating companies expect to buy nearly twice as many gas buses as street cars and trolley buses combined during the 1937-1941 period. Interest in this type of vehicle was shared by both the large and intermediate size cities.

Vanadium Corporation Cuts Capital Stock

New York, Sept. 29 (AP).—Stockholders of the Vanadium Corporation of America at a special meeting today approved a proposal to reduce the stated value of capital to $3,783,673 from $11,351,020.

The action was taken to eliminate profit and loss deficit amounting to $4,172,973, as of June 30 last. W. C. Keeley, Prescott S. Bush and Broderick Haskell, jr., have been elected directors.

The Market By Carlton A. Shively

A Special Correspondent.

Stocks Erratic in Less Active Trading; Government Bonds Yield; Dollar Higher.

New York, Sept. 29.—Slightly less active, the stock market maintained its price irregularity and steady undertone while watching for the next motion in the foreign exchange case. Sales volume was around 1,400,000 shares. Treasury obligations again were a shade easier. December wheat closed an eighth of a cent higher at 113½ cents a bushel.

Motor shares held their position as the strongest stock group, but they found prices which Wall Street calls resistance points. General Motors had its innings, and while Chrysler struggled along somewhat under yesterday's best price, General Motors rose a fraction to above 70. Well spoken of in brokers' letters and favorably mentioned to the board room clients, Studebaker asked for attention by its ticker tape performance. It reached a new high price, as did Nash. On the whole, the group did little more than to back and fill.

Steel issues were firm, but made no attempt to lead the market, for all the favorable news on them. Railroad issues were steady. Nickel Plate advanced two points to a new high price. Southern Railway recovered. Rail equipment gathered a little courage. Public utilities found inspiration in the strength of Consolidated Edison. Oils were firm, but had to be set down as a market disappointment, a position they have held all summer. Jersey looked up a bit and Shell climbed.

Wide Range.

Metal shares were mixed with slight price changes. Farm implements hardened. The amusement group found a speculative following on the change in weather to cooler. Columbia Pictures and the various classes of Paramount were good for some paper profits, gains of 1 to 3 points were shown in Artloom, Cluett, Commercial Credit, Crown Cork, Household Finance, International Paper preferred, Kinney preferred, Owens Glass and Thatcher Manufacturing. Losses in similar amounts were suffered by AGWI, Briggs & Stratton, General Cigar, International Silver preferred, Hudson Motors and General Realty. Auburn, Chicago Yellow Cab and Omnibus were active and strong.

Speculation on the possible market effects of the abandonment of the gold standard by France, Holland and Switzerland continued to exercise Wall Street, although on the surface the stock and bond markets were much the same as those of a week ago and of a month ago. Business in the foreign exchanges was quiet, partly because of the trading holidays in the countries that recently have gone off gold and partly because views on the future are so mixed and insecurely held.

Dollars Droop.

In general the dollar sagged a little. Its quoted price in terms of sterling and francs was under that of yesterday, but in gold terms the dollar was unchanged. So far, at least, no repatriation of foreign capital has commenced. Apparently all was quiet on the Russian front, and doubtless Washington would like to erase from the blackboard the record of its attempt to pose as a champion for the downtrodden pound sterling, and as a redoubtable antagonist of the Russian money changers, whom the Secretary of the Treasury heroically chased from the temple on Saturday.

Observers here still were disposed to take an optimistic view of the situation and to profess a belief in a better position for working out an international agreement on currency values based on gold, as well as to begin real progress in eliminating other barriers to the revival of trade. Nothing can be taken for certain, as it is doubtful if any binding promises have been given any county by any other in respect to support for currencies. For the moment attention is directed to France, where the political situation still is shaky enough to give concern.

Difficult Experiment.

Should any serious trouble develop in France the financial support of her allies might turn cautious. Just now the much heralded "agreements" on the part of Great Britain and the United States are calculated to ease tension, but this country, for instance, probably has made no hard and fast promises on the use of its stabilization fund. If it has bound itself it might later run into trouble in explaining to the home folks just why it needed to risk its two billion or so to hold up sterling and francs and, to put the matter more accurately, to push down dollars.

Neither sterling nor francs bought at current levels is likely to show any profit to the American taxpayer, but his loss on that score can be limited, whereas another cut in the dollar's so-called gold content might set in motion a terribly expensive train of events. The managed currency boys can look forward to a busy autumn and possibly a little trouble along toward examination time.

Business Recovery.

On the business side, the news continues to support the idea that industry is well equipped to move forward. The steel industry this week is expanding its operations to a new top for the depression. A new tide of extra dividend payments is beginning to roll in. The higher dividends are in part forced by the unsound tax law applying to undistributed corporation profits, but the market recognizes the fact that if the money were not earned it would not be divided with stockholders. The rising dividends are, perhaps, an over-dramatization of business recovery.

Banking Position.

Further expansion in commercial and miscellaneous loans was the feature of the condition figures of member banks in important cities in the week ended September 23. The increase was $17,000,000, again well distributed. Other forms of bank credit were changed only slightly in the period. Brokers' loans were down $28,000,000. There was a nominal increase in bank holdings of Government securities, although the New York banks disposed of $20,000,000, of which $12,000,000 went into Chicago bank portfolios. Member bank reserves increased $22,000,000 and cash in vault was $12,000,000 higher. An expansion of $89,00,000 in demand deposits of corporations and individuals was more than offset by a drop of $96,000,000 in domestic bank deposits. An interesting sidelight on international capital movements was descernible in an expansion of $16,000,000 in deposits of foreign banks with member banks here. Time deposits rose $16,000,000.

Mutual Benefit Marks Its 91st Year in Capital

Representatives Gather for Day of Sessions and Dinner

The Washington agency of the Mutual Benefit Life Insurance Co. gathered here today in an all-day session with home office officials and other Eastern representatives to observe the ninety-first anniversary of the company's representation in the Capital. The meetings, under the direction of H. Lawrence Choate, general agent in charge of Washington territory, will begin this morning at the Willard Hotel and will continue through a dinner in the evening at the Chevy Chase Club.

Present at the sessions are H. G. Kenagy, agency executive, and F. D. Haselton, field service manager, from the home office; members of the Washington agency and representatives from Baltimore, Williamsport, Pa., and Richmond.

Mr. Kenagy, who will be the principal speaker, was for many years associated with the Life Insurance Sales Research Bureau, which has a membership of 120 life insurance companies. He has written and edited several books on selling and business management, and his services as a speaker have been in demand by various organizations and groups of executives in many cities.

The Mutual Benefit has been continuously represented in the District since 1845, the year of the company's founding, when one J. C. Lewis became its representative. Mr. Choate, present general agent for the District and counties of Virginia, was appointed in 1925, coming to Washington from Chicago.

Wheat Breaks 2 Cents After Early Advance

Good Weather Reported for Winter Crop; Corn Higher.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Sept. 29.—Nearly 2 cents a bushel break in July wheat prices today more than overcame an earlier general advance of 1 to 1⅜ cents. Extreme weakness of July wheat resulted from speculative selling induced by favorable weather for the new domestic winter crop. Most of the United States winter wheat belt received additional rains today, and the new crop going into the ground is favored by unusually auspicious conditions.

Wheat closed unsettled at the same as yesterday's finish to 1¾ lower, December, 113⅝ to 113½; May, 111⅝ to 111¾; July 98¾ to 98⅞; corn, ⅛ to ⅝ advanced; December, 95⅛ to 95¼; May, 90 to 90⅛; July, 86½; oats, ⅜ off; December, 41¾, and rye ⅞ to 1½ down. In provisions, results were unchanged to 10 cents up.

TEXAS
First in size, first in agriculture, first in mineral wealth, and first in value of state-originated exports, Texas this year is celebrating 100 years of independence with the Centennial Exposition in Dallas. Texans are returning home from all parts of the world to celebrate the occasion. Fenner & Beane extends to residents of the State the services of its offices in 7 leading Texas cities for the prompt execution of orders in stocks, bonds and commodities.

Boston Wool Market.

Boston, Sept. 29 (AP) (U. S. Department of Agriculture).—Very little domestic wool was moving in the Boston market today. Dealers and manufacturers were inclined to mark time as they watched developments in the foreign exchange situation.
The recent decline in the pound sterling has stimulated the placing of some orders in Australia by American buyers to test the market, but as yet only very limited quantities have been reported to have been bought for this country.

On the Air Today

Fannie Brice and Nino Martini bridge the deep gulf between their respective talents and find themselves prominent in the air news. Each makes a first appearance of the season tonight.

Miss Brice replaces the Howard brothers as star of "Revue de Paree." The veteran comic's gain in this instance comes at the expense of Willie and Eugene's stage contract which takes the equally perennial entertainers off the Chicago stage, on which they have been appearing, to a road tour including some engagements somewhat off the beaten radio path.

Mr. Martini rejoins Andre Kostelanetz and his orchestra after a summer vacation in which Maestro Kostelanetz provided some of the best dance music these old ears have heard in many a long radio month. With Martini, Kostelanetz adds a new and unique mixed chorus developed, according to my information, after weeks of auditions and rehearsals.

The chorus will be used in part to provide proper backing for a number of unusual choral selections featuring Martini. Kostelanetz also promises for this season a number of popular ballads of many lands, particularly light compositions reflecting the folk music background of those nations.

The Friday night period will be maintained by the maestro as a better dance music period. Kay Thompson and the Rhythm Singers will be retained.

Miss Brice's show will be heard at 8 at WMAL; the Kostelanetz program at 9, at WJSV.

Other features today:

"F. P. A."—Franklin Pierce Adams, columnist, makes his first microphone appearance (in fact his first public speech of any kind) in "Magazine of the Air," WJSV, at 11 a. m.

John R. McCarl, former Comptroller General, is William Hard's guest speaker, WJSV, at 7.

Stoopnagle and Bud—Intended to burlesque their own scripts as their final show at "Town Hall Tonight"—but found it wouldn't be funny at all! Instead they will do a parody on "Gang Busters." WRC, at 9.

Newton D. Baker—Speaks on "Hospitals in War and Peace," WMAL, at 9:30.

* * * *

The "Community Sing" idea is undergoing a little remodeling as time goes on. The Homer Rodeheaver show is now including guest speakers. Tonight's is James Jemail, New York newspaper man. If the trend continues, the audience will be singing just now and then . . . A gentleman calls to advise that the evening programs conducted by "Cherio" a few seasons ago brought out his name and removed his cloak of anonymity. My error, my friend . . . The Spanish short-wave station in Madrid, EAQ, has released its schedule for next week—despite the pounding of the rebels at its door. The Spanish have a grim courage. The listing consists each day of "light music" and "Spanish lesson."

Today is World Series day. All four local stations will carry the opening game this afternoon—as well as WFMD, at Frederick, which received special permission of the Columbia network to tie in for the series . . . Arch McDonald is in New York for the series and will broadcast his nightly WJSV "sports review" from there.

* * * *

Tim and Irene go to the West Coast next week to begin auditions for a new program to take the air about November 1 with Don Wilson as master of ceremonies . . . Vaughn de Leath, the original radio sweetheart, has quit radio (although she says "only temporarily") to take charge of her new night club at Stamford, Conn., named "The Chimney Corner" . . . Phil Harris won the band assignment for the Jack Benny series beginning next Sunday night.

* * * *

The new Ethel Barrymore series begins October 7, replacing "Lavender and Old Lace," at WMAL, Wednesday nights.

Bringing You SAVINGS IN CAPITAL LETTERS

A BUGLE CALL TO ACTION! Washington prepares itself for fall—a season of vigor, of color, of hospitality, of happy home life! Timed to the rhythm of Washington we bring you Hecht Month. Hecht Month is a major contribution of this great institution to the city it serves. Each October we pour out before you a tremendous array of new things you need for yourself, for your home, for your family,—the new, the interesting the important things—at prices that save you concrete, substantial sums of money.

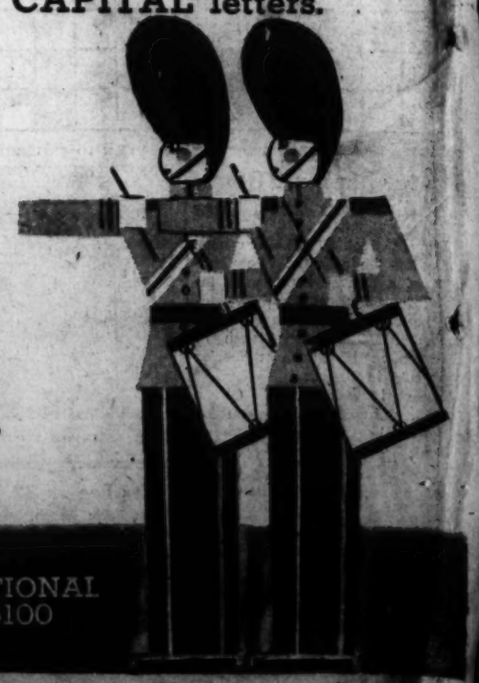

This year we bring you a bigger, a better, a more vital Hecht Month than ever. Every value offered to you in October is the result of weeks of sound planning, of close examination into the things you need and want and the prices you want to pay. Whether it's a new suit of clothes, a dozen bath towels, bath soap, new living room furniture, a coat for the baby, it is going to pay you—and pay you well—to buy it during Hecht Month. Enjoy a richer, fuller fall! Answer the bugle call to action. Share in the savings that Hecht Month brings—savings in CAPITAL letters.
